You, Too, Can Learn to Boss This Job

"Electrical Experts" Earn $12 to $30 a Day

What's Your Future?

To-day you are probably earning $3 or $4 or $5 a day—$18 to $30 a week. In the same six days as an "Electrical Expert" you can make from $70 to $200 a week, and make it easier—not work half so hard.

Why, then, work all your life for barely nothing when you can fit yourself for a REAL job?

Be an "Electrical Expert."

Even the ordinary electrician—the "screw-driver kind" — is making money — big money. But it's the "trained man"—the man who knows the whys and wherefores of Electricity—the "Electrical Expert"—who is picked out to "boss" ordinary electricians—to "boss" the big jobs—the jobs that pay Big Money.

I Will Train You at Home.

As Chief Engineer of the Chicago Engineering Works, I know exactly the kind of training you need to succeed as an "Electrical Expert"—and I will give you that training in your spare time at home.

Make $3,500 to $10,000 a Year.

You don't have to work for less. My simple, thorough and successful Home Study Course in Electricity offers every man, regardless of age, education and previous experience, the chance to become an Electrical Expert in a very short time—and Electrical Experts make $3,500 to $10,000 a year.

Earn as You Learn.

Don't let money matters worry you. My terms are easy—and with me you Earn as you Learn—and have money to spare. Some of my students are averaging as much as $25 a week doing spare time electrical work.

Money Back Guarantee.

Under bond, I absolutely guarantee to return every penny paid me if you are not entirely satisfied with my instruction. Back of me, in my guarantee stands the Chicago Engineering Works, Inc., a Million Dollar Institution.

FREE—Electrical Outfit—FREE.

After the first few lessons you start right in to WORK AT YOUR PROFESSION in a practical way. For this you need apparatus and I give it to you ABSOLUTELY FREE.

Start Now—TO-DAY.

Turn this OPPORTUNITY into real money. You can't fail if you start. Write to-day for my big FREE book "How to Become an Electrical Expert." Don't hesitate—WRITE ME TO-DAY.

CEDAR CHESTS

EST. 1871

Whether it is purchased as a gift—for the bride, for the sweetheart or for the graduate—or as a safety vault for the family woolens, the Cedar Chest must meet certain requirements.

To withstand a lifetime of use, it must be stanch; to be effective, it must be closely constructed and dust-proof; to be worthy of a place in the home, it must be attractive—pleasingly designed and well finished.

Roos Chests do more than meet these requirements. They were created to match the finest of furniture, not only in design and construction, but in finish. It is possible to procure a Roos Chest in almost any period design; in genuine mahogany and walnut, and with a cedar interior.

A Remarkable Record

THE CHICAGO ELEVATED RAILROADS have established a record for the safe transportation of passengers that stands without a parallel among transportation companies.

In 1916 the American Museum of Safety awarded the Chicago Elevated Railroads "Honorable Mention" for the work done in the way of accident prevention.

Nineteen committees working under the direction of a Safety Engineer and numbering 115 persons in the aggregate hold regular semi-monthly meetings to act on suggestions for the protection of the employes and the traveling public.

One hundred and twenty-five First Aid Stations are located along the elevated lines, so that minor injuries to employes may receive immediate attention.

First Aid teams, composed of employes who have received a course in medical training, are organized on each road to apply first aid methods in case of accident.

Safety first and always is the watchword of the Elevated management. Civic pride alone, aside from individual interest, should induce Elevated patrons to co-operate with the management in the prevention of accidents.

SOME REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD

UNDER THE

TORRENS SYSTEM

By JOSEPH F. HAAS, Registrar of Titles of Cook County

What is the Torrens System in Cook County? It is a system of registering the title of land, with a guarantee by the people of Cook County that the title as registered is correct.

It's the modern, up-to-date method of holding and transferring title to real estate.

BECAUSE

1. Cook County guarantees each Torrens title with three billion dollars of taxable assets.
2. The Indemnity Fund of over fifty thousand dollars insures the immediate cash payment of any damages sustained.
3. Protection is given owners against judgments rendered against people of the same or similar name.
4. Special protection is afforded against tax sales and tax deeds.
5. Owners are protected against fraudulent signatures on deeds or other instruments.
6. Adverse possession does not run against land registered under the Torrens System.
7. A Torrens Certificate of Title is conclusive evidence of good and valid title.
8. Defects in title are wiped out forever by initial registration.
9. Transfers may be made in one-third the time required under other systems.
10. The transfer fee is only $3.00 no matter what the value may be of the property transferred.
11. The Circuit Court of Cook County retains a continuing jurisdiction for the purpose of protecting the title to Torrens property.
12. No statute of limitations runs against the guarantee of a Torrens Certificate.

LOOK UNDER THE LID!

Tunnel Your Goods and Save Money

Look under the lid of Chicago's Loop—"the busiest square mile in the world"—and see what is going on forty feet below. The business traffic of the city is not all on the surface.

Busy Beavers

A veritable army of busy beavers are at work down under the Loop's lid—and many of them work both day and night. In the form of steel freight cars they are busily plowing their way over the 60-mile network of tunnel tracks constituting the transportation facilities of the Chicago Tunnel Company

Quietly, efficiently, rapidly and safely these tireless carriers haul 2,400 tons or more of freight daily from the freight terminals of the railroads to the city's warehouses and office buildings. They will carry for a customer a single package or a carload or a whole trainload. They carry as willingly a lady's hat as a ton of coal. And they help to beautify the city by being the silent arteries through which flows the debris of razed buildings, excavations and other unsightly impedimenta.

There are four Public Receiving stations, all conveniently reached from the Loop, and there are hundreds of connecting stations within the Loop itself.

This system for freight traffic keeps 6,000 or more trucks off the already congested Loop streets during every business day.

Save Time—Save Money

This method of transportation is a saving to the shipper, for the railroads literally "pay the freight." Save your money and your time. Tunnel your goods and pull down your overhead.

Giving telephone service to the people of Illinois is a big and complicated job. The Illinois Bell Telephone Company handles more than 4,000,000 local calls per day as well as more than 70,000 long distance calls. To give this service requires a force of 21,000 persons engaged in answering calls, maintaining the lines in working order and extending the system to meet the demands of business and domestic uses. The annual payroll of the Illinois Bell Telephone Company exceeds $24,000,000. The company owns and operates 875,000 telephones in its territory and connects with 350,000 telephones operated by smaller companies, which thereby obtain connection with the Bell long distance system, making a total of 1,225,000 telephones or one to every five persons.

Chicago alone has more than 625,000 telephones in use. This is more telephones than there are on the continents of Asia, Africa and South America taken together; more than there are in France, Italy, Spain, Greece, Portugal and Norway combined.

* * * *

If the calls made in Chicago in one day were formed into one continuous call, it would consume 6,250,000 minutes or twelve years. It is estimated that in Chicago the use of the telephone saves 30,000,000,000 minutes daily.

The company has within the limits of Chicago more than 2,000,000 miles of wire, sufficient to encompass the earth at the equator 76 times.

The company operates 229 central offices. It has 2,500,000 miles of wire in its state system, mostly in underground cables, which guard against delays caused by storms and other unforeseen happenings.

In the last ten years the growth has been three times that of the preceding thirty years and so tremendous is Chicago's expansion that the existing plant, in the opinion of engineers, must be doubled in the next ten years if the company maintains its present service for the city.

Chicago, with a population of slightly less than 3,000,000, has one telephone to every five persons. Paris, France, with approximately the same population, has one telephone to each twenty-four persons. London has one telephone to each twenty-three persons. Chicago has more telephones in proportion to population than any large city in the world.

The company has about 16,000 employees in Chicago, including 9,000 operators who handle the city and suburban calls, which vary from about 1,000 per hour after midnight to more than 260,000 per hour during the busy periods of the day. The total number of calls made in Chicago averages 2,750,000 daily. There are nearly 8,000 subscribers' private branch exchange switchboards in use, through which telephone service of the large business concerns of the city is handled. These concerns employ more than 10,000 operators.

A small army of experts is employed by the telephone company to keep the lines and equipment in good working condition. These experts are prepared at a moment's notice, night or day, to meet emergencies.

To facilitate the use of the telephone in Chicago, 1,300,000 directories are distributed annually. If placed end to end, they would reach from Chicago to Toledo, Ohio.

The first telephone was installed in Chicago in 1877, a year after Alexander Graham Bell exhibited his telephone at the Centennial Exposition and only three months after the first telephone had been constructed. The first telephone exchange was located on the top floor of the building at 11 South LaSalle Street and the wires were strung over the tops of buildings. On December 21, 1878, the Bell Telephone Company of Illinois was chartered with an authorized capital stock of $80,000. In January, 1881, the Chicago Telephone Company was incorporated with a capital of $500,000. The property of the American District Telegraph Company and the Bell Telephone Company of Illinois was bought and the two systems unified.

At the end of 1882 the company had 2,610 telephones in Chicago and 392 in the suburbs. For several years growth was slow and it was not until 1896 that the great period of expansion began. Since that time the growth has been very rapid.

Throughout its entire career the company has endeavored to give the highest possible quality of service to the public and to keep pace with the tremendous demands for service which the rapid growth of the city and state has produced. This policy will be adhered to throughout the years to come.

MOMENTOUS NEWS IN BOOKS

News is that which is new. The most important news in the world is often found in books—the news of ideas that affect the world's destiny.

Books advancing new ideas are being published continually. There are Einstein's theory of relativity and Freud's principles of psychanalysis, to cite two recent and important examples.

To keep pace with the new idea books—the important works of fiction, art, poetry, history and technology—would keep one ordinarily busy, allowing not much time for breadwinning, if one had to read all the new books one's self and sift the good from the worthless.

However, this necessity is happily discharged by the editors and reviewers of The Wednesday Book Page of The Chicago Daily News, whose pleasant duty it is to survey the whole world of books from week to week, and inform their readers as to just what books are of unusual importance or interest.

Read The Book Page regularly and you may be sure that you will not miss any important or worth-while book. Besides book news and book reviews, it contains delightful gossip about books and bookish people.

Many events of historic significance took place in the course of the year 1922 and information relating to them will be found in the pages of this, the thirty-ninth, issue of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book. In view of the completeness of the index, which begins below, it is not necessary to mention them in detail, but attention may be called to the fact that the several treaties adopted at the Washington limitation of armament conference are given in full. The same is true of the more important laws passed by congress, except the new tariff act, of which a full summary is presented. The constitution of the new Irish Free State is given verbatim, together with the treaty which made it possible. Several pages are devoted to information of value to the thousands who find diversion and profit in the use of the radio. The efforts to restore Europe to normalcy and to settle the grave questions of German reparations and inter-allied war debts through conferences at Cannes, Genoa and The Hague are set forth at some length. The statistical tables relating to agriculture, finance, banking, population, elections and numerous other subjects are as comprehensive as usual.

ALMANAC AND YEAR-BOOK FOR 1923

[Astronomical calculations for 1923 by B. Hart Wright, DeLand, Fla.]

All the calculations in this Almanac and Year-Book are based upon mean or clock time unless otherwise stated. The sun's rising and setting are for the upper limb, corrected for parallax and refraction; with the moon these are of an opposite nature and just balance each other. The figures given, therefore, are for the moon's center on a true horizon such as the ocean affords.

The calculations in each of the geographical divisions of each calendar page will apply with sufficient accuracy to all places in contiguous zones indicated by the heading of the divisions.

Daylight Saving—Advance one hour in May, June, July, August and September to convert into the "daylight saving time" where same is used locally.

ERAS OF TIME.

The Gregorian year 1923 corresponds to the following eras:

The latter part of the 147th and the beginning of the 148th years of the independence of the United States.

The year 1341-42 of the Mohammedan era; the year 1342 begins Aug. 13.

The year 2235 of the Grecian era.

The year 5683-84 of the Jewish era; the year 5684 begins at sunset Sept. 10.

The year 7432 of the Byzantine era, begins Sept. 1.

The year 2583 of the Japanese era.

The year 6636 of the Julian period, and Jan. 1 is the 2,423,421st day since the beginning of the Julian period.

CHRONOLOGICAL CYCLES.

Dominical or Sunday letter	G
Epact of moon's age, Jan. 1	13
Lunar cycle or golden number	5
Solar cycle	28
Roman indiction	6
Dyonysian period	252
Jewish lunar cycle	2
Julian period	6636

Explanation.

Dominical Letters—The first seven letters of the alphabet are used to show the days of the year on which Sunday falls. Thus in 1923 G, seventh of the Dominical letters, indicates that the seventh day of the year is Sunday, G being the seventh letter of the alphabet; two letters are used for leap years.

Epact—The moon's age on Jan. 1.

Golden Number—The year's place in the lunar cycle.

Solar Cycle—A period of 28 years, during which the days of the week occur on the same day of the month as during the previous cycle.

Lunar Cycle—A period of 19 years, during which the phases of the moon occur on the same day of the year as during the previous cycle.

Roman Indiction—A period of 15 years, used first by the Romans for taxing provinces.

Julian Period—This period begins when the indiction, solar cycle, and lunar cycle all begin together.

CIVIL AND ASTRONOMICAL DAY.

The civil day begins at midnight and comprises 24 hours, the hours being counted from 0 to 12 in two series, the first marked a. m. running from midnight to noon and the second marked p. m. running from noon to midnight.

The astronomical day begins at noon on the civil day of the same date, the 24 hours being counted from 0 to 24, running from noon of one day to noon of the next following day. Astronomical time as well as civil time may be either apparent or mean, the first being used mainly in connection with sundials, noon marks or meridians, to which the amount of sun fast or slow must be applied for conversion into clock time. For "summer time," May to September, inclusive, add 1 hour to all standard divisions.

The civil day begins twelve hours before the astronomical day; therefore the first half of the civil day coincides with the last half of the preceding astronomical day, and the last half of the civil day coincides with the first half of the astronomical day of the same day. Therefore the hours less than 12 of the astronomical day equal p. m. of the same civil day and those more than 12, after deducting 12, are a. m. of the next civil day.

Note—To ascertain any day of the week first look in the table for the year required and under the months are figures which refer to the corresponding figures at the head of the columns of days below. For example: To know on what day of the week July 4 was in the year 1895, in the table of years look for 1895, and in a parallel line, under July, is figure 1, which directs to column 1, in which it will be seen that July 4 falls on Thursday.

THE PLANETS.

Morning stars—Mercury, Feb. 20-25 and Oct. 10-15; Venus, until Sept. 10; Mars, after Aug. 8; Jupiter, until Feb. 7 and after Nov. 22; Saturn, until Jan. 11 and after Oct. 17.

Evening stars—Mercury, Jan. 10-15, Sept. 1-5 and Dec. 25-30; Venus, after Sept. 10; Mars until Aug. 8; Jupiter from Feb. 7 to Nov 22; Saturn, from Jan. 11 to Oct. 17.

Brightest or best seen—Mercury, within the time limits given above when an evening or morning star, and then only for a brief time about one hour and fifteen minutes before sunrise or at the same interval after sunset and near that point of the horizon where the sun will rise or set, when he may be seen shining with a steady dullish red light, quite unlike that of a first magnitude star or any other planet; Venus, at the first of the year; Mars, at the first and last of the year; Jupiter, May 1-10; Saturn, April 2-12; Uranus, Sept. 1-15, and Neptune, Feb. 1-15.

Invisible or very dim—Mercury, always except as noted above; Venus, July, August and October; Mars, June to September; Jupiter, November and December; Saturn, September to December; Uranus and Neptune, always.

All-night stars—Jupiter in May and Saturn in April.

ECLIPSES IN 1923.

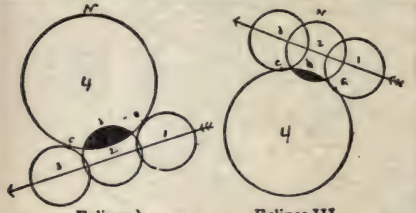
There will be four eclipses in 1923, as follows:

I. Partial of the moon March 2, on the moon's northern limb as shown in the annexed cut, where the arrow indicates the direction of the moon from west to east in passing through the earth's shadow.

The first contact or beginning will take place at a at 8:28 p. m.; middle or greatest eclipse at b at 9:32 p. m., when .37 of her diameter will be in the shadow, and the end or last contact at c at 10:36 p. m. in central standard time.

II. Annular of the sun March 16-17, visible in South Africa and South America.

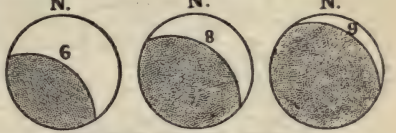
III. Partial of the moon Aug. 26. Size .17 of the entire diameter, as shown by the annexed cut at b. Beginning at a at 3:52



a. m., middle at b, 4:40 a. m., close to the time of the setting of the moon, central standard time.

The arrows indicate the direction and paths of the moon through the dark shadows (umbra) of the earth (4), 1 being the beginning, with the first point of contact at a, 2 the middle or greatest eclipse, and 3 the last point of contact at c.

IV. Total of the sun in the afternoon of Sept. 10. As shown by the maps annexed the total phase will be visible in southwestern California and northern Mexico. Times of beginning, middle or greatest size and end for all places in United States may be approximately known by inspection of annexed maps.



ECLIPSE OF SUN SEPT. 10.
Appearance of the sun with .6, .8 and .9 eclipsed. See chart C.

Examples: Savannah, Ga., begins 2:40 p. m. central time or 3:40 p. m. eastern time; ends 4:45 p. m. central time—5:45 p. m. eastern time; greatest size 7. The time of greatest eclipse may be found very nearly by ascertaining the duration of the eclipse, dividing it by two and adding to time of beginning, which in this instance is 4:42 p. m.

Examples of use of charts: Required the standard time of the beginning, middle or greatest eclipse, ending and size at: (1) New Orleans. By chart A the beginning takes place at 2:30, the end, by chart B, at 4:45, and midway between them is 3:38, the time of middle or greatest eclipse, which by chart C is .78, or about three-fourths of the southern portion of the sun. Similarly, Chicago 2:18, 3:19 and 4:20, size .64, and Salt Lake City 1:40, 2:55 and 4:10, size .80, and from this last example must be subtracted 1 hour for mountain time. Throughout the United States the eclipse will be upon the southern limb of the sun (see the illustrations). Thus

CHART A. BEGINNING OF TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE SUN SEPT. 10, 1923, IN CENTRAL STANDARD TIME.

(Subtract 1 hr. for mountain and 2 hrs. for Pacific time and add 1 hr. for eastern time.)

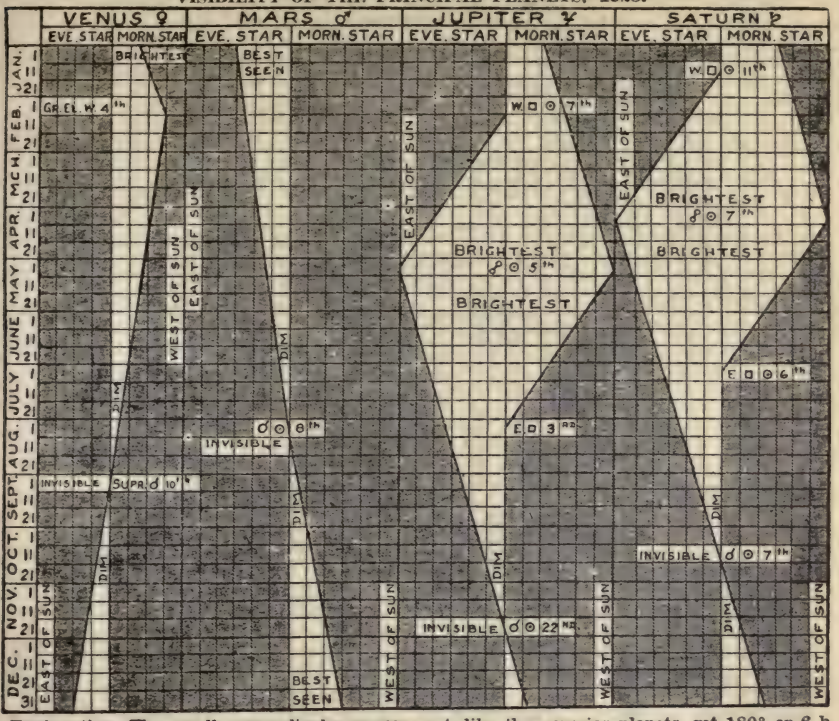
CHART B. ENDING OF TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE SUN SEPT. 10, 1923, IN CENTRAL STANDARD TIME.

CHART C. SIZE OF THE PARTIAL PHASES OF THE TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE SUN SEPT. 10, 1923.

any one having in a general way a knowledge of his geographical location can from these charts obtain the full approximate local data of this eclipse, always making the necessary addition or subtraction of 1 hour for any standard of time other than central, for which the charts are made.

New York city begins 3:36, ends 5:25, middle 4:30, to which must be added 1 hour for eastern time.

VISIBILITY OF THE PRINCIPAL PLANETS, 1923.



Explanation—The small perpendicular spaces represent 1 h. or 15° each and the distance from the central line of each division indicates the approximate distance of that planet from the sun, in time or space. Thus Venus will be 2 h. or 30° east of the sun Dec. 31, sets with the sun on Sept. 10 and will be 3 h. or 45° west of the sun Feb. 4. Being an inferior planet—inside the orbit of the earth—she can not, like the superior planets, get 180° or 6 h. from the sun, as do Jupiter and Saturn in April and May. At such time the superior planets will be at their brightest, rising at sunset and shining all night. A superior planet is considered a morning star from conjunction to western quadrature, when 90° west of the sun, when rising at midnight and passing the meridian at 6 a. m.

Note—To make use of the above table in connection with the chart of the heavens proceed as follows: Suppose the position of Venus for June 11 is desired. Right ascension for that date is III½ hours. Locate that point on the outer margin of the chart and upon connecting this point, by a straight edge, as a ruler or envelope edge, with the north star, the line will cross the "ecliptic circle" at a point nearly midway between the Pleiades and Hyades, where Venus may be found at that time, or close to Regulus in the Sickle of Leo about Sept. 1.

EXPLANATION OF THE SIGNS.

♈ Aries.	♌ Leo.	♐ Sagittarius.
♉ Taurus.	♍ Virgo.	♑ Capricornus
♊ Gemini.	♎ Libra.	♒ Aquarius.
♋ Cancer.	♏ Scorpio.	♓ Pisces.

The place indicated is for the constellation in which the planet named is situated on the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th and 5th Sundays of the month, in the order of the planets named. The sign is one constellation back—thus, ♈ is the first sign, but ♓ is the first constellation.

HUNTER'S AND HARVEST MOON.

The full moon nearest to Sept. 21 is popularly known as the "harvest moon." This is because the moon then rises for several consecutive evenings at nearly the same hour, giving an unusual number of moonlight evenings. This is the most noticeable in the higher latitudes and quite disappears at the equator. The "hunter's moon" is the first full moon following the harvest moon.

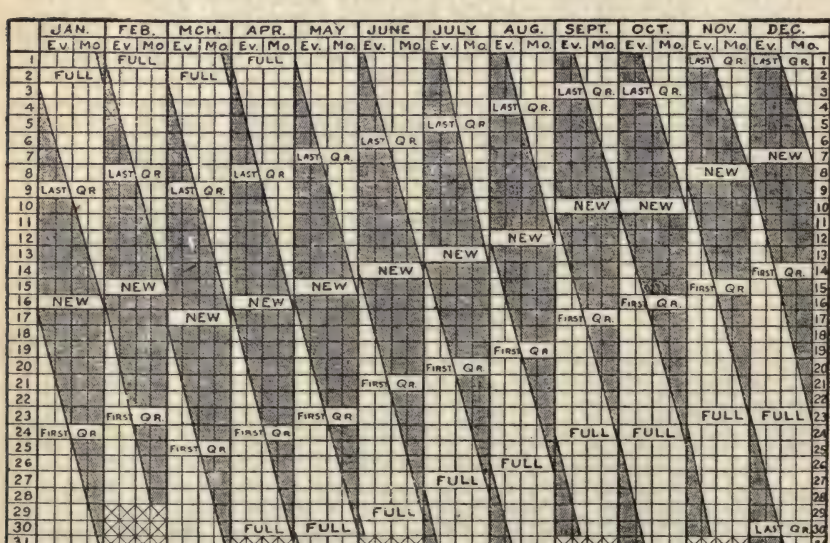
LIGHT AND DARK OF THE MOON IN 1923.



Explanation: The small perpendicular divisions are of 3 hours each, and the light portions show the relative amount and place or time of moonlight in the 12 hours from 6 p. m. to 6 a. m. Of course allowance should be made for the increase of daylight in summer and the decrease in winter. Thus in December the moon will shine only after midnight on the 1st, after 3 a. m. on the 4th, not at all on the 7th, 8th, until 9 p. m. on the 11th, until midnight of the 15th, all night on the 23d, after 9 p. m. on the 27th and after midnight of the 30th.

Explanation: By the absolute scale of magnitudes stars brighter than Aldebaran and Altair are indicated by fractional or negative quantities: thus Vega 0.2 and Sirius −1.4. As the magnitudes increase the brilliancy decreases, each increase of a unit being equal to a decrease of about two and one-half in brightness.

To ascertain when any star or constellation will be on the upper meridian add the number opposite in the column "For Meridian Passage" to the figures in the table on the previous page, "Sidereal Noon," taking note whether such figures be "Morn." or "Eve." If "Morn." and the sum is more than 12h. the result will be Eve. of same day: if "Eve." and the sum is more than 12h. the result will be Morn. of the next day. Having found the time of meridian passage, for the rising subtract and for the setting add the numbers opposite the star in the column headed "For Rising and Setting" and observe the directions as to Morn. and Eve. given for the meridian passage. Those marked ..... in the last columns are circumpolar. Stars having an asterisk (*) in the last columns are to be seen only in the far south and then when near the meridian, as the vapors of the horizon will prevent seeing them when they rise or set. To tell how high up from the nearest point of the horizon a star will be at its meridian passage, subtract the star's declination from 90° and if the result is less than the latitude of the place of the observer that star will neither rise nor set, but is circumpolar, and the difference between that result and the latitude shows the star's altitude above the north point of the horizon or below the southern horizon. Or (90°—dec.)—lat.=alt. or elevation of the star above the nearest point of the horizon at meridian passage for stars of a southern declination. Examples:

Sidereal noon, Oct. 30,	9:27 p. m.
Fomalhaut "In Merid." col.,	22:48
Subtract,	24:00
	8:15 p. m. of 31st, time of meridian passage.

Fomalhaut ris. & set. col. add 4:00 for lat. 40° N.
12:15 = 0:15 a. m. of Nov. 1, the time of setting.

Fomalhaut, dec. 30° S. 90° — 30° = 60°. — 40° = 20°, altitude of Fomalhaut in latitude 40° at its meridian passage. To measure celestial distances with the eye keep in mind that one-third of the distance from the zenith to the horizon is 30°. For smaller measurements use the belt of Orion, 3° long, or the sides of the square of Pegasus; the "pointers" in the "big dipper," which are nearly 5° apart —a convenient celestial yardstick because always to be seen. In the case of a star whose dec. is such as to bring it nearer to the zenith than to a horizon at meridian passage, it will be more convenient to use its zenith distance as a means of locating it. The difference between the latitude and dec. is this zenith distance. If the dec. is greater than the latitude then such distance is to be counted northward, otherwise southward from the zenith.

SIGNS AND CONSTELLATIONS OF THE ZODIAC.

Until recently it was taken for granted that the present relationship between signs and constellations of the zodiac was generally understood, as all astronomical textbooks mention their diagreement and explain the cause. The numerous letters of inquiry concerning differences between the data in this almanac and certain others show the necessity for this note of explanation. (Both sign and constellation now given.)

Thousands of years ago when the zodiac, that belt of the heavens about 16° in width within which move the moon and planets, was formed and divided into twelve parts or seasons called signs, each containing certain star groups called constellations, each was given the name of an object or animal which never did bear any relationship to the configuration of the stars in that group or division, but which did or is supposed to have reference to certain astronomical or other facts. Thus Libra ♎, the scales or balance, comes at the autumnal equinox when there is an equilibrium or balance between the length of day and night the world over. Aquarius ♒, the water bearer, whose sign is the Egyptian sign for running water, comes at the season of greatest rains in Egypt, and so on.

Since the time when these divisions were made and named, owing to the precession of the equinoxes, resulting from the differing polar and equatorial diameters of the earth, the signs have moved back west nearly a whole division or constellation and where ♈ was the first, ♓ now is. Hence, though the sun now enters the sign ♈ March 20, it is a month later when he enters the constellation ♈. It must be apparent, therefore, that any supposed influence or relationship which early astrologers attributed to the position of the sun, moon or planets when in certain of these divisions can no longer exist, as the sign now only represents that space or division of the zodiac where the controlling constellation was 2,000 or more years ago, but is not now. Nevertheless, some almanacs still give the signs for the moon's place, which is very misleading to those who attempt to follow her in her course among the stars. Hence, this almanac gives both and discards the ancient picture of the disemboweled man as a relic of the age of superstition. The sign is retained for sun's place in connection with the seasons and sun's path through the zodiac each month because of its relationship to the equinoxes and solstices.

FACTS ABOUT THE SUN AND PLANETS.

The sun's surface is 12,000 and its volume 1,300,000 times that of the earth, but the mass is only 332,000 times as great and its density about one-quarter that of the earth. The force of gravity at the surface of the sun is twenty-seven times greater than that at the surface of the earth. The sun rotates on its axis once in 25.3 days at the equator, but the time is longer in the higher latitudes, from which fact it is presumed that the sun is not solid, at least as to its surface.

THE EARTH AND THE MOON.

Earth—The equatorial diameter of the earth is 7,926.5 miles and the polar diameter 7,899.5 miles; equatorial circumference, 25,000. The linear velocity of the rotation of the earth on its axis at the equator is 24,840 miles a day, or 1,440 feet a second; its velocity in its orbit around the sun is approximately nineteen miles a second, the length of the orbit being about 560,000,000 miles. The superficial area of the earth, according to Encke, the astronomer, is 197,108,580 square miles, of which two-thirds is water and one-third land. The planetary mass is about 256,000,000 cubic miles.

Moon—The moon has a diameter of 2,162 miles, a circumference of about 6,800 miles and a surface area of 14,685,000 square miles. Her mean distance from the earth is 238,840 miles. The volume of the moon is about 1-49th that of the earth and the density about 3% that of water. The time from new moon to new moon is 29 days 12 hours 44.05 minutes. The moon has no atmosphere and no water and is a dead world.

Light travels at the rate of 186,300 miles per second. It requires 8 minutes and 8 seconds for light to come from the sun to the earth.

STORY OF OUR WORLD FAMILY FOR 1923.

THE SUN—Though the ruler of our family the sun is a mere pigmy among other suns, as recently shown by a device for measuring the size of bright stars or suns, as mentioned in our story for 1922. This revelation of the wonderful magnitude of some of the twinkling stars, and the also accepted and verified theory of the materiality of light as shown by the deflection of star rays by the gravitational action of the sun, and the Einstein theory of relativity still hold first place in scientific discussions. By the last, time and space are limited and things are at rest or in motion only relatively.

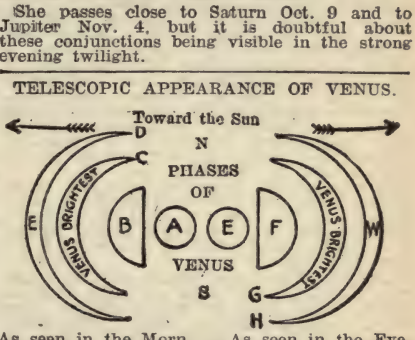
The total eclipse of the sun (see eclipses) of Sept. 10 will afford a most excellent opportunity to again verify the methods already perfected by which the deflection of star light by the sun may be observed in the clear skies of southern California, northern Mexico and Central America. These observations will confirm or disprove the results of the recently discovered method of screening out the sun's light for the same purpose.

MERCURY — On the occasions mentioned under "Planets Brightest" watch for Mercury about one hour and fifteen minutes before sunrise when a morning star and about the same time after sunset when an evening star and always near that point of the horizon where the sun rises or sets, and as no other planets or bright stars will be near him there at these times no mistake need be made.

VENUS—During the first four months of the year Venus will be very attractive as morning star in eastern Libra, rising about 4 o'clock. At the first of the year she will show the large crescent phase as in C in the annexed cut. She enters Scorpio Jan. 4 and on the 12th will be in conjunction with the noted red star Antares, 9 degrees south of her. Jan. 13 she will be occulted by the moon; the identical phases of the moon and Venus will always interest the amateur telescopic observer, especially as both will be in the field of a low power glass. Thus early risers will see a very pretty grouping of celestial objects from 4 a. m. to light. Feb. 4 she will attain her greatest angular distance west of the sun—47°, as shown in the chart of the planets, and enters Sagittarius Feb. 7, passing just north of the "milkmaid's dipper" (upside down in the milky way) the last of the month; enters Capricornus March 10 and Aquarius April 1 and on April 14 only one-third of one degree south of Uranus. May 1 she crosses the prime meridian of the heavens and enters the constellation Pisces (sign Aries), when the great square of Pegasus will be about 10 degrees north of her; enters Aries June 1 and on the 11th will be just north of the Pleiades or seven stars in Taurus; 4 degrees north of Aldebaran June 23; 6 degrees south of El Nath July 3 and in line with that star and Capella 11 degrees farther north; 16 degrees north of the giant Betelgeuse July 7-8; enters Gemini July 10; 6 degrees south of Pollux July 28 and quite dim, rising about 3:40 a. m. During August she will be invisible, passing to the east of the sun Sept. 10, becoming an evening star. She will be coming into fair visibility when on Oct. 8 she passes 3 degrees north of Spica; enters Libra Oct. 14 and Oct. 17-18 will be 31 degrees south of Arcturus; 45 minutes south of Jupiter Nov. 4, enters Scorpio Nov. 10, setting at 5:30 p. m. Four degrees north of Antares again Nov. 14, completing a cycle of the heavens since her conjunction with this star Jan. 12; enters Sagittarius Dec. 2, and on the 8th to 14th passes along north of the "milkmaid's dipper," setting about 6 p. m.; Dec. 21, 30 degrees south of Altair in the Eagle, entering Capricornus the last of the year, setting at 6:45 p. m. She will be in conjunction with the moon on the following dates: Jan. 13 (occulted), Feb. 11, 2 degrees south, March 13, 2 degrees 47 minutes south, April 12, 1 degree 43 minutes south, May 13 (occulted), June 12, 3 degrees north; omitting here such as take place when she is very dim or invisible, the remaining one is Dec. 9, 5 degrees south.

She passes close to Saturn Oct. 9 and to Jupiter Nov. 4, but it is doubtful about these conjunctions being visible in the strong evening twilight.

TELESCOPIC APPEARANCE OF VENUS.



As seen in the Morn. West of Sun. As seen in the Eve. East of Sun.

EXPLANATION:

A—Fifteen days before superior conjunction with the sun, Aug. 25, 1923.

B—At greatest elongation west of the sun about February, 1923.

C—When brightest as a morning star, Jan. 1-5, 1923.

D—Just after inferior conjunction with the sun, Dec. 1, 1922.

E—Fifteen days after superior conjunction with the sun, Sept. 25, 1923.

F—At greatest elongation east of the sun, about Sept. 15, 1922.

G—When brightest as an evening star, not in 1923.

H—Just before inferior conjunction with the sun, Nov. 20, 1922.

MARS—As shown by the chart "Visibility of the Principal Planets" Mars will not attain his maximum degree of brilliancy within the year, in fact will not even be very bright, but will be best seen at the beginning and end of the year as an evening and morning star respectively, being in conjunction with the sun Aug. 8, when he passes from the east to the west of the sun. For some weeks before and after that time he will be invisible and dim for a considerable period.

At the beginning of the year he will be in the constellation Aquarius between the Y and Markab, the bright star in the southwest corner of the square of Pegasus; crosses into Pisces Feb. 1; enters Aries March 10, close to the Pleiades April 11 and about 5 degrees north of Aldebaran May 1, when quite near the sun and consequently dim in the evening twilight. He will not be easily seen again until September when in Leo; enters Virgo Oct. 20 and passes Spica, 20 degrees to the south, Sept. 14; 1½ degrees south of Saturn Dec. 2; enters Libra Dec. 10, in which constellation he will still be at the end of the year, rising at 3:30 a. m.

He will be occulted by the moon Jan. 22, but the event will be invisible in northern latitudes; other conjunctions or near approaches to the moon are: Feb. 21, March 21, April 19, May 18, Oct. 8, Nov. 6 and Dec. 2.

JUPITER—At the first of the year Jupiter will be a morning star in Libra, rising about 3 a. m. He will become an evening star Feb. 7, rapidly increasing in brilliancy for three months, reaching his maximum in May as an all night star; remains an evening star until Nov. 22 when in conjunction with the sun and he then passes to the west of the sun, becoming a morning star again, but will be invisible or very dim the remainder of the year, being only ¾ of a degree north of Venus Nov. 14.

It is quite possible that this, the giant of our family, has acquired a new member of his retinue of captured comets in the Pons-Winneck comet which was scheduled to either collide with the earth or hit us with its tail, yielding star showers or a storm of meteors, but which failed to come up to schedule and is apparently lost.

His conjunctions with the moon will be as follows: Jan. 11, Feb. 8, March 7, April 3, May 1 and 28, June 24, July 21, Aug. 18, Sept. 14, Oct. 12, Nov. 9 and Dec. 7, in all of which he will be from 3 degrees to 5 degrees south of the moon.

SATURN—The ringed planet still maintains close companionship with his giant brother, Jupiter, being about 30 degrees farther west and 10 degrees farther north. The more northern declination throws him in the path of the moon, which will occult him or pass between the earth and Saturn at each of her revolutions as long as he is visible, or until October, when he will pass to the west of the sun on the 17th and therefore become a morning star, rising about 2 a. m. at the end of the year, being always in the constellation Virgo, and 4 degrees north of Spica Sept. 28 and a close companion to that sun for the entire year and 1½ degrees north of Mars Dec. 2.

The occultations mentioned will not be visible here, but at each of the conjunctions he will be very close to the moon when they are visible on the following dates: Jan. 9, Feb. 6, March 5, April 1 and 29, May 26, June 22, July 20, Aug. 16 and Sept. 12.

His rings are slowly coming into better position for visibility, the earth being from 12 degrees to 16 degrees north of their illuminated sides. They were invisible in 1921 when edgewise to the earth and will not be easily visible again until 1925 or 1926 or at their best in 1928.

URANUS—Venus will be very close (½ degree) to and south of Uranus April 14, when small glasses may find him, though far from his brightest. He will be occulted by the moon at each lunation after April. These which occur on the following dates will be the most favorable for seeing him with slight optical aid: May 10, June 6, July 3, Nov. 17 and Dec. 14. In each case Uranus will be close to and south of the moon. He will be at his brightest in September so that either the July or November date will be the most favorable.

NEPTUNE—Always invisible without the aid of good glasses; will be most favorably located in February.

SUN SPOTS, NORTHERN LIGHTS AND THE WEATHER.

The northern hemisphere was favored with one of the greatest displays of northern lights or Aurora Borealis in recent times on March 22, 1921. Newspaper prints were read by its light and the wonderful and rapidly shifting coruscations and cracking sounds were awe-inspiring, filling those ignorant of its true nature with fear.

The old belief that these displays portend great and widespread changes in terrestrial meteorological conditions seems to have been verified in this instance, as in many others, as there was a marked shifting of storm centers and corresponding changes in their general movements, rainfall and temperature.

It is quite possible and more than probable in the light of the additional facts herewith mentioned that similar and greater epochs in our earth history may have brought about the changes which transformed the once fertile, well watered and inhabited desert of Sahara into its present state and also changed the once tropical arctic regions into their present frigidity and coincidentally given other parts of the world their vast forest areas.

Solar electrical outbursts are responsible for these phenomena, as proved by the coincidence of the maxima of sun-spots and great auroral displays for the last century. It has been also shown that the growth of vegetation is increased under artificial electrification and that a maximum growth results during periods of time coinciding with the sun-spot maxima.

The electrical character of these auroral displays is proved by the fact that at such times all electrical machinery is put out of commission and dispatches over long distances have been sent without the aid of batteries. This and the cracking sounds and actual measurements show nearness of the forces within our atmosphere limit, and therefore the possibility of making solar conditions, when better understood, the basis of a more perfect and long range system of weather forecasting.

TIME AND STANDARDS OF TIME.

Various kinds of time are in use in this country:

1. Astronomical Time or Mean Solar Time—This is reckoned from noon through the twenty-four hours of the day and is used mainly by astronomical observatories and in official astronomical publications. It is the legal time of the dominion of Canada, though "standard" and "mean" time are in general use there as in this country.

2. Mean Local Time—This is the kind that was in almost universal use prior to the introduction of standard time. This time was based upon the time when the mean sun crosses the meridian, and the day begins at midnight. When divided into civil divisions—years, months, weeks, days, etc.—it is sometimes called civil time.

Owing to the eccentricity of the earth's orbit and the inclination of the equator to the ecliptic, the apparent motion of the sun is retarded or accelerated according to the earth's place in its orbit. Hence, to take the actual sun as a guide would necessitate years, days and their subdivisions of unequal length. Therefore an imaginary or "mean sun" was invented. The difference between apparent and mean time is called the "equation of time" and may amount to a quarter of an hour in twenty-four hours. It is the difference between the figures in "Sun at noon mark" column in calendar and twelve hours. The figures on a correct sun dial give the apparent time.

3. Standard Time—For the convenience of the railroads and business in general a standard of time was established by mutual agreement in 1883 and by this calculation trains were run and local time was regulated. By this system the United States, extending from 65° to 125° west longitude, was divided into four time sections, each of 15° of longitude, exactly equivalent to one hour (7½° or 30m. on each side of a meridian), commencing with the 75th meridian. The first or eastern section then included all territory between the Atlantic coast and an irregular line drawn from Buffalo to Savannah, Ga., the latter city being its southernmost point. The second or central section included all the territory between this eastern line and another irregular line extending from Bismarck, N. D., to the mouth of the Rio Grande. The third or mountain section included all the territory between the last named line and nearly the western borders of Idaho, Nevada and Arizona. The fourth or Pacific section included all the territory of the United States between the boundary of the mountain section and the Pacific coast. Inside of each of these sections standard time was uniform and the time of each section differed from that next to it by exactly one hour.

TIME ZONES ESTABLISHED IN 1918.

In March, 1918, the congress of the United States, in passing the "daylight saving" law, divided the territory of continental United States into five zones. The standard time of the first four zones was based on the same degrees of longitude as under the old railroad agreement. The fifth zone established included only Alaska, and its standard time was based on the 150th degree of longitude. In August, 1919, the section of the law providing for "daylight saving" was repealed, but the part giving the interstate commerce commission power to fix the limits of the time zones was left intact.

STANDARD TIME ZONES AS FIXED BY INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

The new time zones as defined by the interstate commerce commission became effective Jan. 1, 1919. They have been slightly modified since then and are subject to further modifications from time to time. Standard time by law governs the movements of railroads and other common carriers engaged in interstate commerce. In all statutes, orders, rules and regulations relating to the time of performance of any act by any officer or department of the United States, whether in the legislative, executive or judicial branch of the government, or relating to the time within which any rights shall accrue or determine, or within which any act shall or shall not be performed by any person subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, it shall be understood and intended that the time shall be the United States standard time of the zone within which the act is to be performed.

EASTERN-CENTRAL BOUNDARY LINE.

The boundary line between the eastern and central time zones as fixed by the commission runs from east of Port Huron, Mich., along the international boundary line through the St. Clair river, Lake St. Clair, Detroit river and then runs in a southerly direction to Sandusky, Bellevue, Monroeville, Willard, Shelby Junction, Mansfield and Columbus, O.; Huntington, Kenova and Williamson, W. Va.; Duncannon, Va.; Bristol, Va.-Tenn.; Telford, Tenn.; Asheville and Franklin, N. C.; Atlanta, McDonough, Macon, Perry, Americus, Albany and Thomasville, Ga.; the north boundary of Florida to River Junction and the Apalachicola river to the Gulf of Mexico.

The following named municipalities located upon the boundary line between the eastern and central time zones are considered as within the United States standard eastern zone: Fremont, Clyde, Bellevue, Monroeville, Willard, Shelby, Shelby Junction, Galion, Lancaster, Dundas, and Gallipolis, O.; Duncannon, Va.; Bristol, Va.-Tenn.; Asheville and Franklin, N. C.; points on Southern railway, McDonough, Ga., to Macon, Ga.; Perry, Albany and Thomasville, Ga.; Apalachicola, Fla.

All other municipalities located upon the boundary line between the eastern and central time zones not specifically named are considered as within the United States standard central time zone.

CENTRAL-MOUNTAIN BOUNDARY LINE.

Between central and mountain time the line begins at the Canadian boundary, Portal, N. D., running through Minot and Goodall, N. D.; and following the Missouri river to Pierre, S. D., then through Murdo Mackenzie, S. D.; Long Pine, North Platte, McCook and Republican Junction, Neb.; Phillipsburg, Plainville, Ellis, Dodge City and Liberal, Kas.; along northern Oklahoma boundary to New Mexico; along eastern boundary to southeastern corner of New Mexico, and thence along the southern boundary of that state to the Rio Grande at El Paso, Tex.

The following named municipalities located upon the boundary line between the central and mountain time zones are considered as within the United States standard central time zone: Portal, Flaxton and Minot, N. D.; Murdo Mackenzie, S. D.; Phillipsburg, Stockton, Plainville, Ellis and Liberal, Kas.; El Paso, Tex.

All other municipalities located upon the boundary line between the central and mountain time zones not specifically named are considered as within United States standard mountain time zone.

MOUNTAIN-PACIFIC BOUNDARY LINE.

Between mountain and Pacific time zones the line is fixed following the western boundary of Montana to meridian 114 west and then south and east to Pocatello, Idaho, and the Oregon Short Line to Ogden and Salt Lake City, Utah; thence the Los Angeles & Salt Lake railroad and the west and south boundaries to the 113th meridian; thence to Seligman and Parker, Ariz., and along the Colorado river to the Mexican boundary.

All municipalities on the boundary between mountain and Pacific time zones will use standard mountain time.

All of Alaska is within a single time zone.

TABLE OF TIME CORRECTIONS.

It is obvious that to express the time of rising and setting of the sun and moon in standard time would limit the usefulness of such data to the single point or place for which they were computed, while in mean time it is practically correct for places as widely separated as the width of the continent. In the calendar pages of the almanacs the rising and setting of the sun and moon are given in mean local time and to obtain the standard time of these and other astronomical events at any given place it is necessary to subtract or add a certain number of minutes according to the distance the place in question is east or west of the meridian, the time of which governs the zone in which the place is located. Thus in Chicago, which is approximately two and a half degrees east of the 90th meridian, which governs the time of the central zone, the sun and moon rise and set about ten minutes earlier than the time shown in the almanacs; in other words, ten minutes must be subtracted to get the actual standard time as shown by the clock.

The corrections to be applied to mean or clock time for conversion are shown in the following table. The abbreviations are E. for eastern, C. for central, M. for mountain and P. for Pacific time. Add or subtract as indicated by the sign — (minus) or + (plus):

Note—The place where "the day begins" or where dates are changed by navigators is at or near the 180th degree of longitude. Here an irregular line has been drawn from north to south which is called the "international date line." It is not straight because in case it crossed an island it would have different dates on each side of the line. The date line was located in the mid-Pacific by general agreement because it would cause the least confusion and because it was twelve hours from Greenwich.

THE SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION IN WASHINGTON.

The Smithsonian institution was established by statute in 1846, under the terms of the will of James Smithson, who bequeathed his fortune in 1826 to the United States for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge among men." From the income of the fund a building, known as the Smithsonian building, was erected in Washington, D. C., on land given by the United States. The institution is legally an establishment having as its members the president and vice-president of the United States, the chief justice and the president's cabinet. It is governed by a board of regents consisting of the vice-president, the chief justice, three members of the United States senate, three members of the house of representatives and six citizens appointed by joint resolution of congress. It is under the immediate direction of the secretary of the Smithsonian institution, who is the executive officer of the board and the director of the institution's activities. The institution aids investigators by making grants for research and exploration, providing for lectures, initiating scientific projects and publishing scientific papers. It has administrative charge of the national museum, the national gallery of art, the international exchange service, the national zoological park, the astrophysical observatory and the regional bureau for the international catalogue of scientific literature. The institution's original endowment of $541,000 has been increased by gifts and accumulated interest. The secretary of the institution is Charles D. Walcott.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY BRIDGE.

The Francis Scott Key bridge, completed in 1922, at a total cost of $2,100,000, is a fine concrete structure over the Potomac river between Georgetown, D. C., and Russell, Va. Its length with approaches is 2,700 feet. The name was given by Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, as the old Francis Scott Key mansion once stood near the Georgetown end of the structure. It is more generally known as the Georgetown bridge.

WEATHER FORECASTS AND SIGNALS.

The operations of the weather bureau of the department of agriculture are based on observations of the weather taken at about 200 observatories throughout the United States at the same moment of time and telegraphed daily to Washington, D. C., and to other important cities. These observations, comprising barometric pressure, temperature, precipitation, winds and clouds, are entered upon outline charts of the United States by means of symbols, forming the "daily weather map," from which the forecasts are made. These forecasts are issued every day for every state in the union, and whenever necessary special warnings are sent out of storms, frosts, cold waves, heavy snows and floods. In addition to the main office in Washington there are subordinate forecast centers in Chicago, New Orleans, Denver, San Francisco and Portland, Ore. Weather forecasts for a week in advance are now sent out from Washington.

The forecasts are first telegraphed to the principal distributing points, whence they are further disseminated by telegraph, telephone and through the mail by means of forecast cards, rural free delivery slips and newspapers.

The pennant above the flag indicates that the wind is expected to blow from the northerly quadrants; below, from southerly quadrants.

By night a red light indicates easterly winds and a white light above a red light westerly winds.

Two red flags, with black centers, displayed one above the other, indicate the expected approach of tropical hurricanes, and also of those extremely severe and dangerous storms which occasionally move across the lakes and northern Atlantic coast. Hurricane warnings are not displayed at night.

FAST RAILROAD RUNS.

Eastbound express train No. 4, of the New York Central, on Sunday, May 14, 1919, being more than an hour behind time, traversed the division from Elkhart, Ind., to Toledo, O., 133.01 miles, in 1 hour 54 minutes, or at the rate of 70 miles an hour. From Millersburg, Ind., eighteen miles east of Elkhart, to Nasby tower, about four miles short of Toledo, a distance of 111.31 miles, the time was 1 hour 27 minutes, equal to 76.76 miles an hour.

The train consisted of seven steel cars, weighing about 940,900 lbs.

Equally good time was made over this division, westbound, by the Twentieth Century limited, on May 25, 1903, but that train had only four cars. On June 8, 1905, a train of the Pennsylvania lines, western division, No. 18, eastbound, second section, three cars, was run fifty miles at 79 miles an hour; 100 miles at 77.2 miles an hour; and 200 miles, including two stops, at 71.3 miles an hour. On Oct. 24 of the same year a Pennsylvania special train of four cars, westbound, weighing 260 tons, was run from Crestline, O., to Clarke Junction, Ind., 257.4 miles, at 74.55 miles an hour. In this run a distance of 131 miles was covered at 77.81 miles an hour.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

September 17, 1787.

PREAMBLE. We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America:

ARTICLE I.

Section I. All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a congress of the United States, which shall consist of a senate and house of representatives.

Sec. II. 1. The house of representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several states, and the electors in each state shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislature.

2. No person shall be a representative who shall not have attained to the age of 25 years and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state in which he shall be chosen.

3. Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states which may be included within this union, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons. The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of representatives shall not exceed one for every 30,000, but each state shall have at least one representative, and until such enumeration shall be made the state of New Hampshire shall be entitled to choose three; Massachusetts, eight; Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, one; Connecticut, five; New York, six; New Jersey, four; Pennsylvania, eight; Delaware, one; Maryland, six; Virginia, ten; North Carolina, five; South Carolina, five, and Georgia, three.

4. When vacancies happen in the representation from any state the executive authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

5. The house of representatives shall choose their speaker and other officers and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

Sec. III. 1. The senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each state, chosen by the legislature thereof, for six years, and each senator shall have one vote.

2. Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election they shall be divided, as equally as may be, into three classes. The seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; of the second class, at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year, and if vacancies happen by resignation or otherwise, during the recess of the legislature of any state, the executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

3. No person shall be a senator who shall not have attained the age of 30 years and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state for which he shall be chosen.

4. The vice-president of the United States shall be president of the senate, but shall have no vote unless they be equally divided.

5. The senate shall choose their other officers and also a president pro tempore in the absence of the vice-president or when he shall exercise the office of president of the United States.

6. The senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the president of the United States is tried the chief justice shall preside, and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

7. Judgment, in cases of impeachment, shall not extend further than to removal from office and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States, but the party convicted shall, nevertheless, be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment and punishment according to law.

Sec. IV. 1. The times, places and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof, but the congress may at any time, by law, make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing senators.

2. The congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall, by law, appoint a different day.

Sec. V. 1. Each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

2. Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

3. Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may, in their judgment, require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house, on any question, shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

4. Neither house, during the session of congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

Sec. VI. 1. The senators and representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law and paid out of the treasury of the United States. They shall, in all cases, except treason, felony and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective houses and in going to or returning from the same, and for any speech or debate in either house they shall not be questioned in any other place.

2. No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased, during such time, and no person holding any office under the United States shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office.

Sec. VII. 1. All bills for raising a revenue shall originate in the house of representatives, but the senate may propose or concur with amendments, as on other bills.

2. Every bill which shall have passed the house of representatives and the senate shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the president of the United States; if he approve, he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that house it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the president within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the congress, by their adjournment, prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

3. Every order, resolution or vote to which the concurrence of the senate and house of representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the president of the United States, and before the same shall take effect shall be approved by him, or, being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the senate and house of representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in case of a bill.

Sec. VIII. The congress shall have power—

1. To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States, but all duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States.

2. To borrow money on the credit of the United States.

3. To regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states and with the Indian tribes.

4. To establish a uniform rule of naturalization and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States.

5. To coin money, regulate the value thereof and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures.

6. To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States.

7. To establish postoffices and postroads.

8. To promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries.

9. To constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme court. To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas and offenses against the law of nations.

10. To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal and make rules concerning captures on land and water.

11. To raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years.

12. To provide and maintain a navy.

13. To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces.

14. To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions.

15. To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the states respectively the appointment of the officers and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by congress.

16. To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular states and the acceptance of congress, become the seat of government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased, by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards and all other needful buildings; and,

17. To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested by this constitution in the government of the United States or in any department or officer thereof.

Sec. IX. 1. The migration or importation of such persons as any of the states now existing shall think proper to admit shall not be prohibited by the congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding $10 for each person.

2. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

3. No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed.

4. No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

5. No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state. No preference shall be given, by any regulation of commerce or revenue, to the ports of one state over those of another; nor shall vessels bound to or from one state be obliged to enter, clear or pay duties in another.

6. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

7. No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States, and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of congress, accept of any present, emolument, office or title of any kind whatever from any king, prince or foreign state.

Sec. X. 1. No state shall enter into any treaty, alliance or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bills of credit; make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

2. No state shall, without the consent of the congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws, and the net produce of all duties and imposts laid by any state on imports or exports shall be for the use of the treasury of the United States, and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the congress. No state shall, without the consent of congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another state or with a foreign power or engage in war, unless actually invaded or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.

ARTICLE II.

Section I. 1. The executive power shall be vested in a president of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years, and together with the vice-president, chosen for the same term, be elected as follows:

2. Each state shall appoint, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the state may be entitled in the congress, but no senator or representative or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States shall be appointed an elector.

3. The electors shall meet in their respective states and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for and of the number of votes for each, which list they shall sign and certify and transmit sealed to the seat of government of the United States, directed to the president of the senate. The president of the senate shall, in the presence of the senate and house of representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be the president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if there be more than one who have such majority and have an equal number of votes, then the house of representatives shall immediately choose, by ballot, one of them for president; and if no person have a majority, then from the five highest on the list the said house shall, in like manner, choose the president. But in choosing the president the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. In every case after the choice of the president the person having the greatest number of votes of the electors shall be the vice-president. But if there should remain two or more who have equal votes the senate shall choose from them, by ballot, the vice-president. [The foregoing provisions were changed by the 12th amendment.]

4. The congress may determine the time of choosing the electors and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

5. No person except a natural-born citizen or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this constitution shall be eligible to the office of president; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of 35 years and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.

6. In case of the removal of the president from office or of his death, resignation or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the vice-president; and the congress may, by law, provide for the case of removal, death, resignation or inability both of the president and vice-president, declaring what officer shall then act as president, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed or a president shall be elected.

7. The president shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States or any of them.

8. Before he enters on the execution of his office he shall take the following oath or affirmation:

I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States.

Sec. II. 1. The president shall be commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States and of the militia of the several states when called into the actual service of the United States. He may require the opinion, in writing, of the principal officer in each of the executive departments upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, and he shall have the power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States except in cases of impeachment.

2. He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the senators present concur, and he shall nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme court and all other officers of the United States whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for and which shall be established by law. But the congress may, by law, vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they shall think proper in the president alone, in the courts of law or in the heads of departments.

3. The president shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the senate by granting commissions, which shall expire at the end of their next session.

Sec. III. He shall, from time to time, give to the congress information of the state of the union and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper. He shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers. He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all officers of the United States.

Sec. IV. The president, vice-president and all civil officers of the United States shall be removed from office on impeachment for and conviction of treason, bribery or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

ARTICLE III.

Section I. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme court and in such inferior courts as the congress may, from time to time, ordain and establish. The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

Sec. II. 1. The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this constitution, the laws of the United States and treaties made or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more states; between a state and citizens of another state; between citizens of different states; between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states, and between a state or the citizens thereof and foreign states, citizens or subjects.

2. In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls and those in which a state shall be a party the Supreme court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned the Supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the congress shall make.

3. The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury, and such trials shall be held in the state where the said crimes shall have been committed, but when not committed within any state the trial shall be at such place or places as the congress may by law have directed.

Sec. III. 1. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or on confession in open court.

2. The congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture except during the life of the person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.

Section I. Full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records and judicial proceedings of every other state. And the congress may, by general laws, prescribe the manner in which such acts, records and proceedings shall be proved and the effect thereof.

Sec. II. 1. The citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states.

2. A person charged in any state with treason, felony or other crime, who shall flee from justice and be found in another state, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the state having jurisdiction of the crime.

3. No person held to service or labor in one state under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.

Sec. III. 1. New states may be admitted by the congress of this union, but no new state shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other state, nor any state be formed by the junction of two or more states or parts of states, without the consent of the legislatures of the states concerned as well as of the congress.

2. The congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States, and nothing in this constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States or of any particular state.

Sec. IV. The United States shall guarantee to every state in this union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion, and on application of the legislature or of the executive (when the legislature cannot be convened) against domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

The congress, whenever two-thirds of both houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this constitution, or, on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the several states, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of this constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the congress; provided, that no amendment which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the ninth section of the first article, and that no state, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the senate.

ARTICLE VI.

Section I. 1. All debts contracted and engagements entered into before the adoption of this constitution shall be as valid against the United States under this constitution as under the confederation.

2. This constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made or which shall be made under authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding.

3. The senators and representatives before mentioned and the members of the several state legislatures and all executive and judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several states, shall be bound, by oath or affirmation, to support this constitution, but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

The ratification of the conventions of nine states shall be sufficient for the establishment of this constitution between the states so ratifying the same.

Done in convention, by the unanimous consent of the states present, the seventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and of the independence of the United States of America the twelfth.

Sec. 2. Congress shall have the power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation. (Dec. 18, 1865.)

XIV. Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Sec. 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several states according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each state, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for president and vice-president of the United States, representatives in congress, the executive and judicial officers of a state or the members of the legislature thereof is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such state, being 21 years of age and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens 21 years of age in such state.

Sec. 3. No person shall be a senator or representative in congress or elector of president and vice-president, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any state, who, having previously taken the oath as a member of congress or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any state legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any state, to support the constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each house, remove such disability.

Sec. 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any state shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave, but all such debts, obligations and claims shall be held illegal and void.

Sec. 5. The congress shall have the power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article. (July 28, 1868.)

XV. Section 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude.

Sec. 2. The congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation. (March 30, 1870.)

XVI. The congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several states, and without regard to any census or enumeration. (Feb. 25, 1913.)

XVII. Section 1. The senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each state, elected by the people thereof, for six years; and each senator shall have one vote. The electors in each state shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislature.

Sec. 2. When vacancies happen in the representation of any state in the senate, the executive authority of such state shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies; provided, that the legislature of any state may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointment until the people fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct.

Sec. 3. This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the constitution. (May 31, 1913.)

XVIII. Section 1. After one year from the ratification of this article, the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

Sec. 2. The congress and the several states shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Sec. 3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the constitution by the legislatures of the several states, as provided in the constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the states by congress. (Jan. 16, 1919.)

XIX. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation. (Aug. 26, 1920.)

THE AMERICAN DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

The unanimous declaration of the thirteen United States of America, in congress, July 4, 1776.

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that, whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient suffering of these colonies, and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present king of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent should be obtained, and, when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature—a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies, at places unusual, uncomfortable and distant from the repository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time after such dissolutions to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large for their exercise; the state remaining, in the meantime, exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice by refusing his assent to laws for establishing his judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone for the tenure of their offices and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies without the consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the military independent of and superior to the civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitutions and unacknowledged by our laws, giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us;

For protecting them by a mock trial from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states;

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world;

For imposing taxes on us without our consent;

For depriving us in many cases of the benefits of trial by jury;

For transporting us beyond seas to be tried for pretended offenses;

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies;

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments;

For suspending our own legislatures and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here by declaring us out of his protection and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burnt our towns and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the work of death, desolation and tyranny already begun, with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow citizens taken captive upon the high seas to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrection amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress, in the most humble terms; our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in attention to our British brethren. We have warned them, from time to time, of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred, to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They, too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war; in peace, friends.

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in general congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by the authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare that these united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that as free and independent states they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce and to do all other acts and things which independent states may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor.

Signed by order and in behalf of the congress.

WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS.

To the people of the United States:

Friends and Fellow Citizens: The period for a new election of a citizen to administer the executive government of the United States being not far distant, and the time actually arrived when your thoughts must be employed in designating the person who is to be clothed with that important trust, it appears to me proper, especially as it may conduce to a more distinct expression of the public voice, that I should now apprise you of the resolution I have formed, to decline being considered among the number of those out of whom a choice is to be made.

I beg you, at the same time, to do me the justice to be assured that this resolution has not been taken without a strict regard to all the considerations appertaining to the relation which binds a dutiful citizen to his country; and that, in withdrawing the tender of service which silence in my situation might imply, I am influenced by no diminution of zeal for your future interest; no deficiency of grateful respect for your past kindness; but am supported by a full conviction that the step is compatible with both.

The acceptance of and continuance hitherto in the office to which your suffrages have twice called me have been a uniform sacrifice of inclination to the opinion of duty and to a deference for what appeared to be your desire. I constantly hoped that it would have been much earlier in my power, consistently with the motives which I was not at liberty to disregard, to return to that retirement from which I had been reluctantly drawn. The strength of my inclination to do this previous to the last election had even led to the preparation of an address to declare it to you; but mature reflection on the then perplexed and critical posture of our affairs with foreign nations and the unanimous advice of persons entitled to my confidence impelled me to abandon the idea.

I rejoice that the state of your concerns, external as well as internal, no longer render the pursuit of inclination incompatible with the sentiment of duty or propriety; and am persuaded, whatever partiality may be retained for my services, that in the present circumstances of our country you will not disapprove my determination to retire.

The impressions with which I first undertook the arduous trust were explained on the proper occasion. In the discharge of this trust I will only say that I have, with good intentions, contributed towards the organization and administration of the government the best exertions of which a very fallible judgment was capable. Not unconscious in the outset of the inferiority of my qualifications, experience, in my own eyes, perhaps still more in the eyes of others, has strengthened the motives to diffidence of myself; and, every day, the increasing weight of years admonishes me more and more that the shade of retirement is as necessary to me as it will be welcome. Satisfied that if any circumstances have given peculiar value to my services they were temporary, I have the consolation to believe that, while choice and prudence invite me to quit the political scene, patriotism does not forbid it.

In looking forward to the moment which is to terminate the career of my political life my feelings do not permit me to suspend the deep acknowledgment of that debt of gratitude which I owe to my beloved country, for the many honors it has conferred upon me; still more for the steadfast confidence with which it has supported me; and for the opportunities I have thence enjoyed of manifesting my inviolable attachment, by services faithful and persevering, though in usefulness unequal to my zeal. If benefits have resulted to our country from these services, let it always be remembered to your praise, and as an instructive example in our annals, that under circumstances in which the passions, agitated in every direction, were liable to mislead amidst appearances sometimes dubious, vicissitudes of fortune often discouraging—in situations in which not unfrequently want of success has countenanced the spirit of criticism—the constancy of your support was the essential prop of the efforts, and a guarantee of the plans, by which they were effected. Profoundly penetrated with this idea, I shall carry it with me to my grave as a strong incitement to unceasing vows that heaven may continue to you the choicest tokens of its beneficence—that your union and brotherly affection may be perpetual—that the free constitution, which is the work of your hands, may be sacredly maintained—that its administration in every department may be stamped with wisdom and virtue—that, in fine, the happiness of the people of these states, under the auspices of liberty, may be made complete by so careful a preservation and so prudent a use of this blessing as will acquire to them the glory of recommending it to the applause, the affection and adoption of every nation which is yet a stranger to it.

Here, perhaps, I ought to stop. But a solicitude for your welfare, which cannot end but with my life, and the apprehension of danger, natural to that solicitude, urge me, on an occasion like the present, to offer to your solemn contemplation and to recommend to your frequent review some sentiments which are the result of much reflection, of no inconsiderable observation, and which appear to me all important to the permanency of your felicity as a people. These will be offered to you with the more freedom, as you can only see in them the disinterested warnings of a parting friend, who can possibly have no personal motive to bias his counsel. Nor can I forget as an encouragement to it your indulgent reception of my sentiments on a former and not dissimilar occasion.

Interwoven as is the love of liberty with every ligament of your hearts, no recommendation of mine is necessary to fortify or confirm the attachment.

The unity of government which constitutes you one people is also now dear to you. It is justly so, for it is a main pillar in the edifice of your real independence; the support of your tranquillity at home, your peace abroad; of your safety; of your prosperity; of that very liberty which you so highly prize. But, as it is easy to foresee that from different causes and from different quarters much pains will be taken, many artifices employed, to weaken in your minds the conviction of this truth; as this is the point in your political fortress against which the batteries of internal and external enemies will be most constantly and actively (though often covertly and insidiously) directed, it is of infinite moment that you should properly estimate the immense value of your national union to your collective and individual happiness; that you should cherish a cordial, habitual and immovable attachment to it; accustoming yourselves to think and speak of it as of the palladium of your political safety and prosperity; watching for its preservation with jealous anxiety; discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can, in any event, be abandoned; and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the various parts.

For this you have every inducement of sympathy and interest. Citizens by birth, or choice, of a common country, that country has a right to concentrate your affections. The name of American, which belongs to you in your national capacity, must always exalt the just pride of patriotism more than any appellation derived from local discriminations. With slight shades of difference, you have the same religion, manners, habits and political principles. You have, in a common cause, fought and triumphed together; the independence and liberty you possess are the work of joint counsels and joint efforts, of common dangers, sufferings and successes.

But these considerations, however powerfully they address themselves to your sensibility, are greatly outweighed by those which apply more immediately to your interest. Here every portion of our country finds the most commanding motives for carefully guarding and preserving the union of the whole.

The north, in an unrestrained intercourse with the south, protected by the equal laws of a common government, finds in the productions of the latter great additional resources of maritime and commercial enterprise, and precious materials of manufacturing industry. The south, in the same intercourse benefiting by the same agency of the north, sees its agriculture grow and its commerce expand. Turning partly into its own channels the seamen of the north, it finds its particular navigation invigorated; and while it contributes, in different ways, to nourish and increase the general mass of the national navigation, it looks forward to the protection of a maritime strength, to which itself is unequally adapted. The east, in a like intercourse with the west, already finds, and in the progressive improvement of interior communications by land and water, will more and more find a valuable vent for the commodities which it brings from abroad or manufactures at home. The west derives from the east supplies requisite to its growth and comfort—and, what is perhaps of still greater consequence, it must of necessity owe the secure enjoyment of indispensable outlets for its own productions to the weight, influence and the future maritime strength of the Atlantic side of the union, directed by an indissoluble community of interest as one nation. Any other tenure by which the west can hold this essential advantage, whether derived from its own separate strength or from an apostate and unnatural connection with any foreign power, must be intrinsically precarious.

While then every part of our country thus feels an immediate and particular interest in union, all the parts combined cannot fail to find in the united mass of means and efforts greater strength, greater resources, proportionably greater security from external danger, a less frequent interruption of their peace by foreign nations; and, what is of inestimable value, they must derive from union an exemption from those broils and wars between themselves, which so frequently afflict neighboring countries not tied together by the same government, which their own relationship would be sufficient to produce, but which opposite foreign alliances, attachments and intrigues would stimulate and encourage. Hence, likewise, they will avoid the necessity of those overgrown military establishments which, under any form of government, are inauspicious to liberty, and which are to be particularly hostile to republican liberty. In this sense it is that your union ought to be considered as the main prop of your liberty, and that the love of the one ought to endear to you the preservation of the other.

These considerations speak a persuasive language to every reflecting and virtuous mind, and exhibit the continuance of the union as a primary object of patriotic desire. Is there a doubt whether a common government can embrace so large a sphere? Let experience solve it. To listen to mere speculation in such a case were criminal. We are authorized to hope that a proper organization of the whole, with the auxiliary agency of governments for the respective subdivisions, will afford a happy issue to the experiment. It is well worth a fair and full experiment. With such powerful and obvious motives to union affecting all parts of our country, while experience shall not have demonstrated its impracticability, there always will be reason to distrust the patriotism of those who in any quarter may endeavor to weaken its hands.

In contemplating the causes which may disturb our union, it occurs as a matter of serious concern that any ground should have been furnished for characterizing parties by geographical considerations — northern and southern, Atlantic and western—whence designing men may endeavor to excite a belief that there is a real difference of local interests and views. One of the expedients of party to acquire influence within particular districts is to misrepresent the opinions and aims of other districts. You cannot shield yourselves too much against the jealousies and heartburnings which spring from these misrepresentations; they tend to render alien to each other those who ought to be bound together by fraternal affection. The inhabitants of our western country have lately had a useful lesson on this head. They have seen in the negotiation by the executive and the unanimous ratification by the senate of the treaty with Spain, and in the universal satisfaction at the event throughout the United States, a decisive proof how unfounded were the suspicions propagated among them of a policy in the general government and in the Atlantic states unfriendly to their interests in regard to the Mississippi. They have been witnesses to the formation of two treaties—that with Great Britain and that with Spain—which secure to them everything they could desire in respect to our foreign relations toward confirming their prosperity. Will it not be their wisdom to rely for the preservation of these advantages on the union by which they were secured? Will they not henceforth be deaf to those advisers, if such they are, who would sever them from their brethren and connect them with aliens?

To the efficacy and permanency of your union a government for the whole is indispensable. No alliances, however strict, between the parts can be an adequate substitute. They must inevitably experience the infractions and interruptions which all alliances in all times have experienced. Sensible of this momentous truth, you have improved upon your first essay by the adoption of a constitution of government better calculated than your former for an intimate union and for the efficacious management of your common concerns. This government, the offspring of your own choice, uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting security with energy, and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support. Respect for its authority, compliance with its laws, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty.

The basis of our political systems is the right of the people to make and alter their constitutions of government. But the constitution which at any time exists, until changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory upon all. The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government.

All obstructions to the executions of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberations and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle and of fatal tendency. They serve to organize faction; to give it an artificial and extraordinary force; to put in the place of the delegated will of the nation the will of a party, often a small but artful and enterprising minority of the community, and, according to the alternate triumphs of the different parties, to make the public administration the mirror of the ill concerted and incongruous projects of faction rather than the organ of consistent and wholesome plans, digested by common counsels and modified by mutual interests.

However combinations or associations of the above description may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely in the course of time and things to become potent engines by which cunning, ambitious and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the will of the people, to usurp for themselves the reins of government, destroying afterwards the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion.

Toward the preservation of your government and the permanency of your present happy state it is requisite not only that you steadily discountenance irregular opposition to its acknowledged authority, but also that you resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretext. One method of assault may be to effect, in the forms of the constitution, alterations which will impair the energy of the system; and thus to undermine what cannot be directly overthrown. In all the changes to which you may be invited, remember that time and habit are at least as necessary to fix the true character of governments as of other human institutions—that experience is the surest standard by which to test the real tendency of the existing constitution of a country—that facility in changes, upon the credit of mere hypothesis and opinion, exposes to perpetual change from the endless variety of hypothesis and opinion; and remember, especially, that for the efficient management of your common interests in a country so extensive as ours a government of as much vigor as is consistent with the perfect security of liberty is indispensable. Liberty itself will find in such a government, with powers properly distributed and adjusted, its surest guardian. It is, indeed, little else than a name where the government is too feeble to withstand the enterprises of faction, to confine each member of the society within the limits prescribed by the laws, and to maintain all in the secure and tranquil enjoyment of the rights of person and property.

I have already intimated to you the danger of parties in the state, with particular references to the founding them on geographical discrimination. Let me now take a more comprehensive view, and warn you in the most solemn manner against the baneful effects of the spirit of party generally.

This spirit, unfortunately, is inseparable from our nature, having its root in the strongest passions of the human mind. It exists under different shapes in all governments, more or less stifled, controlled or repressed; but in those of the popular form it is seen in its greatest rankness, and it is truly their worst enemy.

The alternate domination of one faction over another, sharpened by the spirit of revenge natural to party dissension, which in different ages and countries has perpetrated the most horrid enormities, is itself a frightful despotism. But this leads at length to a more formal and permanent despotism. The disorders and miseries which result gradually incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of an individual; and, sooner or later, the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns this disposition to the purpose of his own elevation on the ruins of public liberty.

Without looking forward to an extremity of this kind (which, nevertheless, ought not to be entirely out of sight), the common and continual mischiefs of the spirit of party are sufficient to make it the interest and duty of a wise people to discourage and restrain it.

It serves always to distract the public councils and enfeeble the public administration. It agitates the community with ill-founded jealousies and false alarms; kindles the animosity of one part against another; foments occasional riot and insurrection. It opens the door to foreign influence and corruption, which finds a facilitated access to the government itself through the channels of party passions. Thus the policy and the will of one country are subjected to the policy and will of another.

There is an opinion that parties in free countries are useful checks upon the administration of the government, and serve to keep alive the spirit of liberty. This within certain limits is probably true; and in governments of a monarchial cast, patriotism may look with indulgence, if not with favor, upon the spirit of party. But in those of the popular character, in governments purely elective, it is a spirit not to be encouraged. From their natural tendency it is certain there will always be enough of that spirit for every salutary purpose. And there being constant danger of excess, the effort ought to be, by force of public opinion, to mitigate and assuage it. A fire not to be quenched, it demands a uniform vigilance to prevent it bursting into a flame, lest, instead of warming, it should consume.

It is important likewise that the habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution in those intrusted with its administration to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres, avoiding in the exercise of the powers of one department to encroach upon another. The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism. A just estimate of that love of power and proneness to abuse it which predominate in the human heart is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position. The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power, by dividing and distributing it into different depositories, and constituting each the guardian of the public weal against invasions of the others, has been evinced by experiments ancient and modern; some of them in our country and under our own eyes. To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them. If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield.

Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and to cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked, where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.

It is substantially true that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule, indeed, extends with more or less force to every species of free government. Who that is a sincere friend to it can look with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?

Promote, then, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion it should be enlightened.

As a very important source of strength and security, cherish public credit. One method of preserving it is to use it as sparingly as possible, avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace, but remembering, also, that timely disbursements, to prepare for danger, frequently prevent much greater disbursements to repel it; avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt, not only by shunning occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions, in time of peace, to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars may have occasioned, not ungenerously throwing upon posterity the burden which we ourselves ought to bear. The execution of these maxims belongs to your representatives, but it is necessary that public opinion should co-operate. To facilitate to them the performance of their duty, it is essential that you should practically bear in mind, that toward the payment of debts there must be revenue; that to have revenue there must be taxes; that no taxes can be devised which are not more or less inconvenient and unpleasant; that the intrinsic embarrassment inseparable from the selection of the proper object (which is always a choice of difficulties), ought to be a decisive motive for a candid construction of the conduct of the government in making it, and for a spirit of acquiescence in the measures for obtaining revenue which the public exigencies may at any time dictate.

Observe good faith and justice toward all nations. Cultivate peace and harmony with all. Religion and morality enjoin this conduct. And can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and at no distant period a great nation to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence. Who can doubt that in the course of time and things the fruits of such a plan would richly repay any temporary advantages which might be lost by a steady adherence to it? Can it be that Providence has not connected the permanent felicity of a nation with its virtue? The experiment, at least, is recommended by every sentiment which ennobles human nature. Alas! is it rendered impossible by its vices?

In the execution of such a plan nothing is more essential than that permanent, inveterate antipathies against particular nations and passionate attachments for others should be excluded, and that in place of them just and amicable feelings toward all should be cultivated. The nation which indulges toward another an habitual hatred or an habitual fondness is in some degree a slave. It is a slave to its animosity or to its affection, either of which is sufficient to lead it astray from its duty and its interest. Antipathy in one nation against another disposes each more readily to offer insult and injury, to lay hold of slight causes of umbrage, and to be haughty and intractable when accidental or trifling occasions of dispute occur.

Hence frequent collisions, obstinate, envenomed and bloody contests. The nation prompted by ill will and resentment sometimes impels to war the government contrary to the best calculations of policy. The government sometimes participates in the national propensity, and adopts through passion what reason would reject. At other times it makes the animosity of the nation subservient to projects of hostility, instigated by pride, ambition and other sinister and pernicious motives. The peace often, sometimes perhaps the liberty, of nations has been the victim.

So, likewise, a passionate attachment of one nation for another produces a variety of evils. Sympathy for the favorite nation, facilitating the illusion of an imaginary common interest in cases where no real common interest exists and infusing into one the enmities of the other, betrays the former into a participation in the quarrels and wars of the latter without adequate inducement or justification. It leads also to concessions to the favorite nation of privileges denied to others, which is apt doubly to injure the nation making the concessions by unnecessarily parting with what ought to have been retained, and by exciting jealousy, ill will, and a disposition to retaliate in the parties from whom equal privileges are withheld; and it gives to ambitious, corrupted or deluded citizens (who devote themselves to the favorite nation) facility to betray or sacrifice the interests of their own country without odium, sometimes even with popularity, gilding with the appearances of a virtuous sense of obligation a commendable deference for public opinion or a laudable zeal for public good, the base or foolish compliances of ambition, corruption or infatuation.

As avenues to foreign influence in innumerable ways, such attachments are particularly alarming to the truly enlightened and independent patriot. How many opportunities do they afford to tamper with domestic factions, to practice the arts of seduction, to mislead public opinion, to influence or awe the public councils! Such an attachment of a small or weak toward a great and powerful nation dooms the former to be the satellite of the latter. Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence (I conjure you to believe me, fellow citizens) the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. But that jealousy, to be useful, must be impartial, else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defense against it. Excessive partiality for one foreign nation and excessive dislike of another cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil and even second the arts of influence on the other. Real patriots who may resist the intrigues of the favorite are liable to become suspected and odious, while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people to surrender their interests.

The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is in extending our commercial relations to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop.

Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people, under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice?

It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world, so far, I mean, as we are now at liberty to do it; for let me not be understood as capable of patronizing infidelity to existing engagements. I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs that honesty is always the best policy. I repeat, therefore, let those engagements be observed in their genuine sense. But in my opinion it is unnecessary and would be unwise to extend them.

Taking care always to keep ourselves by suitable establishments on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies.

Harmony, liberal intercourse with all nations are recommended by policy, humanity and interest. But even our commercial policy should hold an equal and impartial hand, neither seeking nor granting exclusive favors or preferences; consulting the natural course of things; diffusing and diversifying by gentle means the streams of commerce, but forcing nothing; establishing with powers so disposed, in order to give trade a stable course, to define the rights of our merchants, and to enable the government to support them, conventional rules of intercourse, the best that present circumstances and mutual opinion will permit, but temporary and liable to be from time to time abandoned or varied as experience and circumstances shall dictate; constantly keeping in view that it is folly in one nation to look for disinterested favors from another; that it must pay with a portion of its independence for whatever it may accept under that character; that by such acceptance it may place itself in the condition of having given equivalents for nominal favors, and yet of being reproached with ingratitude for not giving more. There can be no greater error than to expect or calculate upon real favors from nation to nation. It is an illusion which experience must cure, which a just pride ought to discard.

In offering to you, my countrymen, these counsels of an old and affectionate friend, I dare not hope they will make the strong and lasting impression I could wish—that they will control the usual current of the passions or prevent our nation from running the course which has hitherto marked the destiny of nations. But if I may even flatter myself that they may be productive of some partial benefit, some occasional good—that they may now and then recur to moderate the fury of party spirit, to warn against the mischiefs of foreign intrigue, to guard against the impostures of pretended patriotism—this hope will be a full recompense for the solicitude for your welfare by which they have been dictated.

How far in the discharge of my official duties I have been guided by the principles which have been delineated the public records and other evidences of my conduct must witness to you and to the world. To myself, the assurance of my own conscience is that I have at least believed myself to be guided by them.

In relation to the still subsisting war in Europe my proclamation of the 22d of April, 1793, is the index to my plan. Sanctioned by your approving voice and by that of your representatives in both houses of congress, the spirit of that measure has continually governed me, uninfluenced by any attempts to deter or divert me from it.

After deliberate examination, with the aid of the best lights I could obtain, I was well satisfied that our country, under all the circumstances of the case, had a right to take and was bound in duty and interest to take a neutral position. Having taken it, I determined as far as should depend upon me to maintain it with moderation, perseverance and firmness.

The considerations which respect the right to hold this conduct it is not necessary on this occasion to detail. I will only observe that, according to my understanding of the matter, that right, so far from being denied by any of the belligerent powers, has been virtually admitted by all.

The duty of holding a neutral conduct may be inferred, without anything more, from the obligation which justice and humanity impose on every nation, in cases in which it is free to act, to maintain inviolate the relations of peace and amity toward other nations.

The inducements of interest for observing that conduct will best be referred to your own reflections and experience. With me a predominant motive has been to endeavor to gain time to our country to settle and mature its yet recent institutions, and to progress without interruption to that degree of strength and consistency which is necessary to give it, humanly speaking, the command of its own fortunes.

Though in reviewing the incidents of my administration, I am unconscious of intentional error, I am nevertheless too sensible of my defects not to think it probable that I may have committed many errors. Whatever they may be, I fervently beseech the Almighty to avert or mitigate the evils to which they may tend. I shall also carry with me the hope that my country will never cease to view them with indulgence; and that, after forty-five years of my life dedicated to its service, with an upright zeal, the faults of incompetent abilities will be consigned to oblivion, as myself must soon be to the mansions of rest.

Relying on its kindness in this as in other things, and actuated by that fervent love towards it which is so natural to a man who views in it the native soil of himself and his progenitors for several generations, I anticipate with pleasing expectation that retreat in which I promise myself to realize, without alloy, the sweet enjoyment of partaking, in the midst of my fellow citizens, the benign influence of good laws under a free government—the ever favorite object of my heart, and the happy reward, as I trust, of our mutual cares, labors and dangers.

GEO. WASHINGTON.

United States, 17th September, 1796.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG SPEECH.

Address at the dedication of Gettysburg cemetery, Nov. 19, 1863.

Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place of those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.

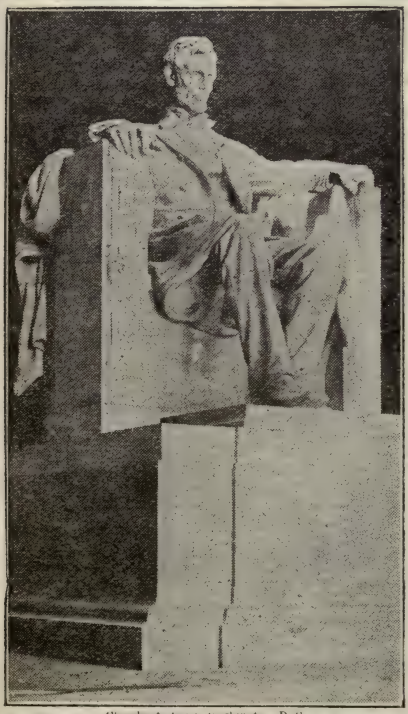
MEMORIAL TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN IN NATIONAL CAPITAL.



Underwood & Underwood, Washington, D. C.

LINCOLN STATUE BY DANIEL C. FRENCH.

MARBLE SHRINE IN WASHINGTON DEDICATED MAY 30, 1922.

The beautiful Lincoln memorial erected by the American nation on the banks of the Potomac was formally dedicated May 30, 1922. The completed structure was presented by Chief Justice Taft, chairman of the memorial commission, and was accepted on behalf of the government by President Warren G. Harding. The invocation and benediction were delivered by the Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, Washington, where Lincoln worshiped. Dr. Robert R. Moton of the Tuskegee institute paid a tribute to the emancipator of the negro race and Edwin Markham read his poem "Lincoln the Man of the People." Among those who attended the dedication were Robert T. Lincoln, the martyred president's son, and Mrs. Lincoln; Henry R. Bacon, architect of the memorial; Daniel Chester French, sculptor of the heroic seated figure of Lincoln placed in the center of the memorial, and Jules Guerin, designer of the allegorical frescoes. Others present were members of the Supreme court, foreign ambassadors and ministers and members of congress. Grand Army men, led by Lewis S. Pilcer, commander in chief, presented the colors and laid symbols of the army and navy at the foot of the structure. A number of gray-clad Confederate veterans were seated along the colonnade.

President Harding in his address laid stress on the fact that union and not emancipation was the supreme goal of Abraham Lincoln. "His faith was inspiring, his resolution commanding, his sympathy reassuring, his simplicity enlisting, his patience unfailing. He was faith, patience and courage, with his head above the clouds, unmoved by the storms which raged about his feet."

Chief Justice Taft in his speech gave a history of the building of the memorial and described some of the features of the shrine. Between the lines of his address was given an impression of the feat of the designers in planning a $3,000,000 memorial to Lincoln that is recognized as one of the most beautiful structures of its kind in the world. Beautiful as it is, one of the most remarkable accomplishments of the designers, it is considered, is the fact that nothing about it is incongruous with the simple, homely character of the man it commemorates, conforming at the same time in stateliness with the capitol and the Washington monument.

Nor has the memorial been complicated by elaborate symbolism. The thirty-six pure Doric columns that uphold the roof from the exterior represent the thirty-six states in the union maintained by Lincoln, while above the columns forty-eight sculptured festoons typify the states of the union as constituted at present.

Within, Daniel Chester French's seated figure of Lincoln, heroic in proportions, looks out through the columns in the direction of the capitol dome and the Washington monument with its reflection caught in the 1,000-foot long mirrored basin. The only other adornments within are Jules Guerin's frescoes, typifying "Emancipation" and "Reunion," and the Gettysburg address and extracts from the second inaugural inscribed on the walls.

Behind the statue is the following inscription:

"In this temple, as in the hearts of the people for whom he saved the union, the memory of Abraham Lincoln is enshrined forever."

The memorial was erected under the provisions of an act of congress approved Feb. 11, 1911.

FLAG OF THE UNITED STATES.

Executive order of May 29, 1916.

It is hereby ordered that national flags and union jacks for all departments of the government, with the exception noted under (a), shall conform to the following proportions:

Hoist (width) of flag, 1.
Fly (length) of flag, 1.9.
Hoist (width) of union, 7-13.
Fly (length) of union .76.
Width of each stripe, 1-13.

(a) Exception: The colors carried by troops and camp colors shall be the sizes prescribed for the military service (army and navy).

Limitation of the number of sizes: With the exception of colors under note (a) the sizes of flags manufactured or purchased for the government departments will be limited to those with the following hoists:

(1) 20 feet; (2) 19 feet (standard); (3) 14.35 feet; (4) 12.19 feet; (5) 10 feet; (6) 8.94 feet; (7) 5.14 feet; (8) 5 feet; (9) 3.52 feet; (10) 2.90 feet; (11) 2.37 feet; (12) 1.31 feet.

Union jacks: The size of the jack shall be the size of the union of the national flag with which it is flown.

The national flag of the United States now consists of thirteen alternate red and white stripes, representing the original thirteen states, and a blue field on which are forty-eight white stars arranged in six rows of eight stars each, representing the forty-eight states now constituting the union. The last two stars were added in 1912 when New Mexico and Arizona were officially admitted as states.

Laws are in force in some of the states forbidding the desecration or mutilation of the flag or its use in any way for advertising purposes. A federal law forbids the use of the national flag on trade-marks.

The national flag was officially adopted by congress June 14, 1777. Accordingly June 14 is now generally observed as Flag day.

WHEN AND HOW TO USE THE FLAG.

[By E. B. Wicklander.]

The flag should not be raised before sunrise and should be lowered at sunset, but may fly at all times during war if intended for patriotic and not advertising purposes. In stormy weather it is considered unkind to permit the flag to fly except in battle, where it may wave night and day without regard for weather.

The flag in times of peace is not permitted by correct usage to float all night except at the grave of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Displaying the Flag—The flag, out of doors, should be flown from a pole whenever possible, or a wire or rope. In the United States army all flags are suspended from poles and in no other way. The blue field is placed farthest from the house displaying it, except when facing a parade, with the flag suspended across the street with the stripes perpendicular, in which case the blue field goes in the upper left hand corner as viewed by the parade.

While raising or lowering the flag, it must not touch the ground; care for it tenderly and respectfully.

Driving nails in the flag to hold it in place is considered wrong. Preferably it should be tied with red, white or blue cord, or tricolored cord.

Colors on Parade—When the colors are passing on parade or in review, the spectator should, if walking, halt; if sitting, arise, stand at attention and uncover; men to remove their hats and women to bow their heads. All military men are required to stand at salute.

Used in Decoration—When the flag is hung vertically (so it can be viewed from one side only) the blue field should be at the right as one faces it. When hung horizontally the field should be at the left. The flag should never be placed below a person sitting.

Desecration of the Flag—No advertisement or lettering of any sort should ever be placed upon the flag, or any object, especially merchandise for sale, placed upon it; nor should it ever be used as a trade-mark. It should not be worn as the whole or part of a costume, and when worn as a badge it should be small and pinned over the left breast or to the left collar lapel.

When worn as an emblem on the coat or other garment, no other token should be worn above it.

The flag in any form should never appear on towels, handkerchiefs, aprons or other utilitarian clothes of any kind, nor used as a table scarf.

When Portrayed—The flag when portrayed by an illustrative process should always have the staff so placed that it is at the left of the picture, the fabric floating to the right. In crossing the flag with that of another nation, the United States flag should be at the right.

Used as a Banner—When the flag is used as a banner, the blue field should fly to the north in streets running east and west, and to the east in streets running north and south.

Half-Mast or Used on a Bier—Before placing the flag at half-mast on Memorial day or when officially required as a symbol of mourning, it must have been raised to the top of pole or staff and then lowered at or near the center of the staff.

When the flag is placed over a bier or casket, the blue field should be at the head.

On Memorial day, May 30—The national flag should be displayed at half-mast until noon, then hoisted to the top of the staff, where it remains until sunset.

Days When the Flag Should Be Flown—Washington's birthday, Feb. 22; Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12; Mothers' day, second Sunday in May; Memorial day, May 30; Flag day, June 14; Independence day, July 4; also many local patriotic anniversaries.

FLAG DISPLAY DAYS IN CHICAGO.

In accordance with an order issued May 8, 1915, the American flag should be hoisted on the buildings of Chicago under the jurisdiction of the city government on all election days and on the following anniversaries:

Feb. 12—Lincoln's birthday.
Feb. 15—Sinking of the Maine.
Feb. 22—Washington's birthday.
April 19—Battle of Lexington.
May 30—Memorial day.
June 14—Flag day.
June 17—Battle of Bunker Hill.
July 4—Independence day.
Oct. 9—Chicago day.
Oct. 12—Columbus day.
Oct. 17—Battle of Saratoga.
Oct. 19—Surrender of Yorktown.
Nov. 25—Evacuation of Yorktown.

On all the foregoing dates the flag should be hoisted at full mast, with the exception of Memorial day and the anniversary of the sinking of the Maine, when it should be at half-mast. The hours of displaying the flag are from sunrise to sunset.

By an ordinance passed Feb. 5, 1917, by the Chicago city council, the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner" in public places in any way except as an entire and separate composition and without embellishments of national or other melodies is prohibited. The playing of the air as dance music or for an exit march is also prohibited. Violation of the ordinance by proprietors or performers is punishable by a fine of $100.

THERMOMETERS COMPARED.

There are three kinds of thermometers, with varying scales, in general use throughout the world—the Fahrenheit, Reaumur and centigrade. The freezing and boiling points on their scales compare as follows:

Thermometer.	Freezing pt.	Boiling pt.
Fahrenheit	32 degrees	212 degrees
Reaumur	zero	80 degrees
Centigrade	zero	100 degrees

In the adjoining column is a cut showing at a glance how the scales compare with each other. The Reaumur (R) scale is in the middle with the Fahrenheit (F) and the centigrade (C) scales on either side.

FORMULAS FOR EQUIVALENTS.

The degrees on one scale are reduced to their equivalent on another by these formulas:

Fahrenheit to Reaumur—Subtract 32, multiply by four-ninths.

Fahrenheit to Centigrade—Subtract 32, multiply by five-ninths.

Reaumur to Fahrenheit—Multiply by nine-fourths, add 32.

Reaumur to Centigrade—Multiply by five-fourths.

Centigrade to Fahrenheit—Multiply by nine-fifths, add 32.

Centigrade to Reaumur—Multiply by four-fifths.

First—Cotton.
Third—Leather.
Fifth—Wooden.

Ampere—Unit of current, decomposes .0009324 of a gram of water in one second or deposits silver at the rate of .001118 of a gram per second, when passed through a solution of nitrate of silver in water.

Volt—Unit of electromotive force; one volt equals one ampere of current passing through a substance having one ohm of resistance.

Coulomb—Unit of quantity; amount of electricity transferred by a current of one ampere in one second.
Farad—Unit of capacity; capacity of a condenser charged to a potential of one volt by one coulomb. A microfarad is one-millionth of a farad.

WEIGHTS OF DIAMONDS AND FINENESS OF GOLD.

The weight of diamonds and other precious stones is expressed in metric carats. The unit is the international carat of 200 milligrams, which has been officially adopted by the United States and most of the countries in Europe. Until July 1, 1913, there were three different standards in use in the United States, although the one generally accepted was 205.3 milligrams. This was usually subdivided on the binary system, the smallest subdivision being 1-64 of the carat. The new carat is subdivided on the decimal system.

The fineness of gold is also expressed in carats. Pure gold is said to be twenty-four carats fine. If it contains eight parts of a baser metal or alloy it is only sixteen carats fine. The carats therefore indicate the proportion of pure gold to alloy. Most of the gold used by jewelers is about fourteen carats fine, having ten parts of alloy.

STORAGE SPACE REQUIRED FOR DIFFERENT MATERIALS.

Example—A steamer has a capacity of 180,000 cubic feet for carrying coal. How many tons will she carry?

From the table, average American coal stows 43 cubic feet per ton of 2,240 pounds, so $\frac{180000}{43}$=4,186 tons—the number she would carry.

Note—The following table is based on a ton of 2,240 pounds. If the cubic feet per ton of 2,000 pounds is required, multiply the figures given by .892:

DEFINITIONS.

Displacement is the amount of water displaced by a vessel. If a vessel is floating in equilibrium in still water, the weight of the water she displaces equals the weight of the vessel herself with everything on board.

The displacement in cubic feet when floating in salt water divided by 35 (36 if in fresh water) gives the total weight of a ship and her cargo in tons, as 35 cubic feet of salt water weighs one ton (2,240 pounds) and 36 of fresh water the same amount.

The displacement of a steel vessel is calculated to the molded lines (that is, to the outside of the frames) and no allowance is made as a rule for the thickness of the shell plating. For wooden vessels (motor boats, tugs, lighters, etc.) the displacement is calculated to the outside of the planking.

Dead weight is the carrying capacity of a vessel and includes the tons of cargo and coal.

Register ton measurement is the measurement based on a ton of 2,240 pounds occupying 100 cubic feet.

Gross tonnage is the measurement in register tons of the interior capacity of the entire ship.

Net tonnage is the measurement in register tons upon which payment is made, and is the volume of the space available for cargo and passengers.

Block coefficient is the ratio of the volume of the displacement to the volume of a block having the same length, breadth and draft as the vessel. Cargo vessels have block coefficients ranging from .75 to .85, while fast passenger steamers have block coefficients of about .65.

If the length, width and draft of a vessel are multiplied by the block coefficient and this product divided by the weight of water per ton (36 cubic feet for fresh and 35 for salt water per ton of 2,240 pounds) the displacement of the vessel will be obtained.

SHIPPING TERMS.

f. o. b. steamer (free on board steamer); goods to be delivered on board steamer by seller at no extra charge to purchaser.

f. a. s. steamer (free at side steamer); goods to be delivered at side of steamer by seller.

f. f. a. steamer (free from alongside steamer); the seller pays lighterage charges in the port of destination from the steamer.

c. i. f. (cost, insurance and freight); the goods are delivered to the purchaser with the insurance and freight paid by the seller.

c. f. (cost and freight); the goods are delivered to the purchaser with the freight paid by the seller, but no insurance.

f. o. (free over side); the goods are delivered over the side of a vessel, that is, to a lighter or on to a pier, without any extra charge to the purchaser.

Bill of lading (b. l.) is a receipt for goods delivered to a carrier for transportation. The bills of lading of some steamship companies contain the following clause: "Freight is to be considered earned at time of receipt of shipment and is to be paid whether vessel or goods are lost or not." In foreign trade bills of lading are generally made out in triplicate, one for the shipper, one for the consignee and one for the captain of the vessel.

"With exchange" on a draft means that the party on whom the draft is drawn is to pay the cost of collection.

Demurrage—A charge for delay in loading or unloading a vessel.

Lay days are the days agreed upon by the shipper and captain or agent of a vessel for loading and discharging a cargo, beyond which a demurrage will be paid to the owners of the vessel. Sundays and legal holidays do not count unless the term "running days" is inserted, in which case all days are included.

Manifest—A document signed by the captain of a vessel containing a list of the goods and merchandise on board with their destination, for the use of the custom house officials. By United States Revised Statutes 2807 it is required to contain the names of the ports of loading and destination, a description of the vessel and her port, names of owners and master, names of consignees and of passengers and lists of the passengers' baggage and of the sea stores.

Clearance papers—When ready for sea the customs officials must be provided with a detail manifest of the ship's cargo. If the port charges have been paid and her cargo is properly accounted for, then the collector of the port will furnish the captain with clearance papers, without which the vessel must not leave port.

Drawback—A refund of duties paid on imported material that is used in the manufacture of goods that are exported. The United States government allows the exporter the import duty paid, less 1 per cent.

Salvage—The reward granted by law for saving life and property at sea.

Jettison—The throwing overboard of a part of the cargo or any article on board of a ship for the purpose of lightening the ship in case of necessity.

Bill of health—A certificate stating that the vessel comes from a port where no contagious disease prevails, and that none of the passengers (if carried) nor the crew at the time of departure was infected with any disease.

MARINE INSURANCE.

A contract of marine insurance is a contract of indemnity whereby the insurer undertakes to indemnify the insured in the manner and to the extent agreed against marine losses; i. e., the losses incident to marine adventure.

Unless specially mentioned in the policy, goods are not insured until they are on board of the vessel which is to carry them. Below are brief outlines of clauses and terms occurring in policies:

General average—Suppose a vessel springs a leak and to save her from sinking the captain throws overboard a portion of her cargo. The last shipment loaded on board is generally the first to come out.

If the shipment is fully insured the underwriters will pay the amount assessed against the goods, but whether the goods are insured or not the general average will make good to the owner the value of the goods which were jettisoned less the assessment which the owner is called upon to pay. It is safe to figure that all policies of insurance on goods cover and protect the merchant against assessments in general average.

Thus a merchant can suffer considerable loss by reason of assessment levied against his goods in general average, although the goods arrive at their destination in a perfectly sound condition—but such losses can be fully covered by insurance.

Free of particular average (f. p. a.)—Under American conditions it is understood that no claim for partial loss or damage will be allowed by the underwriters unless the loss or damage is caused by the vessel's having been burned, stranded, sunk or in collision.

With average (w. a.)—This means that no claim will be made on the underwriters for partial loss caused by sea perils unless the damage amounts to 5 per cent or more of the value of the shipment.

Free of all average (f. a. a.)—This, as the clause signifies, means free of all average.

Collision or ruling or running down clause (r. d. c.)—This is a clause in which the underwriters take a burden of a proportion, usually three-quarters, of the damage inflicted on other vessels by collision for which the insured vessel is held to blame. Sometimes this clause is extended to cover the whole of the assured's liabilities arising out of the damage done to property by the collision of the insured vessel with another and the clause is then known as the "four-fourths running down clause."

Incharmee clause—This clause covers loss of or damage to hull and machinery through the negligence of master, mariners, engineers and pilots, or through explosions, bursting of boilers, breakage of shafts or through any latent defect in the machinery or hull, provided such loss or damage has not resulted from want of due diligence by the owners of the ship or by the manager

POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES BY COLOR OR RACE.

[From federal census, taken as of Jan. 1, 1920.]

The rate of increase of the principal races during the decade 1910-1920 was:

Total population, 14.9 per cent; white, 16 per cent; negro, 6.5 per cent; Japanese, 53.9 per cent. The Indian population decreased by 8.6 per cent and the Chinese population by 13.8 per cent.

WHITE POPULATION.

The rate of increase in the white population during the recent decade, 16 per cent, is considerably less than the corresponding rate for the period 1900-1910, which was 22.3 per cent. This decline is accounted for mainly by the great reduction in the volume of immigration during the period of the world war. An estimate based on the excess of births over deaths and on the excess of immigration over emigration yields a total differing by only a small fraction of 1 per cent from the total white population enumerated.

NEGRO POPULATION.

The rate of increase in the negro population, which is not perceptibly affected by immigration or emigration, is by far the lowest on record. This element of the population has been growing at a rapidly diminishing rate during the last thirty years, its percentage of increase having declined from 18 per cent between 1890 and 1900 to 11.2 per cent during the following decade and to 6.5 per cent during the ten years ended Jan. 1, 1920. Such data as are available in regard to birth and death rates among the negroes indicate that the birth rate has decreased considerably since 1900, while the death rate has not changed greatly.

The following statement shows the negro population in 1920 and 1910, with the rates of increase during the past two decades, for the south, the north and the west. The line between the north and south follows the northern boundaries of Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Arkansas and Oklahoma. The west is that part of the country lying west of the eastern limits of Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico.

Section.	1920.	1910.	Pct. of increase. 1910-20.	1900-10.
North	1,472,163	1,027,674	43.3	16.7
West	78 591	50.662	55.1	67.5
Total	10,463,013	9,827,763	6.5	11.2

The total numerical increase in the negro population during the decade was 635,250. Of this increase 472,418, or nearly three-fourths, took place in the north and west, while only 162,832, or about one-fourth, was reported for the south, despite the fact that about 85 per cent of the total negro population is still found in the south.

Without exception the northern and western states which border on the south reported greater rates of increase in negro population than the average for the country, and in several of these states the rates were very large—for example, in Illinois, 67.1 per cent; in Ohio, 67.1 per cent, and in Pennsylvania, 46.7 per cent. The last mentioned state has a larger negro population than either Maryland or Kentucky. The greatest rate of growth in negro population reported by any state having more than 10,000 negro inhabitants appears for Michigan, 251 per cent, the negro population of this state having increased from 17,115 in 1910 to 60,082 in 1920.

INDIAN POPULATION.

The decrease in the Indian population, as enumerated, is probably to be accounted for in part by the enumeration as Indians in 1910, and as whites in 1920, of certain persons having only slight traces of Indian blood. In 1910 a special effort was made to secure a complete enumeration of all persons having any perceptible amount of Indian blood, for the purpose of preparing a special report showing tribal relations, purity of Indian blood, etc.; and it is probable that for this reason a considerable number of persons who would ordinarily have been reported as whites were enumerated as Indians in 1910. This assumption is borne out by a comparison of the totals shown for the Indian population at the last four censuses—the only ones at which a complete enumeration of the Indian population has been attempted. These are: 1920, 242,959; 1910, 265,683; 1900, 237,196; 1890, 248,253. Of the total decrease in the Indian population between 1910 and 1920, amounting to 22,724, by far the greater part, 18,876, took place in Oklahoma alone. The only pronounced increase was reported for North Carolina—from 7,851 to 11,824. The only other states which had, in 1920, 1,000 or more Indian inhabitants and which reported increases in Indian population were Louisiana, Texas, Montana, Arizona and California.

GROWTH OF URBAN POPULATION.

The figures given in the above table for 1920, as compared with corresponding figures for 1910, show that the trend of population from the country to the city increased steadily during the decade and that, for the first time in the country's history, more than half the entire population was living in urban territory as defined by the census bureau, that is, residing in cities and other incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more, including towns of that size in three New England states, namely, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, as later explained. On this basis, therefore, it appears that of the 105,708,711 persons in the United States in 1920, there were 54,318,032, or 51.4 per cent, living in urban territory and 51,390,739, or 48.6 per cent, living in rural territory. The corresponding percentages for 1910 were 45.8 and 54.2, respectively, showing a gain of 5.6 per cent in the proportion for the population living in urban territory. The proportion of the population living in urban territory was larger in 1920 than in 1910 for all but three states—Colorado, Montana and Wyoming—the largest changes in the proportion during the decade being for Michigan—an increase from 47.2 to 61.1 per cent—and for Maryland—an increase from 50.8 to 60 per cent. Texas, Indiana, Ohio, Florida and Oklahoma also showed considerable gains in the proportion of the population living in urban territory as compared with 1910. The loss since 1910 in the proportion of the population living in urban territory in Colorado, Montana and Wyoming was due to the fact that in each state by far the larger part of the total increase in the population was in the population living in rural territory, namely, 65.6 per cent for Colorado, 77.7 per cent for Montana, and 70.8 per cent for Wyoming.

In Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire (except in two cases) it is not the practice, as in the other states, to have municipal incorporations, such as villages, within the limits of the town, and no town becomes a city until its population is much in excess of 2,500. For this reason, it has been necessary, as above stated, to include in the urban territory of these states not only the population of cities but that of all towns having over 2,500 inhabitants. The "urban area" in each of these three states includes, therefore, some population which in other states would be classed as "rural," but it is not thought that the proportion of urban population in either state is greatly increased thereby. At the census of 1910 this rule as to towns applied to all the New England states, but for the census of 1920 the census bureau decided to limit the "urban area" in three of the New England states—Connecticut, Maine and Vermont—to cities and other incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more, the same as for other states, and so the figures for these states in 1910 were corrected accordingly.

Cities and Adjacent Territory.

In addition to the population of the metropolitan districts themselves the census returns for 1920 show the population residing in territory adjacent to the central cities but not included in the metropolitan districts—that is, in minor divisions which lie wholly or in greater part within ten miles of the boundaries of the central cities but in which the density of the population was not sufficient to justify treating them as strictly urban.

MEDIAN LINES.

The geographic distribution of the population is also indicated by the location of median lines. A parallel of latitude is determined which evenly divides the population so that the population north of that parallel is the same as that south. Similarly, a meridian of longitude is determined which divides the population evenly as between east and west. In calculating these median lines it is necessary, in the case of the square degrees of latitude and longitude which are traversed by the lines themselves, to assume that the population is evenly distributed through these square degrees or to make an estimated adjustment where this is obviously not the case.

It may be observed that while each median line exactly bisects the population as a whole it does not necessarily bisect the population

MEDIAN POINT.

The point at which the median lines intersect is designated as the "median point" of the population. In other words, it is the junction of the line dividing the population equally

FOREIGN WHITE STOCK IN THE UNITED STATES.

The classification of the foreign white stock by country of origin in the following tables, prepared by the United States census bureau, is based upon the prewar map of Europe, partly because of the difficulty of adjusting the returns of 1920 in regard to the birthplace of parents so as to agree with the changed boundaries of European countries and partly in order that comparisons might be made with the figures of the census of 1910.

*Includes foreign-born whose citizenship was not reported.

Note—At the census of 1920 a woman married to a native or naturalized citizen of the United States was returned as a citizen, even though herself foreign-born; and a native-born woman married to an alien or to a foreign-born man who had taken out his first naturalization papers only was returned as an alien. But the number of aliens here considered includes only those who are of foreign birth. An unmarried woman born in the United States is, of course, a citizen by birth; and for an unmarried foreign-born woman the process of naturalization is the same as for a man.

DWELLINGS AND FAMILIES IN THE UNITED STATES (1920).

According to the census usage the term "family" signifies a group of persons, whether related by blood or not, who live together as one household, usually sharing the same table. One person living alone is counted as a family, and, on the other hand, the occupants of a hotel or institution, however numerous, are also treated as forming a single family. Thus the census family in some cases differs greatly from the natural family, but the averages afford a fairly accurate index of the extent to which the size of families has been decreasing from census to census.

The term "dwelling" as here used signifies any building or structure in which one or more persons regularly sleep. It may not necessarily be a house in the usual sense of the word. A boat, a tent, a freight car, or a room in a warehouse, if it serves as a regular sleeping place for one or more persons, is treated as a dwelling. On the other hand, an entire apartment house, although the abiding place of many families, constitutes only one dwelling.

The average number of persons to a family in the United States has declined from 5 in 1880 to 4.9 in 1890, 4.7 in 1900, 4.5 in 1910 and 4.3 in 1920, and the average number of persons to a dwelling has decreased from 5.6 in 1880 to 5.5 in 1890, 5.3 in 1900, 5.2 in 1910 and 5.1 in 1920.

In general the average size of families is greatest in the southern states and smallest in the western states. The number of persons to a dwelling is greatest in New England and the middle Atlantic states and smallest in the western states. Among the individual states the number of persons to a family in 1920 ranged from 3.5 in Nevada to 5 in North Carolina and the number to a dwelling from 3.7 in Nevada to 7.8 in New York.

The total number of negroes reported as born in the south (that part of the country lying south of the southern boundaries of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Kansas) was 9,600,943. Of these, 7,751,361, or 80.7 per cent, were living in their native states in 1920; 1,068,788, or 11.1 per cent, were living in other southern states; and 780,794, or 8.1 per cent, were living in the north or west. The total number of negroes reported as born in the north or west was 741,791, of whom 537,131, or 72.4 per cent, were living in their native states in 1920; 157,437, or 21.2 per cent, were living in other northern or western states; and 47,223, or 6.4 per cent, were living in the south. Thus the proportion of southern-born negroes who migrated to the north or west, 8.1 per cent, was only about one-fourth larger than the proportion of the negroes who were born in the north or west and migrated to the south, 6.4 per cent.

The number of negroes born in the south and living in the north or west less the number born in the north or west and living in the south was 733,571. These may be termed the survivors of the net migration of negroes from the south to the north and west. The number of southern-born negroes living in the north and west increased from 440,534 in 1910 to 780,794 in 1920, forming 40.9 per cent of the total negro population of the north and west in the earlier year and 50.3 per cent in the later.

Although migration to the north and west has not taken place among the far southern negroes to the same extent, relatively to their total numbers, as among the negroes in the northern part of the south, there was nevertheless a pronounced increase in such migration from the far south in the decade 1910-1920. For example: The negroes who were born in South Carolina and had migrated from that state to Pennsylvania increased from 2,113 in 1910 to 11,624 in 1920; those from Georgia to Pennsylvania increased from 1,578 to 16,196; those from Florida to Pennsylvania, from 393 to 5,370; those from Alabama to Ohio, from 781 to 17,588; those from Mississippi to Illinois, from 4,612 to 19,485; those from Louisiana to Illinois, from 1,609 to 8,078; and those from Texas to Missouri, from 1,907 to 4,344.

DANGERS IN PUBLIC BATHING PLACES.

Through a questionnaire sent out by the American Journal of Public Health to 2,000 physicians throughout the country, some interesting information was obtained as to the extent and prevalence of diseases that may be conveyed by means of public bathing places. The following questions were submitted:

1. Do you consider public bathing places an important factor in transmitting disease?
2. If so, what diseases?
3. Describe circumstances of particular cases of diseases which you feel certain were contracted at a bathing place.
4. In relation to transmission of diseases, which do you consider more important, bathing suits, towels or quality of bathing water?
5. In swimming pools, which do you consider the greatest danger, transmission of diseases or accidents?
6. What is your opinion regarding importance of the following diseases in relation to sanitation of bathing beaches: Typhoid fever, gonococcus infection, syphilis, ringworm, dysentery, colds, pink eye and boils?

Of the 350 replies received to question one, 70 per cent believed bathing places are important factors; 25 per cent thought they were not and 4 per cent were in doubt and expressed no opinion.

Replies to questions two and three disclosed that the writers considered infections of eye, ear, nose, throat, skin, venereal, gastro-intestinal and some miscellaneous diseases as important in relation to transmission of disease by bathing places. A very large number of physicians answering the questions submitted were agreed in this view. Seven physicians reported epidemics of conjunctivitis; six others, epidemics of skin diseases; two, epidemics of middle ear infection; two, epidemics of tonsillitis and pharyngitis; one, an epidemic of nasal sinus and one member of the committee reported an epidemic of typhoid fever in a boys' camp.

It is to be noted, however, in these answers to questions two and three that very few fatal cases of any of the diseases have been attributed to bathing place infection outside of typhoid fever. One physician reported a fatal case of mastoid infection and four others reported fatal cases of meningitis following infections of ear and nose.

In replying to question four, 500 physicians expressed an opinion. Of these, 38 per cent considered the quality of water most important; 31.2 per cent considered sanitation of suits and towels of the greatest importance and 30.8 per cent gave equal weight to each.

In reply to question five, 439 opinions were given. Sixty-five per cent considered danger of infection the most important; 26 per cent drownings and accidents, and 9 per cent held that both were equally important.

In reply to question six, considerably more than one-half the physicians answering stated that they believed bathing places were important in connection with the transmission of the diseases named in the question.

MARITAL CONDITION OF THE POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES.

[Ascertained at the fourteenth decennial census Jan. 1, 1920.]

The total male population of the United States on the census date, 53,900,431, included 36,920,663 men and boys 15 years of age and over. Of the latter number 12,967,565 were single, 21,849,266 were married, 1,758,308 were widowed, 235,284 were divorced, and for the remaining 110,240 the marital condition was not ascertained by the enumerators.

The total number of females in the United States, 51,810,189, included 35,177,515 women and girls 15 years of age and over. Of the latter number, 9,616,902 were single, 21,318,933 were married, 3,917,625 were widowed, 273,304 were divorced, and for the remaining 50,751 the marital condition was not reported. The difference of 530,333 between the numbers of married men and of married women was due principally to the presence in the United States of many foreign-born married men who had left their wives in the countries of their former residence.

The census figures give no indication of the total number of persons who have been divorced, but show merely the number of divorced persons who had not remarried at the time the census was taken.

THE EUGENE V. DEBS CASE.

Eugene V. Debs, five times socialist candidate for the presidency of the United States, was arrested in Cleveland, O., June 20, 1918 on a federal warrant in connection with Debs' speech at the socialist state convention in Canton, O., on June 16. He was brought to trial and on Sept. 12 was found guilty by a federal jury. Of the original ten counts of the indictment only four remained when the jury retired to consider the evidence. He was found guilty of attempting to incite insubordination, disloyalty, etc., in the military and naval forces; attempting to obstruct recruiting and uttering language tending to incite, provoke and encourage resistance to the United States, and to promote the cause of the enemy. The count on which he was adjudged innocent charged that he opposed the cause of the United States.

On Sept. 14 Debs was sentenced to ten years in the Moundsville (W. Va.) penitentiary on each of three counts of the indictment by Federal Judge D. C. Westenhaver. The sentences were to run concurrently. Motion for a new trial was overruled and an exception on behalf of the defendant was allowed. A motion for arrest of the sentence was also overruled. The court admitted Debs to $10.000 bail, with permission to leave the northern federal district of Ohio only to go to and remain at his home.

The case was carried to the United States Supreme court, which on March 10, 1919, sustained the conviction and sentence by the lower court. The constitutionality of the espionage act itself was not passed upon, but the members of the court were unanimous in holding the enlistment section valid and in declaring that the act did not interfere with the right of free speech.

Mr. Debs asked for a rehearing by the Supreme court on March 27, but his petition was denied March 31. Debs began serving his sentence in the West Virginia penitentiary at Moundsville April 13, 1919. He was later transferred to the penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.

In 1920, while still in prison, he was again made the candidate of the socialist party for president of the United States and received nearly 900,000 votes. Early in 1921 his case was taken up by a special commission investigating all convictions under the espionage act and the recommendation was made to the department of justice that Debs' sentence be commuted on Feb. 12. The recommendation was favorably indorsed by the department, but President Wilson on Jan. 31 refused to commute the sentence on the ground that Debs had sought to handicap the selective service act and that the granting of clemency in this case might induce similar contempt for law in the event of another war.

On recommendation of Attorney-General Daugherty the sentence was commuted by President Harding as "a gracious act of mercy," and Debs was released from the penitentiary Dec. 25, 1921.

DEATH OF LILLIAN RUSSELL.

Lillian Russell (Mrs. Alexander P. Moore), long a star in American comic opera and internationally known for her beauty, died at her home in Pittsburgh, Pa., June 6, 1922, after an illness of several weeks, following an accident on shipboard sustained while she was returning home from Europe, where she had acted as an investigator of the immigration question for the United States. She was born in Clinton, Iowa, Dec. 4, 1861, the daughter of Charles E. and Cynthia Leonard. She moved with her parents to Chicago, where her early years were spent in the study of music. She made her first appearance in the western metropolis as an amateur singer and later went to New York and sang at Tony Pastor's theater and at the Casino. After that she became a member of Weber and Fields' stock company and then of the McCaull Opera company. She subsequently organized a company of her own and had several successful seasons in the United States and Europe. She was a writer on beauty culture and to some extent on sociological matters, being especially interested in the welfare of working girls.

Miss Russell was married four times, first to Harry Braham, then to Edward Solomon, and then to Sig. Perugini (John Chatterton). She was married to Alexander P. Moore of Pittsburgh in 1912.

COST OF SERVICE.

The cost of administering the internal-revenue laws for the fiscal year 1922 was approximately $41,435,000, not including expenditures from appropriations for refunding internal-revenue collections and taxes illegally collected, which is not an administrative expense. The cost of operation for the year on this basis was $1.30 for each $100, compared with 87 cents for the previous year. The difference in the relative cost of the two years was mainly due to the large reduction in the revenues for 1922.

NUMBER OF THE STARS.

According to the best astronomers the number of stars that can be seen by a person of average eyesight is only about 7,000. The number visible through the telescope has been estimated by J. E. Gore at 70,000,000 and by Profs. Newcomb and Young at 100,000,000.

At the beginning of each quarter the secretary of the treasury proclaims the estimate by the director of the mint of the pure metal contents of foreign coins in terms of the money of account of the United States, to be followed in estimating the value of all foreign merchandise exported to the United States during the quarter, expressed in any such metallic currencies. It is not the exchange value. Coins in the foregoing table marked with an asterisk () are those the value of which has been estimated by the director of the mint. †The tael is a unit of weight, not a coin. The customs unit is the Haikwan tael (value $0.7570). The values of other taels are based on their relation to the Haikwan tael. The Yuan silver dollar of 100 cents is the monetary unit of the Chinese republic; it is equivalent to 0.644 plus of the Haikwan tael.

DEATH OF SIR ERNEST SHACKLETON.

Sir Ernest Shackleton, noted as an antarctic explorer, died on board his ship, the Quest, on Jan. 5, 1922, from a sudden attack of heart disease. His death did not become known to the outer world until Jan. 29, when his body was brought to Montevideo, Uruguay, on a Norwegian steamer. Sir Ernest was making his fourth voyage to the antarctic regions and at the time of his passing away his ship was anchored near the island of South Georgia. The purpose of the expedition was to chart large sections of the unknown parts of the antarctic, south Atlantic and south Pacific oceans. Soundings were to be made to discover the limits of the continental shelf.

Sir Ernest Shackleton was born in Kilkee, Ireland, Feb. 15, 1874. He was educated in Dulwich college, England, and while still a youth went to sea before the mast on a sailing ship. In 1901 he left on his first antarctic voyage as third lieutenant of the Scott expedition. In 1907-1909 he commanded the expedition which reached the south magnetic pole, discovered the King Edward VII. plateau and came within ninety-seven miles of the pole itself. In 1914 he led another expedition, in which he displayed great heroism and endurance in rescuing his shipwrecked companions. He was director of the equipment and mobile forces of Great Britain in the north Russian winter campaign of 1918-1919.

He left London Sept. 17, 1921, as commander of what was officially known as the British oceanographical and subantarctic expedition. Heavy storms on the way had put the wireless outfit on the Quest out of commission. That on the Norwegian ship, which brought his remains to Montevideo, was also out of order or the news of his death would have become known to the world sooner. Capt. L. Hussey, the meteorologist of the expedition, accompanied the body to Uruguay. There he was advised from England that Lady Shackleton, in accordance with the previously expressed desire of her husband, had directed that his resting place should be near where he died. His remains were therefore taken back to South Georgia and buried there.

ANNALIST COMPUTATION.

The New York Annalist's "Curve in the Cost of Living," or index number, which shows the fluctuations in the average wholesale price of twenty-five food commodities selected and arranged to represent a theoretical family's food budget, indicated that prices fell generally from September, 1920, to January, 1922, and then had an upward tendency, with considerable fluctuations in April, May and June, when they rose rapidly.

The index number published Aug. 14, 1922, showed:

CANAL ZONE.

The Canal Zone contains about 436 square miles and on Jan. 1, 1920, had a total population of 21,650. It begins at a point three marine miles from mean low water mark in each ocean and extends for five miles on each side of the center line of the route of the canal. It includes the group of islands in the Bay of Panama, named Perico, Naos, Culebra and Flamenco. The cities of Panama and Colon are excluded from the zone, but the United States has the right to enforce sanitary ordinances and maintain public order there in case the republic of Panama should not be able to do so.

LABOR FORCE.

June 21, 1922, the actual working force on the canal was 10,176, of whom 7,623 were silver and 2,553 gold employes, the latter being almost exclusively white Americans.

PANAMA RAILROAD.

The Panama railroad and the steamships run in connection with it between New York and Colon are owned and operated by the United States government. The road practically parallels the canal nearly the whole distance. It is 46½ miles long and runs between the cities of Colon and Panama.

The national holidays, such as July 4, New Year's, etc., are such by general custom and observance and not because of congressional legislation. Congress has passed no laws establishing holidays for the whole country. It has made Labor day a holiday in the District of Columbia, but the law is of no effect elsewhere. It has also designated the second Sunday in May as Mothers' day. President Wilson issued a proclamation May 30, 1916, requesting that June 14, the anniversary of the day on which the national emblem was adopted by congress, be observed as Flag day throughout the nation.

HOLIDAYS IN CANADA.

The following holidays are generally observed in the dominion of Canada with the closing of banks and public offices and the cessation of business: Jan. 1; Ash Wednesday, Good Friday, Easter Monday, Whit Monday, May 24 (Empire day), June 3 (King's birthday), July 1 (Dominion day), first Monday in September (Labor day), Dec. 25 (Christmas day). The last Monday in October is usually proclaimed as Thanksgiving day.

DIMENSIONS AND AREA OF THE UNITED STATES.

The gross area of the United States is 3,026,789 square miles. The land area amounts to 2,973,774 square miles, and the water area—exclusive of the area in the Great Lakes, the Atlantic, the Pacific, and the Gulf of Mexico within the three-mile limit—amounts to 53,015 square miles. These and other data determined or compiled by the United States geological survey department of the interior, to show the limits of the continental United States, contain some interesting facts.

The southernmost point of the mainland is Cape Sable, Fla., which is in latitude 25° 7′ and longitude 81° 5′. The extreme southern point of Texas is in latitude 25° 50′, and longitude 97° 24′. Cape Sable is therefore 49 miles farther south than the most southern point in Texas.

A small detached land area of northern Minnesota at longitude 95° 9′ extends northward to latitude 49° 23′.

The easternmost point of the United States is West Quoddy head, near Eastport, Maine, in longitude 66° 57′ and latitude 44° 49′; the westernmost point is Cape Alva, Wash., in latitude 48° 10′, which extends into the Pacific ocean to longitude 124° 45′.

From the southernmost point in Texas due north to the forty-ninth parallel, the boundary between the United States and Canada, the distance is 1,598 miles. From West Quoddy head due west to the Pacific ocean the distance is 2,807 miles. The shortest distance from the Atlantic to the Pacific across the United States is between points near Charleston, S. C., and San Diego, Cal., and is 2,152 miles.

The length of the Canadian boundary line from the Atlantic to the Pacific is 3,898 miles. The length of the Mexican boundary from the gulf to the Pacific is 1,744 miles. The Gulf of Mexico borders the United States for 3,640 miles.

Nearly all maps of the United States show the parallels of latitude as curved lines and are likely to lead the ordinary observer to believe that certain eastern or western states are farther north than some of the central states that are actually in the same latitude. For this reason, one who is asked which extends farther south, Florida or Texas, is very likely to say "Texas," but, as stated, the mainland of Florida is nearly 50 miles farther south than the southernmost point in Texas. For the same reason, when we consider the geographic positions of countries south of the United States we find that errors are likely to be made in estimating position or extent in longitude. Few realize that the island of Cuba, for example, if transposed directly north would extend from New York city to Indiana, or that Havana is farther west than Cleveland, O., or that the Panama canal is due south of Pittsburgh, Pa., or that Nome, Alaska, is farther west than Hawaii.

UNITED STATES RECLAMATION SERVICE.

Director, Arthur P. Davis, interior department building, 19th and F streets, N. W., Washington, D. C. Employes: Washington office, 75; field, 3,000 to 5,000. Expenditure per year about $10,000,000.

The reclamation service was organized as a bureau of the interior department under the reclamation act of June 17, 1902. It is engaged in the investigation, construction, and operation of irrigation works in the seventeen arid and semiarid states of the far west. Twenty-five primary projects comprising 2,825,000 acres and three Indian projects comprising 384,000 acres are under construction or operation, and the major works aid in serving an additional 1,100,000 acres under private canals that generally get stored water from the government reservoirs. The funds for this work have come chiefly from the sale of public lands, from repayments by the water users, and more recently from oil-leasing and other mineral operations, and the money expended is returned to the fund by graduated payments of settlers, usually in twenty annual installments without interest, in accordance with the reclamation extension act of Aug. 13, 1914.

The service has built about 13,600 miles of canals, ditches and drains (including 117,000 canal structures), involving the excavation of 200,000,000 cubic yards of materials. In connection with this work there have been constructed 100 storage and diversion dams with an aggregate volume of 14,500,000 cubic yards, including Arrowrock dam (349 feet high), Idaho, on the Boise river, and the Elephant Butte dam (306 feet high), New Mexico, on the Rio Grande. The service has built 101 tunnels, 1,000 miles of road, 83 miles of railroad, 3,280 miles of telephone lines, a dozen power plants and 840 miles of transmission lines. It is mining coal, and has manufactured 1,676,000 barrels of cement and sand cement. The net construction cost to June 30, 1922, was $135,000,000.

More than 450,000 persons are living on the 33,000 farms irrigated by the service and in the project towns and cities. Of the 2,825,000 acres above referred to water was furnished in 1921 to 1,227,500 acres, and of this area 1,157,900 acres were harvested in 1921, producing crops worth nearly $50,000,000, or an average of about $43 per acre. The additional lands using stored water yielded crops worth $45,000,000 more.

Public land farm units on the several projects are opened for settlement from time to time as canals are extended to make irrigation water available. Under present law soldiers of the world war have a preference right to enter these farms, and at recent openings such soldiers have taken all units.

Information in regard to farms available for settlement may be obtained by addressing director U. S. reclamation service, department of the interior, Washington, D. C.

The service issues the Reclamation Record, an illustrated monthly publication containing articles of interest to irrigation farmers and engineers. An annual report is also issued.

An engineering library of about 5,000 manuscript and printed volumes on the subject of irrigation is maintained in the Washington office of the service. This library contains description of the construction and operation of the projects, with numerous photographs and maps, plans, specifications, cost data and results of original experimental investigations, and is available for consultation by those interested.

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE.

Civil service act approved Jan. 16, 1883.

Officers—Three commissioners are appointed by the president to assist him in classifying the government offices and positions, formulating rules and enforcing the law. Their office is in Washington, D. C. The chief examiner is appointed by the commissioners to secure accuracy, uniformity and justice in the proceedings of the examining boards. The secretary to the commission is appointed by the president.

General Rules—The fundamental rules governing appointments to government positions are found in the civil service act itself. Based upon these are many other regulations formulated by the commission and promulgated by the president from time to time as new contingencies arise. The present rules were approved March 20, 1903, and went into effect April 15, 1903. In a general way they require that there must be free, open examinations of applicants for positions in the public service; that appointments shall be made from those graded highest in the examinations; that appointments to the service in Washington shall be apportioned among the states and territories according to population; that there shall be a period (six months) of probation before any absolute appointment is made; that no person in the public service is for that reason obliged to contribute to any political fund or is subject to dismissal for refusing to so contribute; that no person in the public service has any right to use his official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person. Applicants for positions shall not be questioned as to their political or religious beliefs and no discrimination shall be exercised against or in favor of any applicant or employe on account of his religion or politics. The classified civil service shall include all officers and employes in the executive civil service of the United States except laborers and persons whose appointments are subject to confirmation by the senate.

Examinations—These are conducted by boards of examiners chosen from among persons in government employ and are held twice a year in all the states and territories at convenient places. In Illinois, for example, they are usually held at Cairo, Chicago and Peoria. The dates are announced through the newspapers or by other means. They can always be learned by applying to the commission or to the nearest postoffice or custom house. Those who desire to take examinations are advised to write to the commission in Washington for the "Manual of Examinations," which is sent free to all applicants. It is revised semiannually to Jan. 1 and July 1. The January edition contains a schedule of the spring examinations and the July edition contains a schedule of the fall examinations. Full information is given as to the methods and rules governing examinations, manner of making application, qualifications required, regulations for rating examination papers, certification for and chances of appointment, and as far as possible it outlines the scope of the different subjects of general and technical examinations. These are practical in character and are designed to test the relative capacity and fitness to discharge the duties to be performed. It is necessary to obtain an average percentage of 70 to be eligible for appointment, except that applicants entitled to preference because of honorable discharge from the military or naval service for disability, resulting from wounds or sickness incurred in the line of duty, need obtain but 65 per cent. The period of eligibility is one year.

Qualifications of Applicants—No person will be examined who is not a citizen of the United States; who is not within the age limitations prescribed; who is physically disqualified for the service which he seeks; who has been guilty of criminal, infamous, dishonest or disgraceful conduct; who has been dismissed from the public service for delinquency and misconduct or has failed to receive absolute appointment after probation; who is addicted to the habitual use of intoxicating liquors to excess, or who has made a false statement in his application. The age limitations in the more important branches of the public service are: Postoffice, 18 to 45 years; rural letter carriers, 17 to 55; internal revenue, 21 years and over; railway mail, 18 to 35; lighthouse, 18 to 50; life saving, 18 to 45; general departmental, 20 and over. These age limitations are subject to change by the commission. They do not apply to applicants of the preferred class. Applicants for the position of railway mail clerk must be at least 5 feet 6 inches in height, exclusive of boots or shoes, and weigh not less than 135 pounds in ordinary clothing and have no physical defects. Applicants for certain other positions have to come up to similar physical requirements.

Method of Appointment—Whenever a vacancy exists the appointing officer makes requisition upon the civil service commission for a certification of names to fill the vacancy, specifying the kind of position vacant, the sex desired and the salary. The commission thereupon takes from the proper register of eligibles the names of three persons standing highest of the sex called for and certifies them to the appointing officer, who is required to make the selection. He may choose any one of the three names, returning the other two to the register to await further certification. The time of examination is not considered, as the highest in average percentage on the register must be certified first. If after a probationary period of six months the name of the appointee is continued on the roll of the department in which he serves the appointment is considered absolute.

Removals—No person can be removed from a competitive position except for such cause as will promote efficiency of the public service and for reasons given in writing. No examination of witnesses nor any trial shall be required except in the discretion of the officer making the removal.

Salaries—Entrance to the department service is usually in the lowest grades, the higher grades being generally filled by promotion. The usual entrance grade is about $900, but the applicant may be appointed at $840, $760 or even $600.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE IN THE UNITED STATES.

Equal suffrage with men was conferred upon the women of the United States by the ratification and formal proclamation of the nineteenth amendment to the federal constitution Aug. 26, 1920. Tennessee was the thirty-sixth and last state to ratify the amendment, which required the approval of the legislatures of three-fourths of all the states before becoming effective.

Nationwide woman suffrage in the United States was made possible in 1919 when the 66th congress at its first session adopted a joint resolution proposing an amendment, popularly known as the Susan B. Anthony amendment, to the federal constitution extending the right of suffrage to women. The resolution was as follows:

"Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled (two-thirds of each house concurring therein), That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states.

"'Article —. The right of citizens of the United States shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

"'Congress shall have the power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.'"

In the 65th congress a similar resolution was passed by the house of representatives Jan. 10, 1918, by a vote of 274 yeas to 136 nays. In the senate progress was slow and on Sept. 30 President Wilson made a personal appeal for the passage of the resolution. A vote was taken on Oct. 1, but the necessary two-thirds vote was not attained and the measure failed. On the first day of the special session of the 66th congress, May 19, 1919, Representative James R. Mann of Illinois introduced the Susan B. Anthony resolution in the house and on May 21 it was adopted by a vote of 304 to 88, the necessary two-thirds total being 262.

In the senate efforts were made to delay the adoption of the resolution, but these were unsuccessful and a vote was taken on June 4. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 56 to 25, receiving two votes more than the requisite two-thirds of the senators voting.

The resolution was drafted, substantially in the form in which it was eventually passed, by Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton in 1875. It was first introduced by Senator A. A. Sargent of California in 1878. It was defeated in the senate in 1887, 1914, 1918 and once in 1919. In the house it was defeated in 1915 by a vote of 174 yeas to 204 nays.

THE ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION.

The Rockefeller Foundation, endowed by John D. Rockefeller with more than $100,000,000, was given a charter by the state of New York in 1913. Its purpose is "to promote the well-being and advance the civilization of the people of the United States and its territories and possessions, and of foreign lands, in the acquisition and dissemination of knowledge, in the prevention of suffering and in the promotion of any and all the elements of human progress." It has devoted much of its income to assisting medical schools in various countries, including China, to medical research and to training in public health service. It has sought particularly to combat yellow fever, malaria, tuberculosis and the hookworm disease. The work has been largely through the International Health board, the China Medical board and other subsidiary or departmental organizations.

On Dec. 31, 1920, the general fund of the foundation was $171,204,624, with a reserve of $3,111,288 and special funds aggregating $116,800, making a total of $174,432,712. Its medical school lands, buildings and equipment in China were valued at $7,528,505.

The general offices of the Rockefeller Foundation are at 61 Broadway, New York city. The chairman of the board of trustees is John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the president of the foundation is George E. Vincent.

APPLICATION FOR PATENTS.

[Condensed from "Rules of Practice in the United States Patent Office."]

Business with the patent office should be transacted in writing. All office letters must be sent in the name of the "commissioner of patents." On the propriety of making an application for a patent the inventor must judge for himself. The office is open to him and its records and models may be inspected either by himself or by any attorney or expert he may call to his aid. Pending applications are preserved in secrecy, but after a patent has issued the model, specification, drawings, and all documents relating to the case are subject to general inspection, and copies, except of the model, are furnished at rates specified hereinafter.

An applicant may prosecute his own case, but he is advised, unless familiar with such matters, to employ a competent patent attorney, as the value of patents depends largely upon the skillful preparation of the specification and claims.

A patent may be obtained by any person who has invented or discovered any new and useful art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, not known or used by others in this country before his invention or discovery thereof, and not patented or described in any printed publication in this or any foreign country before his invention or discovery thereof, or more than two years prior to his application, and not patented in a country foreign to the United States, on an application filed by him or his legal representatives or assigns more than twelve months before his application, and not in public use or on sale in the United States for more than two years prior to his application, unless the same is proved to have been abandoned, upon payment of the fees required by law and other due proceedings had.

In case of the death of the inventor, the application will be made by and the patent issued to his executor or administrator.

Applications for patents must be made to the commissioner of patents and must be signed by the inventor or in case of his death by his executor or administrator. A complete application comprises the first fee of $15, a petition, specification and oath, all of which must be in the English language, and drawings when required. Papers for permanent record must be legibly written or printed in permanent ink. The application must be completed and prepared for examination within one year. The petition must be addressed to the commissioner of patents and must state the name, residence and postoffice address of the petitioner, designate by title the invention sought to be patented, contain a reference to the specification for a full disclosure of such invention and must be signed by the inventor.

The specification is a written description of the invention or discovery and of the manner and process of making, constructing, compounding and using the same, and is required to be in such full, clear, concise and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art or science to which the invention or discovery appertains or with which it is most nearly connected to make, construct, compound and use the same. In case of a mere improvement the specification must particularly point out the parts to which the improvement relates, distinguishing clearly between what is old and what is claimed as new. The following order of arrangement should be observed in framing the specification: (a) Preamble stating the name and residence of the applicant and the title of the invention. (b) General statement of the object and nature of the invention. (c) Brief description of the several views of the drawing (if the invention admit of such illustration). (d) Detailed description. (e) Claim or claims. (f) Signature of applicant.

Two or more independent inventions cannot be claimed in one application; but where several distinct inventions are dependent upon each other and mutually contribute to produce a single result they may be claimed in one application. The applicant, if the inventor, must make oath or affirmation that he does verily believe himself to be the original and first inventor or discoverer of the art, machine, manufacture, composition or improvement for which he solicits a patent; that he does not know and does not believe that the same was ever known or used before his invention or discovery thereof, and shall state of what country he is a citizen and where he resides and whether he is a sole or joint inventor of the invention claimed in his application. In every original application the applicant must distinctly state under oath that to the best of his knowledge and belief the invention has not been in public use or on sale in the United States for more than two years prior to his application or patented or described in any printed publication in any country before his invention or more than two years prior to his application, or patented in any foreign country on an application filed by himself or his legal representatives or assigns more than twelve months prior to his application in this country. If any application for patent has been filed in any foreign country by the applicant in this country, or by his legal representatives or assigns, prior to his application in this country, he shall state the country or countries in which such application has been filed, giving the date of such application, and shall also state that no application has been filed in any other country or countries than those mentioned, and if no application for patent has been filed in any foreign country he shall so state. This oath must be subscribed to by the affiant.

The oath or affirmation may be made before any person within the United States authorized by law to administer oaths, or, when the applicant resides in a foreign country, before any minister, charge d'affaires, consul or commercial agent of the United States, or by any official authorized to administer oaths in the country in which the applicant may be.

Drawings must be made upon pure white paper of a thickness corresponding to a two-sheet or three-sheet Bristol board. The surface of the paper must be calendered and smooth. India ink alone must be used to secure perfectly black and solid lines. The size of the sheet on which a drawing is made must be exactly ten by fifteen inches. One inch from its edges a single marginal line is to be drawn, leaving the "sight" precisely eight by thirteen inches. Within this margin all work and signatures must be included.

A model will be required or admitted as a part of the application only when on examination of the case in its regular order the primary examiner shall find it to be necessary or useful.

A design patent may be obtained by any person who has invented any new, original and ornamental design for an article of manufacture, not known or used by others in this country before his invention thereof, and not patented or described in any printed publication in this or any foreign country before his invention thereof, or more than two years prior to his application, and not caused to be patented by him in a foreign country on an application filed more than four months before his application in this country and not in public use or on sale in this country for more than two years prior to his application, unless the same is proved to have been abandoned, upon payment of the fees required by law and other due proceedings had, the same as in cases of inventions or discoveries.

Patents for designs are granted for three and one-half years, seven years or fourteen years as the applicant may elect. The proceedings in applications for patents for designs are substantially the same as in applications for other patents. The design must be represented by a drawing made to conform to the rules laid down for drawings of mechanical inventions.

A reissue is granted when the original patent is inoperative or invalid by reason of a defective or insufficient specification, or by reason of the patentee claiming as his invention or discovery more than he had a right to claim as new, provided the error has arisen through accident or mistake.

[For rules as to interferences, reconsideration of cases, appeals, hearings, motions, testimony, briefs and other technical or legal data, inventors are referred to the "Rules of Practice," which may be obtained free from the United States patent office.]

Every patent shall issue within a period of three months from the date of the payment of the final fee. A patent will not be antedated. Every patent will contain a short title of the invention or discovery indicating its nature and object, and a grant to the patentee, his heirs and assigns, for the term of seventeen years, of the exclusive right to vend the invention or discovery throughout the United States and its territories.

COPYRIGHT LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

The act to amend and consolidate the acts respecting copyright, in force July 1, 1909, as amended by the acts approved Aug. 24, 1912; March 2, 1913, March 28, 1914, and Dec. 18, 1919, provides that any person entitled thereto, upon complying with the provisions of the law, shall have the exclusive right (a) to print, reprint, publish, copy and vend the copyrighted work; (b) to translate the copyrighted work or make any other version of it if it be a literary work; to dramatize it if it be at nondramatic work; to convert it into a novel or other nondramatic work if it be a drama; to arrange or adapt it if it be a musical work; to finish it if it be a model or design for a work of art; (c) to deliver or authorize the delivery of the copyrighted work if it be a lecture, sermon, address or similar production; (d) to perform the copyrighted work publicly if it be a drama or, if it be a dramatic work and not reproduced in copies for sale, to vend the manuscript or any record thereof; to make or to procure the making of any transcription or record thereof by which it may in any manner be exhibited, performed or produced, and to exhibit, perform or produce it in any manner whatsoever; (e) to perform the copyrighted work publicly for profit if it be a musical composition and for the purpose of public performance for profit and to make any arrangement or setting of it in any system of notation or any form of record in which the thought of an author may be read or reproduced.

So far as it secures copyright controlling the parts of instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the musical work the law includes only compositions published after the act went into effect; it does not include the works of a foreign author or composer unless the country of which he is a citizen or subject grants similar rights to American citizens. Whenever the owner of a musical copyright has used or permitted the use of the copyrighted work upon the part of instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the musical work, any other person may make a similar use of the work upon the payment to the owner of a royalty of 2 cents on each such part manufactured. The reproduction or rendition of a musical composition by or upon coin-operated machines shall not be deemed a public performance for profit unless a fee is charged for admission to the place where the reproduction occurs.

The works for which copyright may be secured include all the writings of an author.

The application for registration shall specify to which of the following classes the work in which copyright is claimed belongs:

(a) Books, including composite and cyclopedic works, directories, gazetteers and other compilations.
(b) Periodicals, including newspapers.
(c) Lectures, sermons, addresses, prepared for oral delivery.
(d) Dramatic or dramatic-musical compositions.
(e) Musical compositions.
(f) Maps.
(g) Works of art; models or designs for works of art.
(h) Reproductions of a work of art.
(i) Drawings or plastic works of a scientific or technical character.
(j) Photographs.
(k) Prints and pictorial illustrations.
(l) Motion picture photo plays.

These specifications do not, however, limit the subject matter of copyright as defined in the law nor does any error in classification invalidate the copyright protection secured.

Copyright extends to the work of a foreign author or proprietor only in case he is domiciled in the United States at the time of the first publication of his work or if the country of which he is a citizen grants similar copyright protection to citizens of the United States.

The existence of the reciprocal conditions aforesaid shall be determined by the president of the United States, by proclamations made from time to time. Provided, however, that all works made the subject of copyright first produced or published abroad after Aug. 1, 1914, and before the date of the president's proclamation of peace, of which the authors or proprietors are citizens or subjects of any foreign state or nation granting similar protection for works by citizens of the United States, shall be entitled to the protection conferred by the copyright laws of the United States from and after the accomplishment, before the expiration of fifteen months after the date of the president's proclamation of peace, of the conditions and formalities prescribed with respect to such works by the copyright laws of the United States.

Any person entitled thereto by the law may secure copyright for his work by publication thereof with the notice of copyright required by the act, and such notice shall be affixed to each copy published or offered for sale in the United States. Such person may obtain registration of his claim to copyright by complying with the provisions of the act, including the deposit of copies, whereupon the register of copyrights shall issue to him a certificate as provided for in the law. Copyright may also be had of the works of an author of which copies are not reproduced for sale by the deposit with claim of copyright of one complete copy, if it be a lecture or similar production, or a dramatic, musical or dramatico-musical composition; of a title and description, with one print taken from each scene or act, if the work be a motion-picture photo play; of a photographic print if it be a photograph; of a title and description, with not less than two prints taken from different sections of a complete motion picture, if the work be a motion picture other than a photo play, or of a photograph or other identifying reproduction thereof if it be a work of art or a plastic work or drawing.

After copyright has been secured there must be deposited in the copyright office in Washington, D. C., two complete copies of the best edition thereof then published, or if the work is by a foreign author and published in a foreign country one complete copy of the best edition then published, which copies or copy, if the work be a book or periodical, shall have been produced in accordance with the manufacturing provisions of the act, or if such work be a contribution to a periodical for which contribution special registration is requested, one copy of the issue or issues containing such contribution. Failure to deposit the copies within a given time after notice from the register of copyrights makes the proprietor of the copyright liable to a fine of $100 and twice the retail price of the work, and the copyright becomes void.

The text of all books and periodicals specified in paragraphs (a) and (b) above, except the original text of a book of foreign origin in a language other than English, must in order to secure protection be printed from type set within the limits of the United States, either by hand, machinery or other process, and the printing of the text and the binding of the books must also be done within the United States. An affidavit of such manufacture is required.

The notice of copyright required consists either of the word "copyright" or the abbreviation "copr.," accompanied by the name of the copyright proprietor, and if the work be a printed literary, musical or dramatic work, the notice must also include the year in which the copyright was secured by publication. In the case, however, of copies of works specified in paragraphs (f) to (k) inclusive (given above) the notice may consist of the letter C. inclosed within a circle, accompanied by the initials, monogram, mark or symbol of the copyright proprietor, provided his name appears elsewhere on the copies. In the case of a book or other printed publication the notice shall be applied on the title page or on the page immediately following, or if a periodical either upon the title page or upon the first page of text of each separate number or under the title heading; or if a musical work upon its title page or the first page of music.

Where the copyright proprietor has sought to comply with the law with respect to notice, the omission of such notice by mistake from a particular copy or copies shall not invalidate the copyright or prevent recovery for infringement against any person who, after actual notice of the copyright, begins an undertaking to infringe it, but shall prevent the recovery of damages against an innocent infringer who has been misled by the omission of the notice.

In the case of a book in English published abroad before publication in this country, the deposit in the copyright office within thirty days of one copy of the foreign edition, with a request for the reservation of the copyright, secures for the author or owner an ad interim copyright for thirty days after such deposit is made.

The copyright secured by the act endures for twenty-eight years from the date of the first publication. In the case of any posthumous work, periodical, encyclopedic or other composite work upon which the copyright was originally secured by the proprietor thereof, or of any work copyrighted by a corporate body, or by an employer for whom such work is made for hire, the proprietor for such copyright shall be entitled to a renewal of the copyright in such work for the further term of twenty-eight years when application for such renewal shall have been made within one year prior to the expiration of the original term. In the case of any other copyrighted work, including a contribution by an individual author to a periodical or to a cyclopedic or other composite work when such contribution has been separately copyrighted, the author of such work, if living, or the heirs, executors or next of kin, if the author be dead, shall be entitled to a renewal of the copyright for a further term of twenty-eight years. In default of such application for renewal the copyright in any work shall end at the expiration of twenty-eight years.

If any person shall infringe the copyright in any work protected under the copyright laws of the United States, such person shall be liable;

(a) To an injunction restraining such infringement.

(b) To pay to the copyright proprietor such damages as the copyright proprietor may have suffered due to the infringement, as well as all the profits which the infringer shall have made from such infringement, and in proving profits the plaintiff shall be required to prove sales only and the defendant shall be required to prove every element of cost which he claims, or in lieu of actual damages or profits such damages as to the court shall appear to be just, and in assessing such damages the court may, in its discretion, allow the amounts as hereinafter stated (in numbered paragraphs), but in the case of a newspaper reproduction of a copyrighted photograph such damages shall not exceed the sum of $200 nor be less than $50, and in the case of the infringement of an undramatized or nondramatic work by means of motion pictures, where the infringer shall show that he was not aware that he was infringing, and that such infringement could not have been reasonably foreseen, such damages shall not exceed $100; and in the case of an infringement of a copyrighted dramatic or dramatico-musical work by a maker of motion pictures and his agencies for the distribution thereof to exhibitors where such infringer shows that he was not aware that he was infringing a copyrighted work and that such infringements could not have been reasonably foreseen, the entire sum of such damages recoverable by the copyright proprietor from such infringing maker and his agencies shall not exceed the sum of $5,000 nor be less than $250, and such damages shall in no other case exceed the sum of $250 and shall not be regarded as a penalty. The foregoing exceptions shall not deprive the copyright proprietor of any other remedy given him under this law.

1. In the case of a painting, statue or sculpture, $10 for every infringing copy made or sold by or found in the possession of the infringer or his agents or employes.

2. In the case of any work enumerated in the list (given above) of works for which copyright may be asked, except a painting, statue or sculpture, $1 for every infringing copy.

3. In the case of a lecture, sermon or address, $50 for every infringing delivery.

4. In the case of dramatic or dramatico-musical or a choral or orchestral composition, $100 for the first and $50 for every subsequent infringing performance; in the case of other musical compositions, $10 for every infringing performance.

(c) To deliver up on oath all articles alleged to infringe a copyright.

(d) To deliver up on oath for destruction all the infringing copies or devices, as well as all plates, molds, matrices or other means for making such infringing copies, as the court may order.

(e) Whenever the owner of a musical copyright has used or permitted the use of the copyrighted work upon the parts of musical instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the musical work, then in case of infringement by the unauthorized manufacture, use or sale of interchangeable parts, such as disks, rolls, bands or cylinders for use in mechanical music-producing machines, no criminal action shall be brought, but in a civil action an injunction may be granted upon such terms as the court may impose and the plaintiff shall be entitled to recover in lieu of profits and damages a royalty as provided in the act.

Any person who shall willfully and for profit infringe any copyright, or willfully aid or abet such infringement, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for not exceeding one year or by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, or both, in the discretion of the court. It is provided, however, that nothing in the act shall prevent the performance of religious or secular works, such as oratorios, cantatas, masses or octavo choruses by public schools, church choirs or vocal societies, provided the performance is for charitable or educational purposes and not for profit.

Any person who shall fraudulently place a copyright notice upon any uncopyrighted article, or shall fraudulently remove or alter the notice upon any copyrighted article, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be subject to a fine of not less than $100 or more than $1,000. Any person who shall knowingly sell or issue any article bearing a notice of United States copyright which has not been copyrighted in this country, or who shall knowingly import any article bearing such notice, shall be liable to a fine of $100.

During the existence of the American copyright in any book the importation of any piratical copies thereof or of any copies not produced in accordance with the manufacturing provisions of the copyright law, or of any plates of the same not made from type set in this country, or any copies produced by lithographic or photo-engraving process not performed within the United States, is prohibited. Except as to piratical copies this does not apply:

(a) To works in raised characters for the blind;

(b) To a foreign newspaper or magazine, although containing matter copyrighted in the United States printed or reprinted by authority of the copyright owner, unless such newspaper or magazine contains also copyright matter printed without such authorization;

(c) To the authorized edition of a book in a foreign language of which only a translation into English has been copyrighted in this country;

(d) To any book published abroad with the authorization of the author or copyright proprietor under the following circumstances:

1. When imported, not more than one copy at a time, for individual use and not for sale, but such privilege of importation shall not extend to a foreign reprint of a book by an American author copyrighted in the United States;

2. When imported by or for the use of the United States;

3. When imported for use and not for sale, not more than one copy of any such book in any one invoice, in good faith, by or for any society or institution incorporated for educational, literary, philosophical, scientific or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for any college, academy, school or seminary of learning, or for any state school, college, university or free public library in the United States;

4. When such books form parts of libraries or collections purchased en bloc for the use of societies, institutions or libraries, or form parts of the library or personal baggage belonging to persons or families arriving from foreign countries and are not intended for sale.

No criminal actions shall be maintained under the copyright law unless the same be begun within three years after the cause of action arose.

Copyright may be assigned, mortgaged or bequeathed by will.

There shall be appointed by the librarian of congress a register of copyrights at a salary of $4,000 a year and an assistant register at $3,000 a year.

These with their subordinate assistants shall perform all the duties relating to the registration of copyrights. The register of copyrights shall keep such record books in the copyright office as are required to carry out the provisions of the law, and whenever deposit has been made in the copyright office of a copy of any work under the provisions of the act he shall make entry thereof.

In the case of each entry the person recorded as the claimant of the copyright shall be entitled to a certificate of registration under seal of the copyright office.

The register of copyrights shall receive and the persons to whom the services designated are rendered shall pay the following fees: For the registration of any work subject to copyright, $1, which sum is to include a certificate of registration under seal: Provided, That in the case of photographs the fee shall be 50 cents where a certificate is not demanded. For every additional certificate of registration made, 50 cents. For recording and certifying any instrument of writing for the assignment of copyright or license, or for any copy of such certificate or license, duly certified, if not over 300 words in length, $1; if more than 300 and less than 1,000, $2; if more than 1,000 words in length, $1 additional for each 1,000 words or fraction thereof over 300 words. For recording the notice of user or acquiescence specified in the act, 25 cents for each notice of not over fifty words and an additional 25 cents for each additional 100 words. For comparing any copy of an assignment with the record of such document in the copyright office and certifying the same under seal, $1. For recording the extension or renewal of copyright, 50 cents. For recording the transfer of the proprietorship of copyrighted articles, 10 cents for each title of a book or other article in addition to the fee for recording the instrument of assignment. For any requested search of copyright office records, indexes or deposits, 50 cents for each full hour consumed in making such search. Only one registration at one fee shall be required in the case of several volumes of the same book deposited at the same time.

REGISTRATION OF TRADE-MARKS.

Under the act of Feb. 20, 1905, as subsequently amended, the owner of a trade-mark used in commerce with foreign nations, or among the several states, or with the Indian tribes, provided such owner shall be domiciled within the United States or resides or is located in any foreign country which affords similar privileges to the citizens of the United States, may obtain registration for such trade-mark by complying with the following requirements: First, by filing in the patent office an application therefor, addressed to the commissioner of patents, signed by the applicant, specifying his name, domicile, location and citizenship; the class of merchandise and the particular description of the goods comprised in such class to which the trade-mark is appropriated; a statement of the mode in which the same is applied and affixed to the goods and the length of time during which the trade-mark has been used; a description of the trade-mark itself shall be included, if desired by the applicant or required by the commissioner, provided such description is of a character to meet the approval of the commissioner. With this statement shall be filed a drawing of the trade-mark, signed by the applicant or his attorney, and such number of specimens of the trade-mark as actually used as may be required by the commissioner of patents.

The application must be accompanied by a written declaration, verified by the applicant or by a member of the firm or an officer of the corporation or association applying, to the effect that the applicant believes himself or the firm in whose behalf he makes the application to be the owner of the trade-mark sought to be registered and that no other person or concern, to the best of the applicant's knowledge, has the right to use such trade-mark in the United States, either in the identical form or in such near resemblance thereto as might be calculated to deceive.

No mark by which the goods of the owner of the mark may be distinguished from other goods of the same class shall be refused registration on account of the nature of such mark unless it—

(a) Consists of or comprises immoral or scandalous matter.

(b) Consists of or comprises the flag or coat of arms or other insignia of the United States or any simulation thereof, or of any state or municipality or of any foreign nation, or of any design or picture that has been or may hereafter be adopted by any fraternal society as its emblem, or of any name, distinguishing mark, character, emblem, colors, flag or banner adopted by any institution, organization, club or society which was incorporated in any state in the United States prior to the date of the adoption and use by the applicant: Provided, that the name, etc., was adopted and publicly used prior to the date of the adoption and use by the applicant. Trade-marks so similar to others as to cause confusion or mistakes shall not be registered. No mark which consists merely of a name not written, impressed or woven in some particular manner or in association with the portrait of an individual, or merely in words or devices which are descriptive of the goods with which they are used or merely a geographical name or term, shall be registered. No portrait of a living individual may be registered as a trade-mark except with his consent in writing.

Certificates of registration remain in force twenty years and may be renewed from time to time for like periods on payment of the required fees. Following are the rates for trade-mark fees:

Original application	$10.00
Application for renewal	10.00
Notice of opposition	10.00
Appeals from examiners to commissioner	15.00

For certified and uncertified copies of certificate and other papers and for recording transfers and other papers the fees are the same as in patent cases. (See "Applications for Patents" above.)

Further information may be had by applying to commissioner of patents, Washington, D. C.

GEOGRAPHIC CENTER OF THE UNITED STATES.

According to the United States geological survey the geographic center of the continental United States (exclusive of Alaska) is in the eastern part of Smith county, Kansas, latitude 39 degrees 50 minutes, longitude 98 degrees 35 minutes. Smith county is one of the northern tier of Kansas counties bordering on Nebraska and is about midway between the eastern and western boundaries of the state. The point indicated as the geographic center is not far from the town of Lebanon, a station on the Rock Island railroad.

The geographic center of the United States and its island possessions has not been officially determined, but taking the Virgin islands as the easternmost limit, the Aleutian islands as the westernmost, Alaska as the northernmost and the Samoan islands belonging to the United States as the southernmost extremity it is evident that the central point in latitude and longitude must be in the Pacific ocean west of San Francisco, Cal. Including the Philippines it would be in about the same longitude as Hawaii.

FUNCTIONS AND DUTIES.

Under an act of congress approved Jan. 28, 1915, it was provided that in lieu of the then existing revenue cutter service and life saving service there should be established an organization to be known as the coast guard, which was to constitute a part of the military forces of the United States, operating under the secretary of the navy in time of war and under the treasury department in time of peace. The coast guard was transferred to the navy department April 6, 1917, and was returned to the treasury department by executive order Aug. 28, 1919. The revenue cutter service had existed since 1790, while the life saving service had its beginning in 1848, although it was not made into a separate establishment until June 18, 1878. The consolidation of the two services was completed in 1915. The coast guard being a part of the military forces of the government, the military system of the former revenue cutter service was utilized as a basis for the organization of the coast guard. The transfer of the personnel of the former life saving service to the coast guard was accomplished by issuing appointments as commissioned officers, warrant officers and petty officers to the district superintendents, keepers and No. 1 surfmen, respectively, and regularly enlisting the surfmen. On June 30, 1921, there were 414 warrant officers and 3,545 petty officers and other enlisted men. The pay of the commissioned personnel, except for the grade of district superintendent, corresponds with the pay and allowances of like rank in the army. The pay of warrant officers and enlisted men remains the same as before the consolidation of the service. Warrant officers are appointed by the secretary of the treasury and hold their appointments during good behavior. Petty officers and other men are enlisted for periods of one year. Warrant and petty officers receive 10 per cent increase for every five years of service, not to exceed 40 per cent in all. Enlisted men receive an increase for each three years of continuous service up to and including fifteen years.

The authorized commissioned personnel of the coast guard is 270, divided into the following grades: One captain commandant, 6 senior captains, 31 captains, 37 first lieutenants, 94 second and third lieutenants, 1 engineer in chief, 6 captains of engineers, 28 first lieutenants and 51 second and third lieutenants of engineers, 2 constructors with rank of first lieutenant, 1 district superintendent with relative rank of captain, 3 district superintendents with relative rank of first lieutenant, 4 district superintendents with relative rank of second lieutenant, and 5 district superintendents with relative rank of third lieutenant. A coast guard academy is maintained in New London, Conn. June 30, 1921, there were fourteen cadets of the line at the academy. The school course extends over three years and embraces instruction in professional and academic subjects. Admission is by competitive examination and candidates must be not less than 18 years nor more than 24 years of age. Candidates for the engineer corps must be not less than 20 nor more than 25 years of age.

By law the officers of the coast guard rank as follows:

Captain commandant, with colonel in army and captain in navy.
Senior captain and engineer in chief, with lieutenant-colonel in army and commander in navy.
Captain and captain of engineers, with major in army and lieutenant-commander in navy.
First lieutenant and first lieutenant of engineers, with captain in army and senior lieutenant in navy.
Second lieutenant and second lieutenant of engineers, with first lieutenant in army and junior lieutenant in navy.
Third lieutenant and third lieutenant of engineers, with second lieutenant in army and ensign in navy.

DUTIES OF COAST GUARD.

In general the duties of the coast guard may be classified as follows:

1. Rendering assistance to vessels in distress and saving life and property.
2. Destruction or removal of wrecks, derelicts and other floating dangers to navigation.
3. Extending medical aid to United States vessels engaged in deep sea fisheries.
4. Protection of the customs revenue.

ASSASSINATION OF FIELD MARSHAL WILSON.

Field Marshal Sir Henry Wilson, former chief of staff of the British army and head of the Ulster defensive arrangements against the Sinn Fein, was shot and killed as he was in the act of entering his home in London, England, June 22, 1922. He had just returned in full uniform after having unveiled a monument to the railway war dead at the Liverpool street railway station and was walking toward the door of his residence when two men armed with big army revolvers approached. He drew his dress sword to defend himself but the men fired several times at him and he fell with bullets in his forehead and ankle. He died in ten minutes without regaining consciousness.

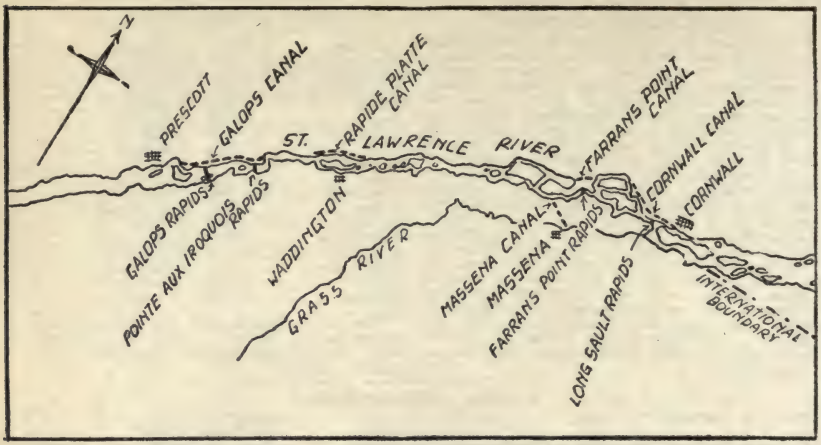
The murderers attempted to escape by commandeering a taxicab but were chased by several men who had seen the shooting and were captured by policemen who had joined in the pursuit. The gunmen gave their names as James Connelly and James O'Brien.

The funeral of the field marshal took place in St. Paul's cathedral on June 26. The cortege from the house to the church was witnessed by great crowds. About 6,000 troops were in line and military, diplomatic and political celebrities marched through the rain. Marshal Foch and Gen. Weygand of France walked with the Duke of Connaught in the procession and attended the services. Field Marshals French, Haig, Robertson and Admiral Beatty were among the pallbearers.

Connelly and O'Brien were hanged Aug. 10.

Field Marshal Sir Henry Hughes Wilson was born May 5, 1864. He took an active part in the Burma and South African campaigns and in the world war.

THE ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY.



RAPIDS AND CANALS ON ST. LAWRENCE BETWEEN PRESCOTT AND CORNWALL.

RAPIDS AND CANALS ON ST. LAWRENCE BETWEEN CORNWALL AND MONTREAL.

Interest in the improvement of the St. Lawrence river so as to permit its navigation by ocean steamships between the ports on the great lakes and those of foreign countries was increased in 1922 by the publication of the report made by the international joint commission. This was submitted to the senate and the house of representatives by President Harding on Jan. 26. It was signed by William H. Smith and Lawrence J. Burpee, joint secretaries of the commission.

On Jan. 21, 1920, the governments of the United States and Canada referred to the commission for investigation and report, under the terms of article 9 of the treaty of Jan. 11, 1909, certain questions relating to the improvement of the St. Lawrence river between Lake Ontario and Montreal for navigation and power. Briefly these questions were:

QUESTIONS PROPOUNDED.

1. What further improvement in the St. Lawrence river, between Montreal and Lake Ontario, is necessary to make the same navigable for deep-draft vessels of either the lake or ocean-going type? What draft of water is recommended and what is the estimated cost? In answering this question the commission is asked to consider: (a) Navigation interests alone, whether by the construction of locks and dams in the river, by side canals with the necessary locks or by a combination of the two; (b) the combination of navigation and power to obtain the greatest beneficial use of the waters of the river.

2. Which of the schemes submitted by the government or other engineers is preferred and why?

3. What general method of procedure and in what general order shall the various physical and administrative features of the improvement be carried out?

4. Upon what basis shall the capital cost of the completed improvement be apportioned to each country?

5. Upon what basis shall the costs of operation and maintenance be apportioned to each country?

The report summarizes the instructions to the board of engineers created by the two governments. This board consisted of Lieut.-Col. W. P. Wooten of the corps of engineers, U. S. army, and W. A. Bowden, chief engineer of the department of railways and canals, Canada. Before giving the replies of the commission to the foregoing questions the report furnishes some interesting details of the physical characteristics of the great lakes-Gulf of St. Lawrence system of waterways and the progressive efforts of Canada and the United States to improve navigation, together with a brief history of the development of commerce in the region under consideration.

PHYSICAL CHARACTERISTICS.

The ultimate source of the St. Lawrence river is at the head of the St. Louis river, at the extreme western end of Lake Superior, 1,870 miles from the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The basin of the St. Lawrence is a great transverse valley, 309,500 square miles in area. It extends into the heart of the continent, but much the larger part of the basin lies north of the international boundary.

The St. Lawrence is remarkable for the number of expansions in its course. Starting with Lake Superior, which empties through St. Mary's river, the next great expansion is Lake Huron and Lake Michigan, which both discharge through St. Clair river into Lake St. Clair, thence by the Detroit river into Lake Erie and by the Niagara into Lake Ontario. The St. Lawrence proper has in its course three minor expansions—Lake St. Francis, Lake St. Louis and Lake St. Peter—the first and second above and the third below Montreal. The total fall between Lake Superior and the gulf is 603 feet. As a whole the waterway is deep, the shoalest places being in St. Mary's river, Lake St. Clair, Lake St. Louis and Lake St. Peter.

Lake Superior is 383 miles long, with an average width of eighty miles, and its area is 31,800 square miles. Lake Huron has an area of 23,200 square miles, is 223 miles long and its average breadth is 100 miles. Lake Michigan is 321 miles long, with an average width of fifty-eight miles. Its area is 22,450 square miles. Lake St. Clair is twenty-six miles long, with an average width of twenty miles and an area of 445 square miles. Lake Erie is 236 miles long, with an average width of thirty-eight miles and an area of 9,940 square miles. Lake Ontario is 190 miles long, with an average width of forty miles and an area of 7,260 square miles. The mean and maximum depths of these lakes are: Lake Superior, 475 and 1,012; Huron, 250 and 750; Michigan, 325 and 870; Erie, 70 and 210; Ontario, 300 and 738.

The St. Lawrence proper flows from one to three miles wide from Lake Ontario to Quebec and with a much greater width from Quebec to the gulf. The river is navigable for all classes of vessels down to Prescott, where the Gallops rapids begin. Below these are the Rapide Plat and the Long Sault, the latter immediately above Cornwall. Lake St. Francis follows and between that lake and Lake St. Louis are the Coteau, Cedars and Cascades rapids. The last rapids are the Lachine and a minor fall at Montreal known as St. Mary current. No rapids obstruct the river below Montreal.

EXISTING IMPROVEMENTS.

As shown in the report of the joint commission the work of improving the navigation facilities of the great lakes and St. Lawrence waterway system by means of canals and channel dredging has been going on for about a century. Up to 1920 the total expenditure on rivers, harbors and canals in the water system from Lake Superior to the Gulf of St. Lawrence by the United States had been $146,000,000 and by Canada about $194,000,000, or altogether $340,000,000. This does not include expenditures by the states of New York, Ohio and Illinois or the Chicago sanitary district. The United States had spent in round numbers on ship channels connecting the waters of the great lakes the following sums: In St. Mary's river, $9,400,000; St. Clair river, $769,000; Lake St. Clair, $2,900,000; Detroit river, $12,500,000; Niagara river, $98,000; St. Lawrence river, $68,000.

By means of these improvements by the American and Canadian governments vessels loaded down to 14 feet can pass between Lake Superior and Montreal. Between Montreal and Quebec the channel is 30 feet deep; below Quebec the river is navigable by ocean craft of all sizes.

From Montreal to Prescott is 119.10 miles, 40 per cent of which is through canals, but as the level of Lake Ontario is reached above Galops rapids, 11.35 miles from Montreal, a little more than 40 per cent of the distance to the Lake Ontario level is through canals. This distance of 119 miles is covered by steamers in 8 hours coming down stream and in 19 hours going up the stream toward the west.

The following statement, condensed from a report by Col. J. G. Warren, U. S. corps of engineers, gives a general survey of the channel improvements in the connecting rivers of the great lakes and in the St. Lawrence:

Beginning at Duluth, at the western end of Lake Superior, there is ample depth and sea room until after passing Point Iroquois at the head of St. Mary's river. This river and the shoals above it are about 64 miles long and have been improved at various places. Disregarding for the present the canals and locks at the falls of the river, the limiting channel depth and width in the river are: From Point Iroquois to the canals, a distance of 14 miles, there are six vessel courses and the channel has a least width of 800 feet, with a least depth of 23 feet at low water except at Vidal shoals, where the clear depth is 20.8 feet. Through the main channel of the Hay lake route the depth is 21 feet. Between Hay lake and Mud lake two channels have been provided, passing on either side of Neebish island. The west channel is for down-bound traffic and the other for up-bound traffic. Both can be navigated at night.

After entering Lake Huron the traffic divides, one portion going toward Lake Michigan and the other southward toward Lake Erie. Width and depth are restricted at the entrance to the St. Clair river. The channel in Lake Huron has been made 2,400 feet wide and 19½ feet draft at low water. Thence the natural width and depth are sufficient for vessels of 24 feet draft at low water for 36½ miles to the mouth of this river in Lake St. Clair, where there are two canals about 3½ miles long, one for up-bound traffic and the other for down-bound traffic, each 300 feet wide and 20 feet deep at low water. The channel across Lake St. Clair has a least width of 800 feet and a depth of 20 feet at low water. Thence through the Detroit river the natural depth and width are ample to the head of the Fighting Island channel, which is 800 feet wide and 23 feet deep at low water. The channel then divides, one branch, the Livingstone channel, with a limiting width of 300 feet and a depth of 22 feet at low water, for down-bound traffic, and the Amherstburg channel, with a width of 800 feet and a depth of 21 feet at low water, for up-bound traffic. After entering Lake Erie there is ample depth and sea room.

From the lower end of Lake Erie the Welland canal connects with Lake Ontario and there is ample depth and sea room in that lake down to its discharge into the St. Lawrence river proper. For a distance of 68 miles from Lake Ontario to Galops rapids the river has a fall of only 1 foot and the channel is more than 30 feet deep, with a minimum width of about 500 feet. At the Galops rapids the river has a fall of about 10 feet in 3 miles, with two channels, the northern one being navigable by light draft boats only and the southern one being unnavigable. From the foot of Galops rapids at Lotus (Sheldon) island to the head of Ogden island, 8 miles, fall of about 9½ feet, the river is confined to a single tortuous channel, consisting of three pools, 30 feet or more deep, separated at Sparrowhawk point and Rockway point by narrow channels, controlling depths 20 to 25 feet, having maximum current velocities of 7 miles an hour on curves of 2,000 feet radius. The international boundary bisects this channel. The Galops rapids and swift-current channel to Rockway point are overcome by navigation through the Galops canal in Canada.

From the head of Ogen island to the foot of Crysler island (Bradford's point), 11 miles, fall about 18 feet, the river is again divided by islands into two channels. The Canadian channel is much the larger; the upper four miles comprise the Rapide du Plat, which is overcome by the Rapide Plat or Morrisburg canal. The American channel is narrow, tortuous and not navigable except by small steam or motor boats.

From Bradford's point to Richards bay, 7 miles, fall about 3 feet, the river consists practically of a single wide pool or channel, nearly all on the United States side of the boundary line, 30 to 50 feet deep, except at the head of Cat island, where it is 20 to 23 feet deep. On the Canadian side within this reach is found the Farrans point canal. Descending vessels run the rapids.

Just below Richards bay, at Tallcotts point, the Long Sault rapids begin and extend, including the rapid-current channel below the rapids, for 11½ miles down to Massena point (mouth of Grass river), with a fall of 48 feet. The American channel is commercially unnavigable. The Canadian channel within this reach is navigable only by special passenger steamers and small craft which run the rapids. The rapids are overcome by the Cornwall canal, used by vessels both ascending and descending. From Massena point to St. Regis, where the international boundary leaves the river, 6½ miles, fall about 2½ feet, the United States channel is of ample width and 30 to 50 feet deep, except opposite the mouth of the Raquette river, where the controlling depth is 22 feet. This stretch of the river is practically an arm of the Lake St. Francis pool, which lake is wholly in Canada.

From St. Regis to the sea the St. Lawrence navigable waterway is as follows: Channel through Lake St. Francis, 30 miles, available for vessels of 14 feet draft to the head of the Soulanges canal. The canal is on the north bank of the river and extends from Coteau landing to Cascade point and overcomes the Coteau, Cedars and Cascade rapids. It is used by vessels both descending and ascending. From the Soulanges canal to Lachine canal there is 16 feet of navigable water through Lake St. Louis. The Lachine canal extends from Lachine to Montreal and vessels lock down from it into the St. Lawrence river below the Lachine rapids, the first rapids barring the ascent of the river.

Montreal is at the head of ocean navigation on the St. Lawrence, 1,003 miles from the Strait of Belle Isle. The St. Lawrence river ship channel, 330 miles, between Montreal and Father point, has a depth of 30 feet with a width of 450 feet in the straight portions and 600 to 700 feet in the bends between Montreal and Quebec, 160 miles, and a width of 1,000 feet everywhere below Quebec. The remaining distance of 673 miles is in the broad mouth of the river and in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

CONNECTING GREAT LAKES.

The principal canals connecting the great lakes are the Welland between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, passing Niagara falls and rapids, and the Sault Ste. Marie, overcoming the rapids in St. Mary's river between Lake Superior and Lakes Huron and Michigan.

New Welland Canal.

The new Welland canal, which connects Port Colborne on Lake Erie with Port Weller on Lake Ontario, is well under way. It was designed to accommodate the largest vessels likely to be built on the great lakes. It is 25 feet deep and has seven locks each with a lift of 46½ feet. Each lock is 800 feet long by 80 feet wide, with a depth at extreme low water of 30 feet. Provision has been made for a channel with a depth of 35 feet when conditions make it desirable. The Welland canal now in use runs from Port Colborne to Port Dalhousie on Lake Ontario. It has a depth of 14 feet and is provided with twenty-five masonry locks.

Sault Ste. Marie Canals.

There are two canals through St. Mary's river, which flows into Lake Huron from Lake Superior. One is Canadian and the other American, 1.6 miles and 1.11 miles in length respectively. The American canal is 22 feet deep and the Canadian 20. There are four locks in the former and one in the latter.

SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS.

The commission finds that there is nothing to warrant the belief that ocean-going vessels of suitable draft could not safely navigate the waters between Lake Ontario and Montreal as well as the entire waterway from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the head of the great lakes or that such vessels would hesitate to do so if cargoes are available.

As to the economical practicability of the waterway the commission finds that there exists to-day between the region economically tributary to the great lakes and overseas points, as well as between the same region and the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards, a volume of outbound and inbound trade that might reasonably be expected to seek this route sufficient to justify the expense involved in its improvement.

It finds that the existing means of transportation between the tributary area in the United States and the seaboard are altogether inadequate. The remedy, in the opinion of the commission, lies in the utilization of every practicable means of communication and particularly of the wonderful natural waterway extending from the heart of the continent to the Atlantic, together with such a system of co-operation between the railways and waterways as would at one and the same time bring the loads the railways have to carry within practicable limits and give the west an additional route for its foreign and coastwise trade. The experience of Great Britain, Germany, Belgium and other countries demonstrates the tremendous importance of water communication and the manifest advantage of linking up rail and water routes. An example of effective co-ordination of railway and water routes is found in the Canadian Pacific railway, which, in conjunction with its rail system extending from ocean to ocean, maintains lines of steamers not only on the Atlantic and Pacific but also on the inland waters of British Columbia and on the great lakes.

With regard to the division of expenses between the United States and Canada the commission finds that each country should be debited with its share of the entire cost of all works necessary for navigation, including the cost of the Welland ship canal, based on the proportion the cargo tonnage carried to and from its own ports by way of the St. Lawrence bears to the entire tonnage by the same route. The ratio to be charged to each obviously would require to be readjusted periodically.

In regard to the water-power side of the question the commission finds that this must be regarded as subsidiary to navigation. In apportioning between the two countries the water power capable of development in the international section of the St. Lawrence each country should be charged with such quantities of power as are set apart to meet the requirements of existing plants. In regard to the distribution between the two countries of the cost of "power works," the commission is of the opinion that each country will be entitled to half the available power in the international section of the river, and the cost of the works necessary solely for the development of that power should be borne equally by each country. It is further of the opinion that the cost of "navigation works" required for the combined use of navigation and power over and above the cost of works necessary for navigation alone should be apportioned equally between the two countries.

In regard to the method of control the commission believes that all "navigation works" lying wholly within one country should be maintained and operated by the country in which they are located; that "navigation works," not lying wholly within one country and not capable of economic and efficient administration as complete and independent units should be maintained and operated by an international board on which each country should have equal representation. All "power works" should be built, maintained and operated by the country in which they are located.

The commission makes recommendations in harmony with the foregoing conclusions.

REPLIES TO QUESTIONS.

In reply to the specific questions put to it the commission says:

1. The commission believes (a) that the greatest beneficial use of the waters of the St. Lawrence river between Montreal and Lake Ontario may be obtained by a combination of navigation and power development in the international section and of navigation alone in the national section, with power development therein at some future date.

(b) The commission approves of a combination of dams and side canals with locks in the international section and side canals with locks in the national section.

(c) The draft recommended is 25 feet in the canals and 30 feet on the sills of the locks.

(d) The estimated cost of the completed work between Montreal and Lake Ontario as recommended by the engineering board is about $252,000,000. To this must be added the cost of the New Welland ship canal to ascertain the total expenditure involved.

2. The scheme submitted by the engineering board is preferred. The commission recommends further examination and study of the engineering board's plans in connection with various reports submitted to the commission.

3. The commission believes that the works at or near the Long Sault rapids, whose completion may be expected to require the longest time, should be begun as soon as funds are available; all other works both in the international and national sections of the river should be begun in time to insure their completion at approximately the same time as the Long Sault works. The administrative features of the improvement have been set forth in the foregoing summary of conclusions.

4. (a) The capital cost of "navigation works" and of the new Welland canal to be apportioned between the two countries on the basis of the benefits to be derived by each country from the use of the waterway.

(b) The capital cost of "power works" to be borne by the country in which they are located.

(c) The capital cost of "navigation works" for the combined use of navigation and power over and above the cost of works necessary for navigation alone to be apportioned equally between the two countries.

5. The apportionment of costs of operation and maintenance of all works both for the purposes of navigation and of power to be on the same basis as the costs of the construction of such works respectively.

6. [The reply to the question as to method of control is the same as that given above in the summary of conclusions.]

7. The commission is of the opinion that regulating Lake Ontario will increase the low water flow in the St. Lawrence ship channel below Montreal. This increase in low water flow will be secured by works provided in connection with the improvement of the upper St. Lawrence and consequently at no additional cost.

8. The commission has brought together a very considerable volume of data relating to the resources, commerce and industry of the area that it is believed would be economically tributary to the proposed deep waterway and has based certain conclusions upon those data. [The main conclusion is there exists in the region tributary to the great lakes abundant material, raw and manufactured, to furnish cargoes for ocean ships from lake ports to overseas and coastwise ports; that these commodities already form a large part of the foreign and domestic trade of the United States and Canada; that in many instances, with the existing transportation facilities, the quantity of foreign exports is restricted because of the difficulty in guaranteeing delivery in a reasonable time and because of the excessive transportation charges; that the large and growing demands of the same region for foreign products and the products of the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards will insure ample cargoes, and that the banking and other facilities of this region are adequate to take care of its foreign trade.] It is impossible to state in specific terms the extent to which the improvement would develop the resources, commerce and industry of each country.

9. It is also impossible to give a specific answer to the question as to what traffic, incoming and outgoing, in kind and quantity, is likely to be carried upon the proposed route. The commission has reached the general conclusion that sufficient traffic will seek the new water route, irrespective of new traffic created as the result of opening that route, to justify its construction. It is convinced that the traffic available for the new waterway will rapidly increase with the further development of the area tributary thereto and that the creation of new hydraulic power in connection with the waterway will stimulate industrial growth both in manufactures and transportation.

In the course of its report the commission replies to some of the objections raised to the St. Lawrence river route. It points out that, though the ship channel below Montreal is long, restricted and tortuous, though the lower St. Lawrence and the gulf are subject to fog and ice conditions, and though the waterway is open to trade only about seven and a half months a year as against the twelve months' period of the Atlantic coast, the port of Montreal actually has a greater volume of foreign trade than any other port on the American continent with the single exception of New York. It is also pointed out that more than 80 per cent of the vessels listed in Lloyd's Register for 1918-1919 had drafts of 25 feet or less and that more than 99 per cent drew 30 feet or less. It never was intended that great modern liners should use the proposed waterway.

It is estimated that the total undeveloped power in the St. Lawrence between Prescott and Montreal is 4,000,000 horsepower, of which five-twelfths, or 1,665,000 horsepower, is in the upper reach. The total already developed is 300,000 horsepower, of which 200,000 horsepower is on the Canadian side. It is calculated that the total power of the St. Lawrence in the international reach would save 80,000,000 tons of coal in 60 years if used as secondary power to steam control stations in the United States and would save 34,000,000 tons as primary power, or a total saving of 35,500,000 per annum.

APPROVED BY PRESIDENT.

In a speech at an agricultural conference in Washington, D. C., Jan. 23, 1922, President Harding said:

"I have spoken of the advantage which Europe enjoys because of its access to the sea, the cheapest and surest transportation facility. In our own country is presented one of the world's most attractive opportunities for extension of the seaways many hundred miles inland. The heart of the continent, with its vast resources in both agriculture and industry, would be brought in communication with all the ocean routes by the execution of the St. Lawrence waterway project.

"To enable ocean-going vessels to have access to all the ports of the great lakes would have a most stimulating effect upon the industrial life of the continent's interior. The feasibility of the project is unquestioned, and its cost, compared with some other great engineering works, would be small. Disorganized and prostrate, the nations of central Europe are even now setting their hands to the development of a great continental waterway which, connecting the Rhine and Danube, will bring water transportation from the Black to the North sea, from Mediterranean to Baltic.

"If nationalist prejudices and economic difficulties can be overcome by Europe they certainly should not be formidable obstacles to an achievement less expensive and giving promise of greater advantages to the people of North America. Not only would the cost of transportation be greatly reduced but a vast population would be brought overnight in immediate touch with the markets of the entire world."

SECRETARY HUGHES ACTS.

The American state department on May 25, 1922, issued the following statement:

"The secretary of state, on May 17, 1922, sent to the British ambassador a note stating that the United States government would be glad to take up with the Canadian government the negotiation of a treaty looking to the deepening of the waterways which would enable ocean-going ships to reach the great lakes.

"The note to the British ambassador referred to the fact that on Jan. 21, 1920, the governments of the United States and Canada referred to the international joint commission for investigation and report, under the terms of article IX of the treaty of Jan. 11, 1909, relating to boundary waters, questions with respect to the improvement of the St. Lawrence river between Lake Ontario and Montreal, both for navigation and the development of water power. This commission reported on Dec. 19, 1921.

"The secretary of state said that he was authorized to state that the president favors the negotiation of a treaty on the basis of this report of the international joint commission, or such modifications as might be agreed on, and requested to be informed as to whether the appropriate British and Canadian authorities are disposed to undertake the negotiation of a treaty.

"The department understands that this note has been forwarded to the Canadian government. No answer has as yet been received."

CANADA DELAYS ACTION.

Before the end of the month Canada, through Premier W. L. Mackenzie King, replied as follows to Secretary Hughes:

"The government of Canada has not thus far had opportunity to give to the report of the international joint commission and the accompanying report of the board of engineers appointed to examine the subject that careful consideration which their importance merits. Moreover, having regard to the magnitude of the project and the very large outlay of public money involved, the government is of the opinion that it would not appear to be expedient to deal with this matter at the present time."

Prime Minister King made an announcement to the same effect in the house of commons in Ottawa on May 29.

ASSASSINATION OF WALTER RATHENAU.

Walter Rathenau, German minister of foreign affairs and a leader in the reconstruction of his country, was assassinated on the morning of June 24, 1922, as he was on his way to his office. The murderers, who were waiting for him at his door, followed his automobile in another motor car and at a crossing fired eight revolver shots at him and hurled a hand grenade, killing him instantly. The assassins escaped in their machine.

The excitement caused by this assassination was so great that for a time it was feared that the government might lose control of the situation. The theory of the social democrats was that the parties of the right or monarchists were attempting to overthrow the republic. What amounted almost to a stage of siege was declared in Berlin and precautions, military and other, were taken. Socialists and radicals held great demonstrations in Berlin and elsewhere against the conservatives and monarchists.

It was discovered by the police that the men who committed the crime were Hermann Fisher and Edwin Kern, former officers in the German army and ardent monarchists. It was not until July 18, however, that they succeeded in trapping the young men in the turret of Saalec castle, near the watering place, Koesen, in Prussia. Rather than be captured the assassins committed suicide by shooting themselves with revolvers. Before doing so one shouted "We die for our ideals!" and the other, "Long live Capt. Ehrhardt!"

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT IN THE UNITED STATES.

Capital punishment prevails in all of the states of the union except Arizona, Kansas, Maine, Minnesota, North Dakota, Rhode Island and Wisconsin. In Michigan the only crime punishable by death is treason. The death penalty was abolished in the state of Washington in 1913 and restored in 1919. It was abolished in Iowa in 1872 and restored in 1878. It was abolished in Colorado in 1897, but was restored in 1901. It was abolished in Oregon in 1914, but was restored by a vote of the people in June, 1920. Hanging is the ordinary mode of execution, but in Arkansas, Indiana, Massachusetts, New York, Nebraska, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Virginia and Oklahoma electrocution is the legal method. In Nevada an act passed in 1921 providing for the use of lethal gas in carrying out the death penalty.

In five states in 1892 the electoral vote was divided: California gave 8 electoral votes for Cleveland and 1 for Harrison and Ohio gave 1 for Cleveland and 22 for Harrison; in Michigan, by act of the legislature, each congressional district voted separately for an elector; in Oregon 1 of the 4 candidates for electors on the people's party ticket was also on the democratic ticket; in North Dakota 1 of the 2 people's party electors cast his vote for Cleveland, this causing the electoral vote of the state to be equally divided among Cleveland, Harrison and Weaver. In 1896 California gave 8 electoral votes to McKinley and 1 to Bryan; Kentucky gave 12 to McKinley and 1 to Bryan. In Maryland in 1904 7 of the presidential electors chosen were democrats and 1 republican. In 1908 Maryland elected 6 democratic and 2 republican electors. In 1912 California elected 11 progressive and 2 democratic electors. In 1916 West Virginia elected 1 democratic and 7 republican electors.

DESTRUCTIVE TYPHOON AT SWATOW, CHINA.

Some 72,000 lives and property valued at $100,000,000 were lost in a typhoon which visited the Swatow district in China, Aug. 2, 1922. The city of Swatow suffered the heaviest loss in merchandise destroyed and also had a death list of 3,000, but most of those who perished lived in smaller places on the coast or near it. Some villages of 500 inhabitants were utterly wiped out. Warnings of the approaching typhoon came Aug. 1, in the form of a steady wind. The next day it attained a velocity of ninety miles an hour at 9 p. m., unroofing buildings and demolishing stone walls. The center of the typhoon came at 11 and there was a dead calm. Water gradually rose in the streets and soon the lower floors of the houses were submerged. An hour later a wind blowing with hurricane force from the opposite direction completed the havoc. It was accompanied by two tidal waves twenty-five feet high.

The full force of the typhoon covered an area of sixty miles along the coast and fifteen miles inland. Thousands of sampans and entire fleets of fishing boats containing families were engulfed by the waves.

The measures taken by foreign relief agencies and by the Chinese themselves were prompt and effective, and before a month had elapsed it was announced that no further help was needed.

CITIZENSHIP IN THE UNITED STATES.

All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. (Fourteenth amendment to the constitution.)

All persons born in the United States and not subject to any foreign power, excluding Indians not taxed, are declared to be citizens of the United States. (Sec. 1992, U. S. Revised Statutes.)

All children heretofore born or hereafter born out of the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, whose fathers were or may be at the time of their birth citizens thereof, are declared to be citizens of the United States; but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States. (Sec. 1993, U. S. Revised Statutes.)

Children born in the United States of alien parents are citizens of the United States.

If the widow of an alien files an application for citizenship the children who are under the age of 21 at the time she is naturalized will be citizens through her naturalization, but if the children are past the age of 21 and were born in a foreign country, it will be necessary for them to file petitions for naturalization in their own right.

Children of Chinese parents who are themselves aliens and incapable of becoming naturalized are citizens of the United States.

Children born in the United States of persons engaged in the diplomatic service of foreign governments are not citizens of the United States.

Children born of alien parents on a vessel of a foreign country while within the waters of the United States are not citizens of the United States, but of the country to which the vessel belongs.

Children born of alien parents in the United States have the right to make an election of nationality when they reach their majority.

Minors and children are citizens within the meaning of the term as used in the constitution.

Deserters from the military or naval service of the United States are liable to loss of citizenship.

Any alien being a free white person, an alien of African nativity or of African descent may become an American citizen by complying with the naturalization laws.

"Hereafter no state court or court of the United States shall admit Chinese to citizenship; and all laws in conflict with this act are repealed." (Sec. 14, act of May 6, 1882.)

The courts have held that neither Chinese, Japanese, Hawaiians, Burmese nor Indians can be naturalized.

The naturalization laws apply to women as well as men. The right of any woman to become a naturalized citizen of the United States is not abridged because of her sex. A woman does not become a citizen of the United States by reason of her marriage to a citizen or because her husband is naturalized; but if eligible to citizenship she may be naturalized by full compliance with all the requirements except that she is not required to declare her intention or to reside more than one year continuously in the United States, Hawaii, Alaska or Porto Rico. A woman citizen of the United States does not cease to be a citizen of the United States by reason of her marriage unless she makes formal renunciation of her citizenship before a court having jurisdiction over the naturalization of aliens. A woman citizen who marries an alien ineligible to citizenship ceases to be a citizen of the United States. If at the termination of the marital status she is a citizen of the United States she retains her citizenship regardless of her residence. No woman whose husband is not eligible to citizenship can be naturalized during the continuance of the marital status. (Act of Sept. 22, 1922.)

Aliens may become citizens of the United States by treaties with foreign powers, by conquest or by special acts of congress.

In an act approved March 2, 1907, it is provided that any American citizen shall have expatriated himself when he has been naturalized in any foreign state in conformity with its laws, or when he has taken an oath of allegiance to any foreign state.

When any naturalized citizen shall have resided for two years in the foreign state from which he came, or five years in any other foreign state, it shall be presumed that he has ceased to be an American citizen, and the place of his general abode shall be deemed his place of residence during said years: Provided, however, that such presumption may be overcome on the presentation of satisfactory evidence to a diplomatic or consular officer of the United States, under such rules and regulations as the department of state may prescribe; and provided, also, that no American citizen shall be allowed to expatriate himself when this country is at war.

A child born without the United States of alien parents shall be deemed a citizen of the United States by virtue of the naturalization of or resumption of American citizenship of the parent: Provided, that such naturalization or resumption takes place during the minority of such child; and provided, further, that the citizenship of such minor child shall begin at the time such minor child begins to reside permanently in the United States.

All children born outside the limits of the United States, who are citizens thereof in accordance with the provisions of section 1993 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (see above), and who continue to reside outside of the United States, shall, in order to receive the protection of the government, be required, upon reaching the age of 18 years, to record at an American consulate their intention to become residents and remain citizens of the United States and shall further be required to take the oath of allegiance to the United States upon attaining their majority.

NATURALIZATION LAWS.

Act of June 29, 1906, as amended March 4, 1909, June 25, 1910, March 4, 1913, and May 9, 1918.

The act creating the department of labor provided for a bureau of naturalization with a commissioner of naturalization and deputy commissioner. The commissioner or in his absence the deputy commissioner is the administrative officer in charge of the bureau of naturalization.

The act of June 29, 1906, as subsequently amended, provides that the bureau of naturalization, under the direction of the secretary of labor, shall have charge of all matters concerning the naturalization of aliens. It is the duty of the bureau to provide, for use at the various immigration stations throughout the United States, books of record in which the commissioners of immigration shall cause a registry to be made in the case of each alien arriving in the United States, the name, age, occupation, personal description, place of birth, last residence, intended place of residence in the United States, the date of arrival of said alien and, if entered through a port, the name of the vessel on which he comes. Such alien shall be granted a certificate of such registry.

Exclusive jurisdiction to naturalize aliens is conferred upon the United States District courts and all courts of record having a seal, a clerk and jurisdiction in actions at law or equity in which the amount in controversy is unlimited. The naturalization jurisdiction of the courts shall extend only to aliens resident within the respective judicial districts of such courts.

An alien may be admitted to citizenship in the following manner and not otherwise:

1. He shall declare on oath before the clerk of the proper court at least two years before his admission, and after he has reached the age of 18 years, that it is bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the United States and to renounce allegiance to any foreign state or sovereignty. Such declaration shall set forth the same facts as are registered at the time of his arrival. No alien who, in conformity with the law in force at the date of his declaration, has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States shall be required to renew such declaration.

2. Not less than two years nor more than seven after he has made such declaration he shall file a petition, signed by himself and verified, in which he shall state his name, place of residence, occupation, date and place of birth, place from which he emigrated, name of the vessel on which he arrived, the time when and the place and name of the court where he declared his intention of becoming a citizen; if he is married, he shall state the name of his wife, the country of her nativity and her place of residence at the time the petition is filed, and if he has children, the name, date and place of birth and place of residence of each child living. The petition shall also set forth that he is not a disbeliever in or opposed to organized government or a member of any body of persons opposed to organized government, and that he is not a polygamist or a believer in polygamy; that he intends to become a citizen of and to live permanently in the United States, and whether or not he has been denied admission as a citizen of the United States, and, if denied, the ground or grounds of such denial, the court or courts in which such decision was rendered and that the cause for such denial has since been cured or removed, and every fact material to his naturalization and required to be proved upon the final hearing of his application.

The petition shall also be verified by the affidavits of at least two credible witnesses, who are citizens of the United States, and who shall state in their affidavits that they have personally kown the applicant to be a resident of the United States for a period of at least five years continuously and of the state, territory or District of Columbia in which the application is made for a period of at least one year immediately preceding the date of the filing of his petition, and that they each have personal knowledge that the petitioner is a person of good moral character, in every way qualified, in their opinion, to be admitted as a citizen of the United States.

At the time of the filing of the petition, there shall be filed with the clerk of the court a certificate from the department of labor, if the petitioner arrives in the United States after the passage of this act, stating the date, place and manner of his arrival in the United States, and the declaration of intention of such petitioner, which certificate and declaration shall be attached to and made a part of the petition.

3. He shall before he is admitted to citizenship declare on oath in open court that he will support the constitution of the United States, that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate or sovereignty, and particularly by name to the prince, potentate, state or sovereignty of which he was before a citizen or subject, and that he will support and defend the constitution and laws of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and bear true faith and allegiance to the same.

4. It shall be made apparent to the satisfaction of the court admitting any alien to citizenship that immediately preceding the date of his application he has resided continuously within the United States five years at least, and within the state or territory where such court is at the time held one year at least, and that during that time he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the constitution. In addition to the oath of the applicant, the testimony of at least two witnesses, citizens of the United States, as to the facts of residence, moral character and attachment to the principles of the constitution shall be required.

5. He must renounce any hereditary title or order of nobility which he may possess.

6. When any alien who has declared his intention dies before he is actually naturalized the widow and minor children may, by complying with the other provisions of the act, be naturalized without making any declaration of intention.

7. Any native-born Filipino of the age of 21 years and upwards who has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and who has served in the United States navy, marine corps or the naval auxiliary service not less than three years; or any alien, or any Porto Rican not a citizen of the United States, of the age of 21 or upwards, who has enlisted or may enlist hereafter in the armies of the United States, either the regular forces, the volunteer forces, the national army, the national guard or naval militia of any state, or the United States navy or marine corps, or coast guard, or who has served for three years on any vessel of the United States, merchant, naval or fishing, of more than twenty tons burden, may on presentation of the required declaration of intention petition for naturalization without proof of the required five years' residence in the United States if it is shown that such residence cannot be established; any alien in the military or naval service of the United States during the time this country is engaged in the present (world) war may file his petition for naturalization without making the preliminary declaration of intention and without proof of five years' residence within the United States; any alien declarant who has served in the army or navy of the United States or the Philippine constabulary, and has been honorably discharged and has been accepted for service in either the military or naval service of the United States on condition that he become a citizen of the United States, may file his petition for naturalization upon proof of continuous residence in the United States for the three years immediately preceding his petition, by two witnesses, citizens of the United States, and in these cases only residence in the Philippine islands and the Panama Canal Zone by aliens may be considered residence within the United States, and the place of such military service shall be construed as the place of residence and the petition for naturalization may be filed in the most convenient court without proof of residence within its jurisdiction. Any alien who is in the military service at the time of the passage of this act may file his petition without appearing in person in the office of the clerk of court and without taking the oath of allegiance in open court. Service by aliens upon vessels not of American registry shall not be considered as residence for naturalization purposes.

8. Every seaman alien shall after his declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, and after he shall have served three years upon such merchant or fishing vessel of the United States, be deemed a citizen for the purpose of serving on board any such vessel.

9. Provision is made for promoting the instruction and training in citizenship responsibilities of applicants for naturalization through a citizenship textbook and monthly naturalization bulletin.

10. Any person not an alien enemy, who resided uninterruptedly within the United States for five years next preceding July 1, 1914, and was on that date otherwise qualified to become a citizen except that he had not made the declaration of intention required by law and who had because of misinformation regarding his citizenship status erroneously exercised the rights and performed the duties of a citizen of the United States in good faith, may file the petition for naturalization without making the preliminary declaration required of other aliens and may be admitted as a citizen of the United States upon complying in all respects with the other requirements of the naturalization law.

11. No alien who is a citizen, subject or denizen of any country with which the United States is at war shall be admitted to become a citizen of the United States unless he made his declaration of intention not less than two nor more than seven years prior to the existence of war, or was at that time entitled to become a citizen without making a declaration of intention, or unless his petition for naturalization shall then be pending and is otherwise entitled to admission.

12. Any person who, while a citizen of the United States and during the war in Europe, entered the military or naval service of any country at war with a country with which the United States is now at war, who shall be deemed to have lost his citizenship by reason of any oath or obligation taken by him for the purpose of entering such service, may resume his citizenship by taking the oath of allegiance prescribed by the naturalization law and regulations, and such oath may be taken before any court authorized to naturalize aliens or before any consul of the United States.

13. Any person who served in the military or naval forces of the United States at the termination of the world war or who may have been honorably discharged from such service on account of disability incurred in the line of duty shall be relieved from the necessity of proving that he resided continuously in the United States the time required by law of aliens, but his petition must be supported by two credible witnesses.

Immediately after the filing of the petition the clerk of the court shall give notice thereof by posting in a public place the name, nativity and residence of the alien, the date and place of his arrival in the United States and the date for the final hearing of his petition and the names of the witnesses whom the applicant expects to summon in his behalf. Petitions for naturalization may be filed at any time, but final action thereon shall be had only on stated days and in no case until at least ninety days have elapsed after the filing of the petition. No person shall be naturalized within thirty days preceding a general election within the territorial jurisdiction of the court. It shall be lawful for the court, upon the petition of an alien, to change his name.

No person who disbelieves in or who is opposed to organized government, or who is a member of or affiliated with any organization entertaining and teaching such disbelief in or opposition to organized government, or who advocates or teaches the duty, necessity or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of any officer or officers of the government of the United States, or of any other organized government, because of his or their official character, or who is a polygamist, shall be naturalized.

No alien shall hereafter be naturalized or admitted as a citizen of the United States who cannot speak the English language. This requirement does not apply to those physically unable to comply with it, or to those making homestead entries upon the public lands of the United States.

The fees charged by clerks of court in naturalization cases are:

For receiving and filing a declaration of intention and issuing a duplicate thereof, $1.

For making, filing and docketing the petition of an alien for admission as a citizen of the United States and the final hearing thereon, $2; and for entering the final order and the issuance of the certificate of citizenship thereunder, $2.

The petitioner shall also deposit with the clerk a sum of money sufficient to cover the expenses of subpœnaing and paying the legal fees of any witnesses for whom he may request a subpœna.

The naturalization of deserters or persons who go abroad to avoid draft is prohibited.

IMMIGRATION LAW.

There shall be collected a tax of $8 for every alien, including alien seamen regularly admitted, entering the United States. Children under 16 accompanying father or mother are not subject to the tax. The tax shall not be levied on aliens who enter after an uninterrupted residence of at least one year preceding such entrance in Canada, Newfoundland, Cuba or Mexico for a temporary stay, nor upon aliens in transit, nor upon aliens who, having been lawfully admitted, shall go from one part of the United States to another, although through contiguous foreign territory.

That, for the purpose of ascertaining whether aliens can read, the immigrant inspectors shall be furnished with slips of uniform size, prepared under the direction of the secretary of labor, each containing not less than thirty nor more than forty words in ordinary use, printed in plainly legible type in some one of the various languages or dialects of immigrants. Each alien may designate the particular language or dialect in which he desires the examination to be made, and shall be required to read the words printed on the slip in such language or dialect. That the following classes of persons shall be exempt from the operation of the literacy test, to wit: All aliens who shall prove to the satisfaction of the proper immigration officer or to the secretary of labor that they are seeking admission to the United States to avoid religious persecution in the country of their last permanent residence, whether such persecution be evidenced by overt acts or by laws or governmental regulations that discriminate against the alien or the race to which he belongs because of his religious faith; all aliens who have been lawfully admitted to the United States and who have resided therein continuously for five years and who return to the United States within six months from the date of their departure therefrom; all aliens in transit through the United States; all aliens who have been lawfully admitted to the United States and who later shall go in transit from one part of the United States to another through foreign contiguous territory: Provided, that nothing in this act shall exclude, if otherwise admissible, persons convicted, or who admit the commission, or who teach or advocate the commission, of an offense purely political: Provided further, that the provisions of this act relating to the payments for tickets or passage by any corporation, association, society, municipality or foreign government shall not apply to the tickets or passage of aliens in immediate and continuous transit through the United States to foreign contiguous territory: Provided further, that skilled labor, if otherwise admissible, may be imported if labor of like kind unemployed cannot be found in this country, and the question of the necessity of importing such skilled labor in any particular instance may be determined by the secretary of labor upon the application of any person interested, such application to be made before such importation, and such determination by the secretary of labor to be reached after a full hearing and an investigation into the facts of the case: Provided further, that the provisions of this law applicable to contract labor shall not be held to exclude professional actors, artists, lecturers, singers, nurses, ministers of any religious denomination, professors for colleges or seminaries, persons belonging to any recognized learned profession, or persons employed as domestic servants: Provided further, that whenever the president shall be satisfied that passports issued by any foreign government to its citizens or subjects to go to any country other than the United States, or to any of its insular possessions or the Canal Zone, are being used for the purpose of enabling the holder to come to the continental territory of the United States to the detriment of labor conditions therein, the president shall refuse to permit such persons to enter the United States or its possessions: Provided further, that aliens returning after a temporary absence to an unrelinquished United States domicile of seven consecutive years may be admitted at the discretion of the secretary of labor and under such conditions as he may prescribe: Provided further, that nothing in the contract-labor or reading-test provisions of this act shall be construed to prevent any alien exhibitor or holder of any concession for any fair or exposition authorized by congress from bringing into the United States, under contract, such otherwise inadmissible alien mechanics, artisans, agents or other employes, natives of his country, as may be necessary for installing or conducting his exhibit or business, under such rules as the commissioner-general of immigration with the approval of the secretary of labor may prescribe, both as to the admission and return of such persons: Provided further, that the commissioner-general of immigration with the approval of the secretary of labor shall issue rules and prescribe conditions, including exaction of such bonds as may be necessary, to control and regulate the admission and return of otherwise inadmissible aliens applying for temporary admission: Provided further, that nothing in this act shall be construed to apply to accredited officials of foreign governments, nor to their suites, families or guests.

The importation of any alien into the United States for any immoral purpose is punishable by imprisonment for not more than ten years and by a fine of not more than $5,000. Violations of the contract-labor section of the act are punishable by fines of $1,000 or by imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than two years. The act provides for the fining or imprisonment of persons engaged in the transportation of aliens into the United States who encourage or help persons excluded under the provisions of the law to enter the country.

COAL MINING AND RAILROAD STRIKES IN 1922.

Two strikes, nationwide in extent, occurred in the United States in 1922. One by coal miners began April 1 and involved 600,000 men; the other by railroad shop workers began July 1 and involved directly 400,000 men. The bituminous coal strike virtually came to an end Aug. 15 and the anthracite strike Sept. 2. The railroad strike on many important lines ended Sept. 13. Thus 1,000,000 men were idle from two and a half to five months. No accurate estimate of the total loss to the country in business and to the strikers in wages can be made; it certainly amounted to many millions of dollars.

ISSUES IN COAL STRIKE.

The coal strike was caused by the refusal of the mine operators to agree to demands which they declared were unreasonable. The bituminous coal miners insisted upon these points:

1. No wage cuts; maintain the present basic wage schedules.
2. Adjustment of differentials.
3. The six-hour day and five-day week.
4. Time and a half for overtime; double time for Sundays and holidays.
5. Weekly pay.
6. Elimination of the automatic penalty clause.
7. Next wage scale to run two years, to March 31, 1924.
8. Joint interstate conference with operators in central competitive field, (Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, western Pennsylvania); a four-state basic wage agreement as now to be used as the basis for settlement in outlying districts.
9. Maintain the check-off.

The demands of the anthracite miners were:

1. A 20 per cent increase in contract wage scale; increase of $1 a day for day men.
2. A uniform wage schedule so that occupations of like character at the several collieries shall command the same wage.
3. Eight-hour day to be extended to wage earners working around the collieries.
4. Time and a half for overtime and double time for Sundays and holidays.
5. A check-off provision to be put into the next contract.
6. All dead work to be paid for on a uniform consideration basis.
7. More liberal treatment of miners who encounter abnormal conditions in their working places.
8. Carpenters and other tradesmen to be paid standard rates in the region, not less than 90 cents an hour.
9. In laying off men seniority to apply.
10. Full eight hour opportunity to be given employes at collieries which have been working on a six or seven-hour day; where eight-hour opportunity is denied wages shall be adjusted.

MINE OPERATORS' TERMS.

The mine operators, on the other hand, wanted:

1. Wage deflation; reduction of wage schedules to, say, the levels of 1919 or 1917, or to a point where union fields can compete with nonunion.
2. Abolition of the check-off, under which union dues and assessments are collected by the companies out of the pay envelopes.
3. Scrapping of the present central competitive field basic wage agreement; separate state wage agreements to supplant it.

Both sides remained firm and balked all efforts by the government and other agencies to decide the matters in dispute by arbitration or otherwise. The more important steps taken in the controversy are described in detail in the message to congress delivered by President Harding on Aug. 18. This document is appended and its points need not be summarized here. As already noted the strike came to an end in August in the bituminous coal industry and in the early part of September in the anthracite fields. The bituminous coal mine operators and miners agreed:

1. Upon the continuance of the old wage scales and working conditions until March 31, 1923.
2. The creation of machinery to avert strikes. Under it the old "four state" idea was supplanted by a national joint conference plan. This conference was set for Jan. 3, 1923, and delegates of miners and operators from all the producing regions are to attend. After receiving the reports of the committees it is to determine the method to be followed in negotiating the wage scales effective April 1. In order to get quick action and avert further strikes the machinery to develop the new wage agreements shall start working not later than Jan. 8.

ISSUES IN RAILROAD STRIKE.

The chief cause of the railway shop crafts strike was the order issued by the United States labor board June 6 and effective July 1, 1922, reducing the wages of 400,000 railroad shop workers. The wages of shopcraft workers were cut 7 cents an hour, those of freight-car "knockers" 9 cents an hour, etc., making the total cut amount to $60,000,000 a year. The railroad men had other grievances also and their demands included:

1. The abolition of the system by which some of the railroads let out work to contractors not within the jurisdiction of the railroad labor board and therefore not bound by its decisions on wages and working conditions.
2. The revision of certain rules cutting pay for overtime work.
3. A rehearing of the wage decision by the labor board.
4. The establishment of adjustment boards, or one national board of adjustment with equal representation of employes and carriers.
5. The reinstatement of strikers with all their seniority rights. (This demand was made after the strike began.)

The railway executives demanded that the shopmen call off the strike and proceed to settle their grievances through the United States railroad labor board.

The railroad strike as well as the coal strike was accompanied by many acts of lawlessness, resulting in the loss of life and damage to property. While the railroads continued to operate the service on some of the lines was curtailed by the canceling of a certain number of passenger and freight trains. Serious disturbances occurred in Elgin, Ill.; Needles, Cal.; Roodhouse, Ill.; Trenton, N. J.; Logansport, Ind.; Memphis, Tenn., and Des Moines, Iowa. Troops in many instances had to be called out to restore order and protect life. The Santa Fe lines in southern California were tied up for several days by an unauthorized strike of trainmen. The Chicago & Alton road had a similar experience at Roodhouse, Ill. Its troubles with coal strikers and its own employes contributed largely to the line being placed in the hands of receivers on Aug. 30.

PRESIDENTIAL PROCLAMATION.

President Harding was active in trying to make the shopmen and the railroad executives come to an agreement and in the meantime to preserve order. On July 11 he issued the following proclamation:

"Whereas, The United States railroad labor board is an agency of the government, created by law and charged with the duty of adjusting disputes between railroad operators and employes engaged in interstate commerce; and,

"Whereas, the United States railroad labor board has recently handed down decisions, one affecting the wage of the shopcraft employes, the other declaring the contract system of shopcraft work with outside agencies to be contrary to the intent of the transportation act, and, therefore, that such practice must be discontinued; and,

"Whereas, the shopcraft employes have elected to discontinue their work rather than abide by the decision rendered, and certain operators have ignored the decision ordering the abandonment of the contract shop practice; and,

"Whereas, the maintained operation of the railways in interstate commerce and the transportation of United States mails have necessitated the employment of men who choose to accept employment under the terms of the decision and who have the same indisputable right to work that others have to decline work; and,

"Whereas, the peaceful settlement of controversies in accordance with law and due respect for the established agencies of such settlement are essential to the security and well being of our people:

"Now, therefore, I, Warren G. Harding, president of the United States, do hereby make proclamation directing all persons to refrain from all interference with the lawful efforts to maintain interstate transportation and the carrying of the United States mails.

"These activities and the maintained supremacy of the law are the first obligation of the government and all the citizenship of our country. Therefore I invite the co-operation of all public authorities, state and municipal, and the aid of all good citizens to uphold the laws and to preserve the public peace, and to facilitate those operations in safety which are essential to life and liberty and the security of property and our common public welfare.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the city of Washington, this eleventh day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-two, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and forty-seventh.

"WARREN G. HARDING."

SETTLEMENT REJECTED.

On July 31 President Harding submitted the following terms of agreement to the railway managers:

"1. Railway managers and workmen are to agree to recognize the validity of all decisions of the railroad labor board and to faithfully carry out such decisions as contemplated by the law.

"2. The carriers will withdraw all lawsuits growing out of the strike and railroad labor board decisions which have been involved in the strike may be taken, in the exercise of recognized rights, by either party to a railroad labor board for rehearing.

"3. All employes now on strike to be returned to work and to their former positions with seniority and other rights unimpaired. The representatives of the carriers and the representatives of the organizations especially agree that there will be no discrimination by either party against the employes who did or did not strike. * * *

"I have not specifically stated it in the terms of settlement, but, of course, the abandonment of the contract system, in accordance with the decision of the board, is to be expected on the part of all railroads. It is wholly unthinkable that the railroad labor board can be made a useful agency of the government in maintaining industrial peace in the railway service unless employers and workers are both prompt and unquestioning in their acceptance of its decisions."

On Aug. 1 the railroad executives in session in New York city voted 265 to 2 to reject President Harding's peace proposal. Their refusal was conveyed in the following resolution sent to the president:

"Resolved, 1. That we accept the first recommendation of the president.

"2. That we accept the second proposal of the president, with the understanding that the strike is first called off, and the representatives of the strikers pledge themselves and the strikers against violence in any form against the men now at work and the property of the carriers, since otherwise it would be impossible to consider the dismissal of injunctions and other legal measures necessary to protect such persons and property from the violence and intimidation of the character resorted to in many localities since the strike was called.

"3. That it is impossible to agree to the first sentence of the third proposal of the president."

DRASTIC INJUNCTIONS.

Injunctions were issued by the federal courts in Chicago and elsewhere as early as July 8 restraining the shop strikers from interfering with the operations of the railroads at various points.

On Sept. 1 the attorney-general of the United States, H. M. Daugherty, appeared before Judge James H. Wilkerson of the United States District court in Chicago and obtained a temporary injunction, applicable throughout the country, against the strikers and officials of the unions to which the men belonged, restraining them from interfering in any manner whatever with the operations of the railroads. On Sept. 11 the life of the injunction was extended for ten days. On this occasion the attorney-general presented a long list of acts of violence and sabotage, which he attributed to the strikers. On Sept. 23 the injunction was made permanent. Counsel for the strikers asked that the order be vacated on the following grounds:

1. The government erroneously assigned the strikers violated law when they declined to abide by decisions of the United States railroad labor board.

2. The open shop issue, cited as an important reason for seeking an injunction, is not one to be dealt with by the department of justice.

3. Federal courts have held that strikers have a right to attempt to recruit their ranks from among nonunion workers.

4. The government failed to establish an unlawful conspiracy on the part of the strikers, as alleged in the injunction bill.

STRIKE IS ENDED.

Before this, however, the strike virtually ended when the officials of many railroad companies and their striking employes entered into the following agreement:

"1. In order to bring to an end the existing strike of employes upon the undersigned railroads and relieve the country from the adverse effects thereof and to expedite the movement of essential traffic, the following memorandum of agreement is made upon the understanding, which the parties hereto accept, that the terms hereof shall be carried out by the officers of the companies and the representatives of the employes in a spirit of conciliation and sincere purpose to effect a genuine settlement of the matters in controversy referred to below. This paragraph does not apply to or include strikes in effect prior to July 1, 1922.

"2. All men to return to work in positions of the class they originally held on June 30, 1922, and at the same point. As many of such men as possible are to be immediately put to work at present rates of pay and all such employes who have been on strike be put to work or under pay not later than thirty days after the signing of this agreement except such men as have been proved guilty of acts of violence which, in the opinion of the commission hereinafter provided for, shall be sufficient cause for dismissal from service.

"3. The relative standing as between themselves of men returning to work and men laid off, furloughed, or on leave of absence, including general chairmen and others who were as of June 30, 1922, properly on leave of absence, will be restored as of June 30, 1922, and they will be called back to work in that order.

"4. If a dispute arises as to the relative standing of an employe or if any other controversy arises growing out of the strike that cannot be otherwise adjusted by the carrier and said employe or the duly authorized representatives thereof, the matter shall be referred by the organizations parties to this agreement, the employes or the carrier in the interest of any employe who may be aggrieved, to a commission to be established and constituted as hereinafter provided, for final decision by a majority vote.

"5. The commission referred to in paragraph 4 hereof shall be composed of six representatives to be named by the chief officers of the organizations parties hereto and six railroad officers or representatives selected from and by the railroads agreeing hereto. This commission shall be constituted within fifteen days from the signing of this agreement and shall have jurisdiction to decide all cases that may properly be referred to it on or before May 31, 1923, but not thereafter.

"6. Inasmuch as this agreement is reached for the purpose of composing in a spirit of compromise this controversy, all parties hereto agree that neither this settlement nor any decision of the commission above provided for shall be used or cited in any controversy between these parties or between the railroads signing the same or any other class or classes of their employes in any other controversy that may hereafter arise.

"7. Both parties pledge themselves that no intimidation or oppression shall be practiced or permitted against any of the employes who have remained at work or have taken service or as against those who resume work under this understanding.

"8. All suits at law now pending as the result of the strike to be withdrawn and canceled by both parties."

PRESIDENT HARDING'S STRIKE MESSAGE.

On Aug. 18 President Harding appeared before a joint session of congress and delivered the following message:

"Gentlemen of the congress:

"It is manifestly my duty to bring to your attention the industrial situation which confronts the country.

"The situation growing out of the prevailing railway and coal mining strikes is so serious, so menacing to the nation's welfare, that I should be remiss if I failed frankly to lay the matter before you and, at the same time, acquaint you and the whole people with such efforts as the executive branch of the government has made by the voluntary exercise of its good offices to effect a settlement.

"The suspension of the coal industry dates back to last April 1, when the working agreement between mine operators and the United Mine Workers came to an end. Anticipating that expiration of contract, which was negotiated with the government's sanction in 1920, the present administration sought, as early as last October, conferences between the operators and miners in order to facilitate either a new or extended agreement in order to avoid any suspension of production when April 1 arrived.

"At that time the mine workers declined to confer, though the operators were agreeable, the mine workers excusing their declination on the ground that the union officials could have no authority to negotiate until after their annual convention.

"A short time prior to the expiration of the working agreement the mine workers invited a conference with the operators in the central competitive field, covering the states of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

"In spite of the union declination of the government's informal suggestion for the conference, five months before, the government, informally but sincerely, commended the conference, but it was declined by certain groups of operators, and the coal mining controversy ended in the strike of April 1.

"It was instantly made nationwide so far as the organized mine workers could control, and included many districts in the bituminous field where there was neither grievance nor dispute, and effected a complete tieup of the production in the anthracite field.

"It is to be noted that when the suspension began large stocks of coal were on hand, mined at wages higher than those paid during the war; there was only the buying impelled by necessity, and there was a belief that coal must yield to the postwar readjustment. When the stocks on hand began to reach such diminution as to menace industry and hinder transportation, approximately June 1, overtures were initiated by the government in the hope of expediting settlement.

Overtures in Vain.

"None of these availed. Individual and district tenders of settlement on the part of operators—in some instances appeals for settlement—were wholly unavailing. The dominant groups among the operators were insistent on having district agreements; the dominant mine workers were demanding a nationwide settlement. The government, being without authority to enforce a strike settlement in the coal industry, could only volunteer its good offices in finding a way of adjustment.

"Accordingly, a conference of the coal operators' associations and the general and district officials of the United Mine Workers was called to meet in Washington on July 1. The designation of representation was left to the officials of the various organizations, and there was nationwide representation, except from the nonunion fields of the country.

"Before the joint meeting I expressed the deep concern of the country and invited them to meet at a conference table and end the disputes between them.

"The conference did not develop even a hope. The operators were asking for their district or territorial conferences—the workers demanded national settlement on the old basis.

"Appraising correctly the hopelessness of the situation, I again invited both operators and workers to meet with me, and tendered a means of settlement so justly inspired that it was difficult to see how any one believing in industrial peace and justice to all concerned could decline it.

"In substance it called on the operators to open their mines, on the mine workers to resume work at the same pay and under the same working conditions as prevailed at the time the strike began. In turn, the government was to create at once a coal commission, or two of them, if preferred by all parties to the dispute, so that one could deal with the bituminous situation, the other with the problems in the anthracite field.

"Among the commissioners were to be representatives of the operators, representatives of the mine workers, and outstanding, disinterested, and able representatives of the American public.

"The commission was to be instructed to direct its first inquiry to the rate of wage to be paid for the period ending next April 1, and then to enter upon a fact-finding inquiry into every phase of the industry and point the way to avoid future suspensions in production.

"The disputants all indorsed the suggestion of a fact-finding commission. The anthracite operators promptly accepted the entire proposal. The mine workers refused to resume work under the arbitration plan. The majority of the bituminous operators filed an acceptance, but a considerable minority declined the proposal.

"Under these circumstances, having no authority to demand compliance, the government had no other course than to invite a resumption of production under the rights of all parties to the controversy, with assurance of government protection of each and every one in his lawful pursuits.

"This fact was communicated to the governors of all coal producing states, and with two exceptions assurances of maintained law and order were promptly given.

"In some instances concrete proof of effective readiness to protect all men, strikers and nonstriking workmen alike, was promptly given. But little or no new production followed.

"The simple but significant truth was revealed that, except for such coal as comes from the districts worked by nonorganized miners, the country is at the mercy of the United Mine Workers.

"Governors in various states reported that their operators and miners had no dispute and were eager to resume production. District leaders informed me that their workmen were anxious to return to their jobs, but that they were not permitted to do so.

"Hundreds of wives of workmen have addressed the white house, beseeching a settlement, alleging that they knew no grievance, and there is an unending story of appeals for relief where necessity or suffering were impelling, where a mere expression of need ought to find ready compliance.

"At every stage the government has been a just neutral regarding wage scales and working contracts. There are fundamental evils in our present system of production and distribution which make the wage problem difficult.

Coal Industry Overmanned.

"In the bituminous coal fields are vastly more mines than are requisite to the country's needs, and there are 200,000 more mine workers than are needed to produce in continuous employment the country's normal requirements. By continuous employment I mean approximately 280 working days in the year.

"In many instances last year men were employed less than 150 days, in some cases much fewer than that. In the overmanned sections men divide the working time, and high wages are necessary to meet the cost of the barest living. Interrupted transportation, sorely broken employment, the failure to develop storage against enlarged demands, and inadequate carrying—all these present problems bear on righteous wage adjustment and demand constructive solution.

"Because of these things, because of the impressions of many cases of unjustifiable profits in the industry, and because public interest demands investigation and demands the finding of facts be given to the public, I am asking at your hands the authority to create a commission to make a searching investigation into the whole coal industry, with provision for its lawful activities and the bestowal of authority to reveal every phase of coal production, sale and distribution.

"I am speaking now on behalf of mine workers, mine operators and the American public. It will bring protection to all and point the way to continuity of production and the better economic functioning of the industry in the future.

"The necessity for such a searching national investigation with constructive recommendations is imperative. At the moment the coal skies are clearing, but unless we find a cure for the economic ills which affect the industry and therein find a basis for righteous relationship, we shall be faced with a like menacing situation on next April 1, on the expiration of the wage contracts which are now being made.

"The need for such investigation and independent consideration is revealed by both operators and mine workers in the provision in the Cleveland agreement so recently made. The government will gladly co-operate with the industry in this program so far as it is the public inerest so to do, but I have an unalterable conviction that no lasting satisfaction or worth-while results will ensue unless we may have a government commission, independent of the industry, clothed with authority by the congress to search deeply, so that it may advise as to fair wages and as to conditions of labor and recommend the enactment of laws to protect the public in the future.

"The almost total exhaustion of stocks of coal, the crippled condition of the railways, the distressed situation that has arisen and might grow worse in our great cities due to the shortage of anthracite, the suffering which might arise in the northwest through failure to meet winter needs by lake transportation, all these, added to the possibility of outrageous price demands, in spite of the most zealous voluntary efforts of the government to restrain them, make it necessary to ask you to consider at once some form of temporary control of distribution and prices.

"The administration earnestly has sought to restrain profiteering and to secure the rightful distribution of such coal as has been available in this emergency. There were no legal powers for price control. There has been cordial co-operation in many fields, a fine revelation of business conscience stronger than the temptation to profit by a people's misfortune.

"There have been instances of flat refusal.

"I rejoice to make grateful acknowledgment to those who preferred to contribute to national welfare rather than profit by a nation's distress.

National Coal Agency.

"If it may have your approval, I recommend immediate provision for a temporary national coal agency with needed capital, to purchase, sell, and distribute coal which is carried in interstate equipment. I do not mean that all interstate coal shall be handled by such a federal organization; perhaps none will be necessary; but it will restore its capital to the public treasury and will be the instrumentality of guarding the public interest where private conscience is insensible to a public need.

"This proposal does not relate to any possible employment in interstate shipments. Price restraint and equitable distribution in intrastate shipments is a responsibility of the state's own government. In such voluntary activities as have been carried on thus far the federal government has endeavored to re-establish the authority and responsibility in the states which was undermined in the necessary centralization of authority during the world war.

Railroad Shopmen's Strike.

"The public menace in the coal situation was made more acute and more serious at the beginning of July by the strike of the federated shops crafts in the railroad service—a strike against a wage decision made by the railroad labor board, directly affecting approximately 400,000 men. The justice of the decision is not for discussion here. The decision has been lost sight of in subsequent developments.

"In any event, it was always possible to appeal for rehearing and the submission of new evidence, and it is always a safe assumption that a government agency of adjustment deciding unjustly will be quick to make right any wrong.

"The railroad labor board was created by congress for the express purpose of hearing and deciding disputes between the carriers and their employes, so that no controversy need lead to an interruption in interstate transportation.

"It was inevitable that many wage disputes should arise. Wages had mounted upward, necessarily and justly, during the war upheaval, likewise the cost of transportation, so that the higher wages might be paid. It was inevitable that some readjustments should follow.

"Naturally these readjustments were resisted. The administrative government neither advocated nor opposed. It only held that the labor board was the lawful agency of the government to hear and decide disputes and its authority must be sustained, as the law contemplates. This must be so, whether the carriers or the employes ignore its decisions.

"Unhappily a number of decisions of this board had been ignored by the carriers. In only one instance, however, had a decision challenged by a carrier been brought to the attention of the department of justice, and this decision was promptly carried to the courts and has recently been sustained in the federal court of appeals. The public or the executive had no knowledge of the ignored decisions in other cases, because they did not hinder transportation.

"When these failures of many of the carriers to abide by decisions of the board were brought to my attention, I could more fairly appraise the feeling of the strikers, though they had a remedy without seeking to paralyze interstate commerce.

Law Is Inadequate.

"The law creating the railroad labor board is inadequate. Contrary to popular impression, it has little or no power to enforce its decisions. It can impose no penalties on either party disregarding its decisions. It can not halt a strike, and manifestly congress deliberately omitted the enactment of compulsory arbitration. The decisions of the board must be made enforceable and effective against carriers and employes alike. But the law is new and no perfection of it by congress at this moment could be helpful in the present threatened paralysis of transportation.

"Happily it is always lawful and ofttimes possible to settle disputes outside of court, so in a desire to serve public welfare I ventured upon an attempt at mediation. Those who had preceded me in attempted settlements had made some progress. I submitted to the officials of the striking employes and the chairman of the Association of Railway Executives, in writing, on the same day, a tentative proposal for settlement.

"Knowing that some of the carriers had offended by ignoring the decisions of the board, and that the employes had struck when they had a remedy without the strike, I felt it was best to start all over again, resume work, and all to agree to abide faithfully by the board's decisions, thus making it a real tribunal of peace in transportation.

Question of Seniority.

"The barrier to be surmounted was the question of seniority. By the workmen these rights are held to be sacred and unsurrendered by a strike. By the carriers the preservation of seniority is the weapon of discipline on the one hand and the reward of faithful employes on the other. It has been an almost invariable rule that when strikes have been lost, seniority and its advantage have been surrendered; when strikes have been settled seniority has been restored.

"In the tentative proposals which I sponsored it was provided that everybody should go to work, with seniority rights unimpaired, that there should be no discrimination by either workmen or carriers against workmen who did or did not strike.

"I realized that the proposal must carry a disappointment to employes who had inherited promotion by staying loyally on the job and to such new men as had sought jobs looking to permanent employment, but I wanted the fresh start and maintained transportation service, and I appraised the disappointment of the few to be less important than the impending misfortune to the nation.

"It was not what I would ask ordinarily to be considered or conceded, but at that moment of deep anxiety, with the coal shortage gravely menacing, I was thinking of the pressing demands to the welfare of the whole people. I believed the sacrifice brought to the men involved could be amply compensated for by the carriers in practical ways.

"I believed that the matter of transcendent importance was the acceptance of the proposal to respect the labor board's decisions on the questions which formed the issue at the time of the strike. The public compensation would be complete in guarding by law against recurrence.

"The proposal was rejected by the carriers. Though the rejection did not end all negotiation, it left the government only one course—to call the striking workmen to return to work, to call the carriers to assign them to work, and leave the dispute about seniority to the labor board for decision. When negotiation or mediation fails this is the course contemplated by the law and the government can have no chart for its course except the law.

"To this call a majority of the carriers responded favorably, proposing to re-employ all strikers except those guilty of violence against workmen or property, to restore the striking workmen to their old positions where vacant, or to like positions where vacancies had been filled; questions of seniority which cannot be settled between the employer and the employes to go to the labor board for decision.

"The minority of the carriers proposed to assign jobs to workmen on strike only where positions were vacant. Neither proposal has been accepted.

"Thus the narrative brings us to the present moment, but it has not included the developments which have heightened the government's concern. Sympathetic strikes have developed here and there, seriously impairing interstate commerce.

"Deserted transcontinental trains in the desert regions of the southwest have revealed the cruelty and contempt for law on the part of some railway employes, who have conspired to paralyze transportation; and lawlessness and violence in a hundred places have revealed the failure of the striking unions to hold their forces to law observance.

"Men who have refused to strike and who have braved insult and assault and risked their lives to serve a public need have been cruelly attacked and wounded or killed. Men seeking work and guards attempting to protect lives and property, even officers of the federal government, have been assaulted, humiliated and hindered in their duties.

"Strikers have armed themselves and gathered in mobs about railroad shops to offer armed violence to any man attempting to go to work. There is a state of lawlessness shocking to every conception of American law and order and violating the cherished guaranties of American freedom.

"At no time has the federal government been unready or unwilling to give its support to maintain law and order and restrain violence, but in no case has state authority confessed its inability to cope with the situation and asked for federal assistance.

"Under these conditions of hindrance and intimidation there has been such a lack of care of motive power that the deterioration of locomotives and the noncompliance with the safety requirements of the law are threatening the breakdown of transportation. This very serious menace is magnified by the millions of losses to fruit growers and other producers of perishable foodstuffs, and losses to farmers who depend on transportation to market their grains at harvest time.

Warning to Congress.

"Even worse, it is hindering the transport of available coal when industry is on the verge of paralysis because of coal shortage, and life and health are menaced by coal famine in the great centers of population.

"Surely the threatening conditions must impress the congress and the country that no body of men, whether limited in numbers and responsibility for railway management, of powerful in numbers and the necessary forces in railroad operation, shall be permitted to choose a course which imperils public welfare.

"Neither organization of employes nor workingmen's unions may escape responsibility. When related to a public service the mere fact of organization magnifies that responsibility, and public interest transcends that of either grouped capital or organized labor.

"Another development is so significant that the hardships of the moment may well be endured to rivet popular attention to necessary settlement.

"It is fundamental to all freedom that all men have unquestioned rights to lawful pursuits to work and to live and choose their own lawful ways to happiness.

"In these strikes these rights have been denied by assault and violence, by armed lawlessness. In many communities the municipal authorities have winked at these violations, until liberty is a mockery and the law a matter of community contempt. It is fair to say that the great mass of organized workmen do not approve, but they seem helpless to hinder.

"These conditions cannot remain in free America. If free men cannot toil according to their own lawful choosing, all our constitutional guaranties born of democracy are surrendered to mobocracy and the freedom of a hundred millions is surrendered to the small minority which would have no law.

"It is not my thought to ask congress to deal with these fundamental problems at this time. No hasty action would contribute to the solution of the present critical situation. There is existing law by which to settle the prevailing disputes. There are statutes forbidding conspiracy to hinder interstate commerce. There are laws to assure the highest possible safety in railway service. It is my purpose to invoke these laws, civil and criminal, against all offenders alike.

"The legal safeguarding against like menaces in the future must be worked out when no passion sways, when no prejudice influences, when the whole problem may be appraised, and the public welfare may be asserted against any and every interest which assumes authority beyond that of the government itself.

"One specific thing I must ask at your hands at the earliest possible moment. There is pending a bill to provide for the better protection of aliens and for the enforcement of their treaty rights. It is a measure, in short, to create a jurisdiction for the federal courts through which the national government will have appropriate power to protect aliens in the rights secured to them under treaties and to deal with crimes which affect our foreign relations.

The Herrin Atrocities.

"The matter has been before congress on many previous occasions. President Tyler, in his first annual message, advised congress that inasmuch as 'the government is charged with the maintenance of peace and the preservation of amicable relations with the nations of the earth, it ought to possess without question all the reasonable and proper means of maintaining the one and preserving the other.'

"President Harrison asked for the same bestowal of jurisdiction, having encountered deep embarrassment which grew out of the lynching of eleven aliens in New Orleans in 1891.

"President McKinley, dealing with a like problem in 1899, asked the conferring upon federal courts jurisdiction in that class of international cases where the ultimate responsibility of the federal government may be involved.

"President Roosevelt uttered a like request to congress in 1906, and President Taft pointed out the defect in the present federal jurisdiction when he made his inaugural address in 1909. He declared that 'it puts our government in a pusillanimous position to make definite engagement to protect aliens and then to excuse the failure to perform the engagements by an explanation that the duty to keep them is in states or cities not within our control. If we would promise, we must put ourselves in a position to perform our promise. We cannot permit the possible failure of justice, due to local prejudice in any state or municipal government, to expose us to the risk of war which might be avoided if federal jurisdiction were asserted by suitable legislation by congress.'

"My renewal of this oft-made recommendation is impelled by a pitiable sense of federal impotence to deal with the shocking crime at Herrin, Ill., which so recently shamed and horrified the country. In that butchery of human beings, wrought in madness, it is alleged that two aliens were murdered.

"This act adds to the outraged sense of American justice the humiliation which lies in the federal government's lack of authority to punish that unutterable crime.

"Had it happened in any other land than our own, and the wrath of righteous justice were not effectively expressed, we should have pitied the civilization that would tolerate it and sorrowed for the government unwilling or unable to mete out just punishment.

"I have felt the deep current of popular resentment that the federal government has not sought to efface this blot from our national shield, that the federal government has been tolerant of the mockery of local inquiry and the failure of justice in Illinois.

"It is the regrettable truth that the federal government cannot act under the law. But the bestowal of the jurisdiction necessary to enable federal courts to act appropriately will open the way to punish barbarity and butchery at Herrin or elsewhere, no matter in whose name or for what purpose the insufferable outrage is committed.

"It is deplorable that there are or can be American communities where even there are citizens, not to speak of public officials, who believe mob warfare is admissible to cure any situation. It is terrorizing to know that such madness may be directed against men merely for choosing to accept lawful employment. I wish the federal government to be able to put an end to such crimes against civilization and punish those who sanction them.

Warfare on Union Labor.

"In the weeks of patient conference and attempts at settlement I have come to appraise another element in the engrossing industrial dispute, of which it is only fair to take cognizance. It is in some degree responsible for the strikes and has hindered attempts at adjustment.

"I refer to the warfare on the unions of labor. The government has no sympathy or approval for this element of discord in the ranks of industry. Any legislation in the future must be as free from this element of trouble making as it is from labor extremists who strive for class domination. We recognize these organizations in the law, and we must accredit them with incalculable contribution to labor's uplift.

"It is of public interest to preserve them and profit by the good that is in them, but we must check the abuses and the excesses which conflict with public interest, precisely as we have been progressively legislating to prevent capitalistic, corporate or managerial domination which is contrary to public welfare.

"We also recognize the right of employers and employes alike, within the law, to establish their methods of conducting business, to choose their employment, and to determine their relations with each other.

"We must reassert the doctrine that in this republic the first obligation and the first allegiance of every citizen, high or low, is to his government, and to hold that government to be the just and unchallenged sponsor for public welfare, and the liberty, security and rights of all its citizens.

"No matter what clouds may gather, no matter what storms may ensue, no matter what hardships may attend, or what sacrifice may be necessary, government by law must and will be sustained.

"Wherefore I am resolved to use all the power of the government to maintain transportation and sustain the right of men to work."

MASSACRE OF COAL MINERS AT HERRIN, ILL.

Nineteen nonunion and three union coal miners were killed at or near the Lester mine near and in Herrin, Williamson county, Illinois, June 21-22, 1922, as the result of the general strike in the coal mining industry in progress at the time. Though it was known that serious trouble was impending the responsible local and state authorities made no attempt to avert it. On June 25 a coroner's jury at Herrin found that the nineteen nonunion men "came to their deaths by gunshot wounds at the hands of parties to this jury unknown as the result of the activities of the officials of the mine."

Immediately after the massacre troops were mobilized in Chicago for service in Williamson county, but their presence was not required. The inaction of the local authorities was severely criticized and the massacre was described by press and public generally as a blot not only on Williamson county but on the whole state of Illinois. President Harding in his strike message to congress called attention to the crime, declaring it to be regrettable that there were citizens, not to say public officials, who believed that mob warfare was admissible to cure any situation.

The people of Illinois, however, were determined that the crime should not go unpunished. Funds were raised by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce and the attorney-general of the state, Edward J. Brundage, interested himself personally in the case. On Aug. 17 a special grand jury composed mainly of farmers was summoned by Circuit Judge DeWitt T. Hartwell to meet on Aug. 28, at Marion, the capital of Williamson county, to investigate the Herrin massacre and take such action as the facts warranted. On the date named the grand jurors met and began the taking of testimony with the effective assistance of Attorney-General Brundage and State's Attorney Delos Duty. The first indictment, that of Otis Clark, president of a local union of miners, for the slaying of C. K. McDowell, mining superintendent, was returned on Aug. 30. The grand jury continued its work until Sept. 23, when it filed its report with Judge Hartwell and took a recess until Oct. 23. The total results of its labors were forty-four murder indictments, fifty-eight for conspiracy to murder, fifty-eight for rioting and fifty-four for assault to murder. Many of the men indicted had been arrested and jailed. Among the more important men indicted were Hugh Willis of Herrin, a member of the state executive board of the Illinois Mine Workers' union, and Will Davis, secretary-treasurer of Herrin district union, both of whom were named in murder bills. Most of the men indicted were union miners.

The text of the grand jury's report is given herewith in full:

"We, the special grand jury of Williamson county impaneled to make an investigation of the crimes committed in and about the strip mine near and in Herrin on Wednesday and Thursday, June 21 and 22, 1922, and heedful of the instructions given by your honor to make a thorough investigation of the facts and circumstances, with a view of fixing the responsibility for the killing of some twenty-four persons and the wounding of many others, beg to report that we have examined approximately 300 witnesses and from their testimony learned these conditions:

"About the middle of June of this year, after suspension of the coal industry as the result of a strike of the United Mine Workers of America, the Southern Illinois Coal company decided to operate a strip mine owned by it and located about midway between Marion and Herrin.

"The miners' union apparently raised no objections to the uncovering of the coal by the use of steam shovels, but when the company began to ship coal there was bitter resentment on the part of the union miners.

"The coal company aggravated this resentment by employing armed guards and closing for the public use certain established highways traversing the mine property and treating as trespassers citizens attempting to use the accustomed highway.

"The flaunting of arms in a community devoted almost exclusively to mining was conducive to strife; it was a challenge certain to be accepted, and for four or five days preceding the tragedy it was known by the authorities that a conflict was inevitable.

State Officials Warned.

"The state administration undoubtedly realized the acute situation by sending to Williamson county Col. Hunter of the adjutant-general's staff. This representative of the state government testified that he recognized upon his arrival in Marion the imminence of a conflict and immediately asked the adjutant-general to send state troops to protect the property and conserve the peace.

"This request Col. Hunter renewed several times before the actual conflict, and was invariably asked by the adjutant-general of Illinois if the sheriff of Williamson county had asked for troops. The adjutant-general denied his authority to order them into Williamson county except upon the sheriff's request, which, as your honor knows, is not the law.

"Melvin Thaxton, the sheriff of Williamson county, is the holder of a card in the miners' union and a candidate for county treasurer at the forthcoming election.

"Either because of loyalty to the union or from fear of injuring his candidacy the sheriff would make no demand for troops nor did he take adequate measures to preserve the peace.

"From the evidence heard, the attack of June 21 upon the men employed at the strip mine was the result of a conspiracy which had several days in the perfecting, the object of which was the closing of the strip mine.

"Sheriff Thaxton could not have been unaware of the development of this plan.

Lewis Letter Quoted.

"On Monday, June 19, State Senator W. A. Sneed, district president of the United Mine Workers of this district, received from John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, a telegram, as follows:

" 'William Sneed, President, Sub-District 10, District 13, United Mine Workers of America, Herrin, Ill.: Your wire 18th. Steam Shovel Men's union was suspended from affiliation with American Federation of Labor some years ago. It was ordered suspended from the mining department of the A. F. of L. at the Atlantic City convention.

" 'We now find that this outlaw organization is permitting its members to act as strike breakers at numerous pits in Ohio. This organization is furnishing steam shovel engineers to work under armed guards under no agreement which exists by and between this organization and the mining department or any branch of the A. F. of L. permitting them to work under such circumstances.

" 'We have through representatives officially taken this question up with the officers of the Steam Shovel Men's union and have failed to secure any satisfaction.

" 'Representatives of our organization are justified in treating this crowd as an outlaw organization and in viewing its members in the same light as they do any other common strike breakers. JOHN L. LEWIS.'

"A copy of this telegram was posted and read in various places. Following the publication of the telegram from President Lewis preparations for an attack upon the mine were made. The hardware stores in all the cities of Williamson county were searched for firearms. The weapons were either taken by force or upon a verbal assurance that the local would pay for them.

"The men working at the strip mine were evidently ignorant of being strike breakers. The men operating the steam shovels were affiliated with a union, even though unrecognized by the A. F. of L.

"The guards were told they were to protect the valuable machinery and did not awake to the real danger until noon time of June 21, when bullets began to fly into the mine in such volume as to compel them to take refuge in the office, and later to seek safety under the steel railroad cars on the strip mine property.

"Superintendent McDowell telephoned a number of times to Col. Hunter for protection and was invariably informed by the latter that the sheriff could not be found. Finally Col. Hunter suggested a flag of truce, which, while displayed by the mine defenders, caused no abatement of the fire.

"In the evening of June 21, upon the return to Marion of Sheriff Thaxton, a conference was held between the sheriff, Col. Hunter and officers of the miners' union, at which it was stated that the officials of the coal company were willing to discontinue the operation of the strip mine and the union officials were willing that the workmen employed therein should be permitted to depart in safety. The substance of this agreement was transmitted over the telephone to Superintendent McDowell at the strip mine.

"Nevertheless, at the break of day the following morning firing began in a heavy volume from close proximity. The attacking party having crept up under cover of darkness, they were sufficiently close to permit of a parley, and after a time a spokesman for the strip mine workers asked to speak to the leader.

"A long range conversation was held and it was agreed by a spokesman from the attacking party that safe conduct would be accorded the men if they laid down their arms and would march out with hands up.

"This was done and from behind the earth embankments created by the steam shovel operators came a great number of armed men and more from the surrounding hills until the forty-seven surrendering men were surrounded by many hundreds of men, mostly armed.

Crippled Superintendent Killed.

"The captive men were marched down the road toward Herrin in double file. After they had marched about one mile, Superintendent McDowell, being crippled and unable to keep up with the procession, was taken aside by members of the mob and shot to death.

"The remainder of the captives were marched on the public road and were stopped at the power house of the Interurban railroad, about three miles from Herrin. Here a change in leadership took place and the man who had guaranteed the safety of the men who had surrendered was deposed and another leader installed.

"The new commander ordered the captive men to march into the woods adjacent to and around the power house. Here the new leader directed that only those in the crowd who had guns should follow into the woods and those who were unarmed should remain without.

"The surrendered men were then marched some 200 yards back of the power house, to the vicinity of a barbed wire fence, where they were told they would be given a chance to run for their lives, under fire.

"The firing began immediately, and thirteen of the forty-seven nonunion men were killed and most of the others severely wounded.

"The mob pursued those who had escaped, and two were hanged to trees, six were tied together with a rope about their necks and marched through the streets of Herrin to an adjacent farm, where they were shot by the mob and the throats of three were cut. One of the six survived.

Relentless Brutality Shown.

"The atrocities and cruelties of the murderers are beyond the power of words to describe. A mob is always cowardly, but the savagery of this mob in its relentless brutality is almost unbelievable. The indignities heaped upon the dead did not end until their bodies were interred in unknown graves.

"On the first day of the attack on the mine two union miners were killed by the answering fire from the men in the strip mine, and another so seriously injured as to die subsequently from his wounds.

"It has been difficult for this grand jury to determine who fired the shots from the strip mine which caused the deaths of the union miners. When asked to present evidence to the grand jury which would tend to fix responsibility, counsel for the miners' union announced that they would lend no aid to the grand jury.

"The grand jury has made no attempt to determine the equities between the operators and the miners in the strike controversy. It has had but the sole thought of bringing to the bar of justice the persons who committed the crimes which have brought such universal criticism upon the people of Williamson county.

"Without discrimination, we feel keenly the horror of the tragedy. We protest, however, against the intimation that all the people of Williamson county are lawless and un-American. The development of the mining industry in Williamson county and the surrounding counties has tremendously increased the population within the last decade.

"All of the adjoining counties contributed their quota of marauders, and the entire shame of the inhuman murders should not rest upon Williamson county alone.

"It is true the electorate of the county is responsible for those of its supine, weak and cowardly officials who permitted the disorders to grow from desultory rioting into a hideous massacre. These evils can be corrected by the great majority of the population who believe in law and order asserting themselves and longer refusing to be intimidated by a disorderly minority.

"The grand jury, while not denying the right of private property and its lawful uses, cannot help but feel that the Southern Illinois Coal company, of which L. J. Lester is president, while perhaps within its legal rights, was either woefully ignorant of the danger of its operations or blindly determined to risk strife and conflict if profits could be made.

"It was foolhardy to attempt to operate a nonunion mine in the very heart of the miners' union, in view of the existing conditions.

Responsibility Evaded.

"The adjutant-general's office and the sheriff's office alternated in passing responsibility, with neither taking decisive action to prevent disorders and protect property.

"The ease with which firearms were obtained causes the grand jury to believe that legislation should be enacted to regulate or prohibit the manufacture or indiscriminate sale of firearms.

"We condemn the laxity of the local police in the various cities wherein stores were looted for firearms without interference by them.

"We commend the state's attorney of Williamson county, Delos Duty, for his courage and fidelity to his oath of office, and we express our gratitude to the attorney-general of Illinois and his efficient assistants whose aid has greatly facilitated the tremendous tasks confronting the grand jury.

"In concluding this report the grand jury begs leave to state that it has indicted some forty-four persons for murder, fifty-eight for conspiracy to commit murder, fifty-eight for rioting, and fifty-four for assault to murder, and your jury asks leave for a recess of thirty days for the purpose of completing its labors. The grand jury is deeply grateful to the many representative, law-abiding citizens of Williamson county for their assistance and encouragement in its efforts to enforce the law fearlessly and impartially."

DISASTROUS EXPLOSION IN MONASTIR.

Four hundred carloads of ammunition stored near the railroad station at Monastir, southern Serbia, exploded on Tuesday, April 18, 1922, killing several hundred persons, wounding thousands and destroying part of the city. Some 30,000 people were made homeless. Most of the victims were soldiers and children. The barracks, in which 1,800 men were having lunch, was destroyed and a church, in which children were attending services, collapsed. Four hundred soldiers, it was reported, were killed.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT DECISIONS ON PICKETING.

AMERICAN STEEL FOUNDRIES CASE.

Chief Justice Taft of the United States Supreme court, in a decision announced Dec. 5, 1921, held that peaceful picketing in labor disputes is lawful, but where such picketing involves methods inevitably leading to intimidation and obstruction, no matter how lawful the announced purpose, it becomes illegal and may be restrained by court injunction. This decision involved a construction of the Clayton antitrust law which restricts the use of the injunction against organized labor.

The case came before the Supreme court on an appeal brought by the American Steel Foundries of Granite City, Ill., against a decision of the federal Circuit Court of Appeals of Illinois, which set aside an injunction granted by the federal District court against the Tricity Trades council, then conducting a wage strike.

The decision was sweeping. It enjoined the council in any way "or manner whatsoever" by use of persuasion, threat or personal injury, from interfering with, hindering, obstructing or stopping any person engaged in the employ of the American Steel Foundries in connection with its business or any person desiring to be employed by the foundries, from assembling, loitering or congregating in the neighborhood of the steel foundries for the purpose of aiding or encouraging others in these things, and from picketing or maintaining at or near the premises of the foundries, or on the streets leading to the premises of the foundries, any picket or pickets to obstruct or interfere with the foundries in the free and unrestricted control and operation of its plant.

"This is a picketing case," said Chief Justice Taft. "Only two men in the employ of the foundries had responded to the calling of the strike by the Tricity council. They were picketers, were defendants and were enjoined. Only one of them was a member of a union of that council. The case involves, as to them, the application of section 20 of the Clayton act, of which the provisions material here are those which forbid an injunction in behalf of an employer against, first, persuading others by peaceful means to cease employment and labor; second, attending at any place where such person or persons may lawfully be for the purpose of peacefully obtaining or communicating information; third, peaceably assembling in a lawful manner and for lawful purposes.

"The act emphasizes the words 'peaceable' and 'lawful' throughout the phrases which were used. We do not think that these declarations introduced any new principle into the equity jurisprudence of the federal courts. They are merely declaratory of what was the best practice always.

"Congress thought it wise to stabilize this rule of action and to render it uniform. Its object was to reconcile the rights of the employer in his business and in the access of his employes to his place of business without intimidation or obstruction, on the one hand, and the right of the employes, recent or expectant, to use peaceable and lawful means to induce prudent principals and would-be employes to join their ranks on the other.

"If, in their attempts at persuasion or communication, those of the labor side adopt methods which, however lawful in their announced purpose, inevitably lead to intimidation and obstruction, then it is the court's duty—and the terms of section 20 do not modify this—so to limit what the propagandists do as to time, manner and place as to prevent infractions of the law and violations of the right of the employes and of the employers for whom they wish to work.

Workers Must Not Be Molested.

"In going to and from work men have a right to as free passage without obstruction as the streets afford, consistent with the right of others to enjoy the same privilege. We are a social people and the accosting by one of another in an inoffensive way and offer by the one to communicate and discuss information with a view to influencing the other's action are not regarded as aggression, or a violation of that other's right.

"If, however, the offer is declined, as it may rightfully be, then persistence, importunity and following do become unjustifiable annoyance and obstruction which is likely soon to savor of intimidation. The nearer this is to the place of business the greater the interference with the business and especially with the property right of access of the employer. Such an attempted discussion attracts the curious, or, it may be, interested bystanders. They increase the obstruction as well as the aspect of intimidation which the situation quickly assumes.

"In the present case, under the conditions which the evidence discloses, all information tendered, all arguments advanced and all persuasion used were intimidation—they could not be otherwise.

"It is idle to talk of peaceful communication in such a place and under such conditions. The numbers of the pickets in the groups constituted intimidation. The name 'picket' indicated a militant purpose, inconsistent with peaceful persuasion. The employes were made to run the gantlet. When one or more assaults or disturbances ensued they characterized the whole campaign, which became effective because of its intimidating character, in spite of the admonitions given by the leaders to their followers as to lawful methods to be pursued, however sincere.

"Our conclusion is that picketing thus instituted is unlawful and cannot be peaceable, and may be properly enjoined by the specific term of 'picketing' because its meaning is clearly understood in the sphere of the controversy by those who are parties to it. We are supported in that view by many well-reasoned authorities, although there has been contrariety of view. A restraining order against picketing by that name will advise earnest advocates of labor's cause that the law does not look with favor on an enforced discussion of the merits of the issue between individuals who wish to work and groups of those who do not, under conditions which subject the individuals who wish to work to a severe test of their nerves and physical strength and courage.

"But while this is so we must have every regard for the congressional intention manifested in the act to the principle of existing law which it declared that ex-employes and others properly acting with them shall have an opportunity, so far as is consistent with peace and law, to observe who are still working for the employer, to communicate with them and to persuade them to join the ranks of his opponents in a lawful, economic struggle.

Right to Work Is Primary.

"Regarding as primary the rights of the employes to work for whom they will, and to go freely to and from their place of labor, and keeping in mind the right of the employer incident to his property and business to free access of such employes, what can be done to reconcile the conflicting interests?

"Each case must turn on its own circumstances. It is a case for the flexible, remedial power of a court of equity which may try one mode of restraint, and if it fails or proves to be too drastic may change it."

TRUAX RESTAURANT CASE.

Arizona Anti-Injunction Law Construed.

By a vote of five to four the United States Supreme court decided on Dec. 19, 1921, that a state has no authority to make laws prohibiting the granting of injunctions to restrain labor unions from peaceful picketing. Chief Justice Taft delivered the majority opinion, with Justices Day, Van Devanter, McKenna and McReynolds concurring. Justices Brandeis, Pitney, Holmes and Clarke dissented. The case came before the Supreme court on the appeal of William Truax, a restaurant keeper in Bisbee, Ariz., against the Cooks' and Waiters' union, which called a strike against him because he refused to put in operation an eight-hour day for his employes. The union established pickets outside the restaurant displaying banners describing it as "unfair to union labor" and asking patrons to boycott the place. When the case reached the Arizona Supreme court attention was called to a statute enacted in 1913 forbidding the courts to issue injunctions against peaceful picketing and boycotting. The Arizona court held that, under the statute, loss might be inflicted upon the plaintiff's property and business by picketing in any form if violence was used, and that because no violence was shown or claimed, the campaign of picketing, as described, did not unlawfully invade the complainant's rights.

After reciting the history of the case and quoting the anti-injunction law, Chief Justice Taft said the Arizona Supreme court had refused an injunction applied for by Truax, and continued:

"The ruling of the Supreme court proceeded, first, on the assumption that the gravamen of the complaint was that the defendants were merely inducing patrons to cease their patronage by making public the fact of the dispute and the attitude of plaintiffs in it, and, secondly, on the proposition that while good will is a valuable factor in business success, 'no man has a vested right in the esteem of the public,' that while the plaintiffs had a clear right to refuse the demand of the union, the union had a right to advertise the cause of the strike.

"The court held that the purpose of paragraph 1464 of the state law was to recognize the right of workmen on a strike to use peaceable means to accomplish the lawful ends for which the strike was called; that picketing, if peaceably carried on for a lawful purpose, was no violation of the rights of the person whose place of business was picketed; that, prior to the enactment of paragraph 1464, picketing was unlawful in Arizona because it was presumed to induce breaches of the peace, but that plaintiffs had no vested right to have such a rule of law continue in that state; that under paragraph 1464 picketing was no longer conclusively presumed to be unlawful; that the paragraph simply dealt with a rule of evidence requiring the courts to substitute evidence of the nature of the act for the presumption otherwise arising; that the plaintiffs' property rights were not invaded by picketing unless the picketing interfered with the free conduct of the business; that plaintiffs did not claim that defendants had by violent means invaded their rights, and that if that kind of picketing were charged and established by proof plaintiffs would be entitled to relief to the extent of prohibiting violence in any form.

"The effect of this ruling is that, under the statute, loss may be inflicted upon the plaintiffs' property and business by 'picketing' in any form if violence be not used, and that because no violence was shown or claimed, the campaign carried on, as described in the complaint and exhibits, did not unlawfully invade complainants' rights.

Means Used Were Illegal.

"The real question here is, Were the means used illegal? The recital of what the defendants did can leave no doubt of that. The libelous attacks upon the plaintiffs, their business, their employes and their customers, and the abusive epithets applied to them were palpable wrongs. They were uttered in aid of the plan to induce the plaintiffs' customers and would-be customers to refrain from patronizing the plaintiffs. The patrolling of defendants immediately in front of the restaurant on the main street and within five feet of plaintiffs' premises continuously during business hours, with the banners announcing plaintiffs' unfairness; the attendance by the picketers at the entrance to the restaurant and their insistent and loud appeals all day long; the constant circulation by them of the libels and epithets applied to employes, plaintiffs and customers, and the threats of injurious consequences to future customers, all linked together in a campaign were an unlawful annoyance and a hurtful nuisance in respect of the free access to the plaintiffs' place of business.

"It was not lawful persuasion or inducing. It was not a mere appeal to the sympathetic aid of would-be customers by a simple statement of the fact of the strike and a request to withhold patronage. It was compelling every customer or would-be customer to run the gantlet of most uncomfortable publicity, aggressive and annoying importunity, libelous attacks and fear of injurious consequences illegally inflicted to their reputation and standing in the community. No wonder that a business of $50,000 was reduced to only one-fourth of its former extent. Violence could not have been more effective. It was moral coercion by illegal annoyance and obstruction and it was thus plainly a conspiracy.

"A law which operates to make lawful such a wrong as is described in plaintiffs' complaint deprives the owner of the business and the premises of his property without due process, and cannot be held valid under the fourteenth amendment.

"With these views of the meaning of the equality clause it does not seem possible to escape the conclusion that by the clauses of paragraph 1464 of the revised statutes of Arizona, here relied upon by the defendants as construed by its Supreme court, the plaintiffs have been deprived of the equal protection of the law.

"It is argued that, while the right to conduct a lawful business is property, the conditions surrounding that business, such as regulations of the state for maintaining peace, good order and protection against disorder, are matters in which no person has a vested right. The conclusion to which this inevitably leads in this case is that the state may withdraw all protection to a property right by civil or criminal action for its wrongful injury if the injury is not caused by violence.

"It is true that no one has a vested right in any particular rule of the common law, but it is also true that the legislative power of a state can only be exerted in subordination to the fundamental principles of right and justice which the guaranty of due process in the fourteenth amendment is intended to preserve, and that a purely arbitrary or capricious exercise of that power, whereby a wrongful and highly injurious invasion of property rights, as here, is practically sanctioned and the owner stripped of all real remedy, is wholly at variance with these principles.

"It is to be observed that this is not the mere case of a peaceful secondary boycott, as to the illegality of which courts have differed and states have adopted different statutory provisions. A secondary boycott of this kind is where many combine to injure one in his business by coercing persons against their will to cease patronizing him by threats or similar injury. In such a case the many have a legal right to withdraw their trade from the one, they have the legal right to withdraw their trade from third persons and they have the right to advise third persons of their intention to do so when each act is considered singly.

"The question in such cases is whether the moral coercion exercised over a stranger to the original controversy by steps in themselves legal becomes a legal wrong. But here the illegality of the means used is without doubt and fundamental. The means used are the libelous and abusive attacks on the plaintiffs' reputation, like attacks on their employes and customers. Threats of such attacks on would-be customers, picketing and patrolling of the entrance to their place of business and the consequent obstruction of free access thereto—all with the purpose of depriving the plaintiffs of their business.

"To give operation to a statute whereby serious losses inflicted by such unlawful means are in effect made remediless is, we think, to disregard fundamental rights of liberty and property and to deprive the person suffering the loss of due process of law.

"If, however, contrary to the construction which we put on the opinion of the Supreme court of Arizona, it does not withhold from the plaintiffs all remedy for the wrongs they suffered, but only the equitable relief of injunction, there still remains the question whether they are thus denied the equal protection of the laws.

"Under the Arizona constitution the plaintiffs in error would have had the right to an injunction against such a campaign as that conducted by the defendants in error, if it had been directed against the plaintiffs' business and property in any kind of conspiracy which was not a dispute between employer and former employes. If the competing restaurant keepers in Bisbee had inaugurated such a campaign against the plaintiffs in error and conducted it with banners and handbills of a similar character, an injunction would necessarily have issued to protect the plaintiffs in the enjoyment of their property and business.

Entitled to Protection.

"This brings us to consider the effect in this case of that provision of the fourteenth amendment which forbids any state to deny to any person the equal protection of the laws. The clause is associated in the amendment with the due process clause, and it is customary to consider them together. It may be that they overlap, that a violation of one may involve at times the violation of the other, but the spheres of protection they offer are not coterminous.

"The due process clause brought down from magna charta was found in the early state constitutions and later in the fifth amendment to the federal constitution as a limitation upon the executive, legislative and judicial powers of the federal government, while the equality clause does not appear in the fifth amendment and so does not apply to congressional legislation.

"The due process clause requires that every man shall have the protection of his day in court and the benefit of the general law, a law which hears before it condemns, which proceeds not arbitrarily or capriciously, but upon inquiry, and renders judgment only after trial, so that every citizen shall hold his life, liberty, property and immunities under the protection of the general rules which govern society. It, of course, aims to secure equality of law in the sense that it makes a required minimum of protection for every one's right of life, liberty and property, which the congress or the legislature may not withhold.

All Equal Before the Law.

"Our whole system of law is predicated on the general fundamental principle of equality of application of the law. 'All men are equal before the law,' 'This is a government of laws and not of men,' 'No man is above the law,' are all maxims showing the spirit in which legislatures, executives and courts are expected to make, rule and apply laws. But the framers and adopters of this amendment were not content to depend on a mere minimum secured by the due process clause, or upon the spirit of equality which might not be insisted on by local public opinion. They, therefore, embodied that spirit in a specific guaranty.

"The guaranty was aimed at undue favor and individual or class privilege, on the one hand, and at hostile discrimination, or the oppression of inequality, on the other. It sought an equality of treatment of all persons, even though all enjoyed the protection of due process.

"If, as claimed, the legislature has full discretion to grant or withhold equitable relief in any classes of cases—indeed, to take away from its courts all equity and leave those who are wronged to suits at law or to protection by the criminal law—the legislature has the same power in respect to the declaration of crimes. Suppose the legislature of the state were to provide that such acts as were here committed by defendants—to wit, the picketing or patrolling of the sidewalk and street in front of the store or business house of any person, and the use of handbills of an abusive and libelous character against the owner and present future customers, with intent to injure the business of the owner—should be a public nuisance and be punishable by fine and imprisonment, and were to except ex-employes from its provisions. Is it not clear that any defendant could escape punishment under it on the ground that the statute violated the equality clause of the fourteenth amendment?

"It is urged that in holding paragraph 1464 invalid we are in effect holding invalid section 20 of the Clayton act. Of course, we are not doing so. In the first place, the equality clause of the fourteenth amendment does not apply to congressional, but only to state, action. In the second place, section 20 of the Clayton act never has been construed or applied as the Supreme court of Arizona has construed and applied paragraph 1464 in this case.

"We conclude that the demurrer in this case should have been overruled, the defendants required to answer, and that if the evidence sustain the averments of the complaint an injunction should issue as prayed.

"Objection is made to this conclusion on the ground that as we hold certain clauses of paragraph 1464 of the Arizona code, as construed, invalid, they cannot be separated from paragraph 1456, which must also be held invalid, and then there is no law in Arizona authorizing an injunction in this or any case. Paragraph 1456 has been the statute law of Arizona, state and territory, since 1901. It was first adopted in the code of the territory of 1901. It was continued in force by virtue of the new constitution of Arizona adopted by the people in 1902, which merely changed the name of the court upon which general equity jurisdiction was conferred from the District court to the Superior court, and which provided that the authority, jurisdiction, practice and procedure of the District courts should continue in force and apply and govern Superior courts until altered or repealed.

"Arizona came into the union with this constitution Feb. 14, 1912. At the session of 1912 provision was made for revision and codification of the laws. The present code was adopted by the legislature at its third special session of 1913.

"Section 1464 was passed, as the code itself states, at the second session of 1913. Thus paragraph 1464 was an amendment to paragraph 1456, and was included with the original section in the code revision of 1913. To invalidate paragraph 1456 we must assume that had the legislature known that the clauses of paragraph 1464 here involved, construed as the Arizona Supreme court has construed them, were unconstitutional, it would have repealed all the existing law conferring the equitable power of injunction in its first instance on courts of general jurisdiction. We cannot make this assumption. The exception introduced by amendment to paragraph 1456 proving invalid, the original law stands without the amendatory exception.

"The judgment of the Supreme court of Arizona is reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion."

BUCK'S STOVE COMPANY BOYCOTT CASE.

Proceedings were brought in the Supreme court of the District of Columbia in August, 1907, against the officers of the American Federation of Labor to enjoin them from conducting a boycott against the Buck's Stove and Range Company of St. Louis, Mo., by advertising that the concern was on the "unfair" and "we don't patronize" lists of the federation's official organ. The injunction was issued by Judge Gould Dec. 23, 1907. On the plea that the injunction was being violated proceedings for contempt of court were brought against Samuel Gompers, president; John Mitchell, vice-president, and Frank Morrison, secretary of the federation. They were declared guilty by Justice Wright of the Supreme court of the District of Columbia Dec. 23, 1908. Mr. Gompers was sentenced to one year's imprisonment, Mr. Mitchell to nine months' and Mr. Morrison to six months' imprisonment. They were admitted to bail and the case was taken to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, which tribunal decided Nov. 2, 1909, that the decree against them was valid.

An appeal was taken to the United States Supreme court, which on May 15, 1911, reversed the judgments of the lower courts and remanded the case. May 5, 1913, the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia again affirmed the original findings in the contempt case, but reduced Mr. Gompers' sentence to thirty days in jail and held that Mitchell and Morrison should be exempt from prison sentences, but should each pay a fine of $500. June 19, 1913, Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme court granted an appeal by the defendants that the case be heard again by the highest tribunal.

May 11, 1914, the United States Supreme court set aside the sentences imposed upon Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison on the ground that they were barred by the statute of limitations. Justice Holmes, who read the opinion, held that the contempt proceedings should have been begun within three years from the date of the offense.

UNINCORPORATED LABOR UNIONS SUABLE.

CORONADO COAL CASE DECISION.

In a decision announced June 5, 1922, the United States Supreme court held that unincorporated labor unions are suable in the federal courts for their acts and that funds accumulated to be expended in conducting strikes are subject to execution in suits for torts committed by such unions in strikes. The case was an appeal by the United Mine Workers of America and sixty-five individuals, from a decision by the United States District court for the western district of Arkansas, approved by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the 8th district, holding them guilty of violating the Sherman antitrust act in the course of the coal mine strikes in Arkansas in 1914, and imposing damages of $200,000, which were trebled under the antitrust law.

History of Case.

The title of the case before the court was "The United Mine Workers of America, et al., plaintiffs in error, vs. The Coronado Coal company, et al. In error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the 8th circuit." The plaintiffs in the District court were the receivers of the Bache-Denman Coal company and eight other corporations in each of which the first named company owned a controlling amount of stock. Their mines were in Prairie Creek valley, Sebastian county, Arkansas.

The defendants in the court below were the United Mine Workers of America and its officers, district 21 of the United Mine Workers of America and its officers, twenty-seven local unions in district No. 21 and their officers, and sixty-five individuals, mostly members of one union or another, but including some persons not members, all of whom were charged in the complaint with having entered into a conspiracy to restrain and monopolize interstate commerce, in violation of the first and second sections of the antitrust act and with having, in the course of that conspiracy, and for the purpose of consummating it, destroyed the plaintiff's properties. Treble damages for this and an attorney's fee were asked under the seventh section of the act.

The original complaint was filed in September, 1914, about six weeks after the destruction of the property. It was demurred to, and the District court sustained the demurrer. This was carried to the Court of Appeals on error, and the ruling of the District court was reversed, Dowd vs. United Mine Wokers, 235 Fed. 1. The case then came to trial on the third amended complaint and answers of the defendants. The trial resulted in a verdict of $200,000 for the plaintiffs, which was trebled by the court, and to which was added a counsel fee of $25,000 and interest to the amount of $120,600 from July 17, 1914, the date of the destruction of the property, to Nov. 22, 1917, the date upon which judgment was entered.

The verdict did not separate the amount between the companies. On a writ of error from the Court of Appeals the case was reversed as to the interest, but in other respects the judgment was affirmed. 258 Fed. 829. The defendants, the international union and district No. 21, have given a supersedeas bond to meet the judgment if it is affirmed against both or either of them.

The third amended complaint avers that of the nine companies, of which the plaintiff was the receiver and for which he was bringing suit, five were operating companies engaged in mining coal and shipping it in interstate commerce, employing in all about 870 men and mining an annual product when working to their capacity valued at $465,000, of which 75 per cent was sold and shipped to customers outside of the state. Of the five operating companies one was under contract to operate the properties of two of the others and four nonoperating companies were each financially interested in one or more of the operating companies, either by lease, by contract or by the ownership of all or a majority of their stock.

The defendant, the United Mine Workers of America, is alleged to be an unincorporated association of mine workers, governed by a constitution, with a membership exceeding 400,000, subdivided into thirty districts and numerous local unions. These subordinate districts and unions are subject to the constitution and by-laws not only of the international union but also to constitutions of their own.

The complaint avers that the United Mine Workers divide all coal mines into two classes, union or organized mines operating under a contract with the union to employ only union miners, and open shop or nonunion mines, which refuse to make such a contract; that, owing to the unreasonable restrictions and regulations imposed by the union on organized mines, the cost of production of union coal is unnecessarily enhanced so as to prevent its successful competition in the markets of the country with nonunion coal; that the object of the conspiracy of the United Mine Workers and the union operators, acting with them, is the protection of the union mined coal by the prevention and restraint of all interstate trade and competition in the products of nonunion mines.

The complaint enumerates twenty-three states in which coal mining is conducted and alleges that the coal mined in each comes into competition in interstate commerce directly or indirectly with that mined in Illinois, Kentucky, Alabama, New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, in the markets of Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Minnesota, where, but for the defendants' unlawful interference, plaintiffs would have been engaged in trade in 1914; that the bituminous mines of the greater part of the above territory are union mines, the principal exception being Alabama, West Virginia, parts of Pennsylvania and Colorado, which the defendant has thus far been unable to organize.

The complaint further avers that early in 1914 the plaintiff companies decided that the operating companies should go on a nonunion or open shop basis. Two of them, the Prairie Creek Coal Mining company and the Mammoth Vein Coal company, closed down and discontinued as union mines, preparatory to reopening as open shop mines in April. They were to be operated under a new contract by the Mammoth Vein Coal Mining company.

Another of the companies, the Hartford Coal company, which had not been in operation, planned to start an open shop mine as soon as convenient in the summer of 1914. The fifth, the Coronado Coal Mining company, continued operating with the union until April 18, 1914, when its employes struck because of its unity of interest with the other mines of the plaintiffs.

The plaintiff says that in April, 1914, the defendants and those acting in conjunction with them, in furtherance of the general conspiracy, already described, to drive nonunion coal out of interstate commerce, and thus to protect union operators from nonunion competition, drove and frightened away the plaintiff's employes, including those directly engaged in shipping coal to other states, prevented the plaintiffs from employing other men, destroyed the structures and facilities for mining, loading and shipping coal, the cars of interstate carriers waiting to be loaded, as well as those already loaded with coal in and for interstate shipment, and prevented plaintiffs from engaging in or continuing to engage in interstate commerce.

The complaint alleges that the destruction to the property in business amounted to the sum of $740,000, and asks judgment for three times that amount, or $2,220,000. Certain of the funds of the mine workers in Arkansas were attached. The defendants, the United Mine Workers of America, district No. 21, and each local union and each individual defendant filed a separate answer.

The answers deny the averments of the complaint. The trial began on Oct. 24, 1917, and a verdict and judgment were entered on Nov. 22 following.

Opinion by Chief Justice.

Mr. Chief Justice Taft, after stating the case, delivered the opinion of the court.

There are five principal questions pressed by the plaintiffs in error here, the defendants below. The first is that there was a misjoinder of parties plaintiff. The second is that the United Mine Workers of America, district No. 21 United Mine Workers of America, and the local unions made defendants, are unincorporated associations and not subject to suit and therefore should have been dismissed from the case on motions seasonably made.

The third is that there is no evidence to show any agency by the United Mine Workers of America in the conspiracy charged or in the actual destruction of the property, and no liability therefor. The fourth is that there is no evidence to show that the conspiracy alleged against district No. 21 and the other defendants was a conspiracy to restrain or monopolize interstate commerce. The fifth is that the court erred in a supplementary charge to the jury, which so stated the court's view of the evidence as to amount to a mandatory direction coercing the jury into finding the verdict which was recorded.

In regard to the first point the court held that there had been no misjoinder of parties. As to the second point the opinion of the court, in view of its importance, is given herewith in full.

Were the unincorporated associations, the international union, district No. 21, and the local unions suable in their names?

The United Mine Workers of America is a national organization. Indeed, because it embraces Canada it is called the international union. Under its constitution, it is intended to be the union of all workmen employed in and around coal mines, coal washers and coke ovens on the American continent. Its declared purpose is to increase wages and improve conditions of employment of its members by legislation, conciliation, joint agreements and strikes. It demands not more than eight hours a day of labor.

The union is composed of workmen eligible to membership and is divided into districts, subdistricts and local unions. The ultimate authority is a general convention to which delegates selected by the members in their local organizations are elected.

The body governing the union in the interval between conventions is the international board, consisting of the principal officers, the president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer, together with a member from each district.

The president has much power. He can remove or suspend international officers, appoints the national organizers and subordinates and is to interpret authoritatively the constitution, subject to reversal by the international board. When the board is not in session the individual members are to do what he directs them to do. He may dispense with initiation fees for admission of new locals and members.

The machinery of the organization is directed largely toward propaganda, conciliation of labor disputes, the making of scale agreements with operators, the discipline of officers, members, districts and locals, and toward strikes and the maintenance of funds for that purpose. It is admirably framed for unit action under the direction of the national officers.

It has a weekly journal, whose editor is appointed by the president, which publishes all official orders and circulars, and all the union news. Each local union is required to be a subscriber, and its official notices are to be brought by the secretary to the attention of the members. The initiation fees and dues collected from each member are divided between the national treasury, the district treasury and that of the local. Should a local dissolve, the money is to be transmitted to the national treasury.

Rules as to Strikes.

The rules as to strikes are important here. Section 27 of the constitution is as follows: "The board shall have power between conventions, by a two-thirds vote, to recommend the calling of a general strike, but under no circumstances shall it call such strike until approved by a referendum vote of the members."

Under article 16 no district is permitted to engage in a strike involving all or a major portion of its members without sanction of the international convention or board.

Section 2 of that article provides that districts may order local strikes within their respective districts "on their own responsibility, but where local strikes are to be financed by the international union they must be sanctioned by the international board."

Section 3 provides that in unorganized fields the convention or board must sanction strikes and no financial aid is to be given until after the strike has lasted four weeks, unless otherwise decided by the board. The board is to prescribe conditions in which strikes are to be financed by the international union and the amount of strike relief to be furnished the striking members. In such cases the president appoints a financial agent to assume responsibility for money to be expended from the international funds, and he only can make binding contracts. There is a uniform system of accounting as to the disbursements for strikes.

Membership and Dues.

The membership of the union has reached 450,000. The dues received from them for the national and district organizations make a very large annual total, and the obligations assumed in traveling expenses, holding of conventions, and the general overhead cost, but most of all in strikes, are so heavy that an extensive financial business is carried on, money is borrowed, notes are given to banks, and in every way the union acts as a business entity, distinct from its members. No organized corporation has greater unity of action, and in none is more power centered in the governing executive bodies.

Undoubtedly at common law an unincorporated association of persons was not recognized as having any other character than a partnership in whatever was done, and it could only sue or be sued in the names of its members, and their liability had to be enforced against each member. Pickett vs. Walsh, 192 Mass., 572; Karges Furniture company vs. Amalgamated Wood Workers, local union, 165 Ind., 421; Baskins vs. United Mine Workers (Ark.), decided Nov. 7, 1921 (234 S. W. 464).

But the growth and necessities of these great labor organizations have brought affirmative legal recognition of their existence and usefulness and provisions for their protection, which their members have found necessary. Their right to maintain strikes, when they do not violate law or the rights of others, has been declared. The embezzlement of funds by their officers has been especially denounced as a crime, the so-called union label, which is a quasi trademark to indicate the origin of manufactured products in union labor, has been protected against pirating and deceptive use by the statutes of most of the states, and in many states authority to sue to enjoin its use has been conferred on unions.

They have been given distinct and separate representation and the right to appear to represent union interests in statutory arbitrations, and before official labor boards. We insert in the margin an extended reference, "Furnished by the industry of counsel," to legislation of this kind. [Omitted.]

More than this, equitable procedure adapting itself to modern needs has grown to recognize the need of representation by one person of many, too numerous to sue or to be sued (Story equity pleadings, 8th ed. sec. 77; 94 and 97; St. Germain vs. Bakery union, 97 Wash., 282; Branson vs. Industrial Workers of the World, 30 Nevada 270; Barnes vs. Chicago Typographical union, 232 Ill., 402); and this has had its influence upon the law side of litigation, so that out of the very necessities of existing conditions and the utter impossibility of doing justice otherwise, the suable character of such an organization as this has come to be recognized in some jurisdictions and many suits for and against labor unions are reported in which no question has been raised as to the right to treat them in their closely united action and functions as artificial persons capable of suing and being sued.

It would be unfortunate if an organization with as great power as this international union has in the raising of large funds and in directing the conduct of 400,000 members in carrying on, in a wide territory, industrial controversies and strikes, out of which so much unlawful injury to private rights is possible, could assemble its assets to be used therein free from liability for injuries by torts committed in course of such strikes. To remand persons injured to a suit against each of the 400,000 members to recover damages and to levy on his share of the strike fund would be to leave them remediless.

In the case of Taff Vale company vs. Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, 1901, A. C., 426, an English statute provided for the registration of trade unions, authorizing them to hold property through trustees, to have agents, and provided for a winding up and a rendering of accounts. A union was sued for damages growing out of a strike. Mr. Justice Farwell, meeting the objection that the union was not a corporation and could not be sued as an artificial person, said:

"If the contention of the defendant society were well founded the legislature has authorized the creation of numerous bodies of men capable of owning great wealth and of action by agents with absolutely no responsibility for the wrongs that they may do to other persons by the use of that wealth and the employment of those agents."

He therefore gave judgment against the union. This was affirmed by the house of lords. The legislation in question in that case did not create trade unions but simply recognized their existence and regulated them in certain ways, but neither conferred on them general power to sue, nor impose liability to be sued. See also Hillenbrand vs. Building Trade Council, 14 Ohio D. C. N. P. 628. Holland jurisprudence, 12th ed. 341; Pollock's first book on jurisprudence. 2d ed. 125.

Suability of Trade Unions.

Though such a conclusion as to the suability of trade unions is of primary importance in the working out of justice and in protecting individuals and society from possibility of oppression and injury in their lawful rights from the existence of such powerful entities as trade unions, it is after all in essence and principle merely a procedural matter. As a matter of substantive law, all the members of the union engaged in a combination doing unlawful injury are liable to suit and recovery, and the only question is whether when they have voluntarily, and for the purpose of acquiring concentrated strength and the faculty of quick unit action and elasticity, created a self-acting body with great funds to accomplish their purpose, they may not be sued as this body, and the funds they have accumulated may not be made to satisfy claims for injuries unlawfully caused in carrying out their united purpose.

Trade unions have been recognized as lawful by the Clayton act; they have been tendered formal incorporation as national unions by the act of congress approved June 29, 1886 [24 stat. 86], in the act of June 29, 1886 [24 stat. 86], 1912 [37 stat. 415], a commission on industrial relations was created providing that three of the commissioners should represent organized labor.

The transportation act of 1920, sections 302-307 [41 stat. 469], recognizes labor unions in creation of railroad boards of adjustment, and provides for action by the railroad labor board upon their application. The act of congress approved Aug. 5, 1909, Chap. 6, Sec. 38, 36, stat. 112, and the act approved Oct. 3, 1913, Chap. 16, Subd. G. A. [33 stat. 172], expressly exempt labor unions from excise taxes.

Periodical publications issued by or under the auspices of trade unions are admitted into the mails as second-class mail matter. Acts of 1911, 1912, Chap. 389 [37 stat, 550]. The legality of labor unions of postal employes is expressly recognized by act of congress, approved Aug. 24, 1912, Chap. 389, Sec. 6 [37 stat. 539, 555]. By act of congress, passed Aug. 1, 1914, no money was to be used from funds therein appropriated to prosecute unions under the antitrust act [38 stat. 609, 652].

In this state of federal legislation we think that such organizations are suable in the federal courts for their acts, and that funds accumulated to be expended in conducting strikes are subject to execution in suits for torts committed by such unions in strikes. The fact that the Supreme court of Arkansas has since taken a different view in Baskins vs. the United Mine Workers of America, supra, cannot under the conformity act operate as a limitation on the federal procedure in this regard.

Our conclusion as to the suability of the defendants is confirmed in the case at bar by the words of sections 7 and 8 of the antitrust law. The persons who may be sued under section 7 include "corporations and associations existing under or authorized by the laws of either the United States, or the laws of any of the territories, the laws of any state, the laws of any foreign country."

Come Under Sherman Act.

The language is very broad and the words given their natural signification certainly include labor unions like these. They are, as has been abundantly shown, associations existing under the laws of the United States, of the territories thereof and of the states of the union. Congress was passing drastic legislation to remedy a threatening danger to the public welfare and did not intend that any persons or combinations of persons should escape its application. Their thought was especially directed against business associations and combinations that were unincorporated to do the things forbidden by the act, but they used language broad enough to include all associations which might violate its provisions organized by the statutes of the United States or the states or the territories, or foreign countries as lawfully existing; and this, of course, includes labor unions, as the legislation referred to shows.

Thus it was that in the cases of United States vs. Trans-Missouri Freight association, 166 U. S. 29; United States vs. Joint Traffic association, 171 U. S. 505; Montague & Co. vs. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, and Eastern States Lumber association vs. United States, 234 U. S. 600, unincorporated associations were made parties to suits in the federal courts under the antitrust act without question by any one as to the correctness of the procedure.

For these reasons we conclude that the international union, the district No. 21 and the twenty-seven local unions were properly made parties defendant here and properly served by process on their principal officers.

In regard to the third point the court held that the evidence did not sustain the contention that the United Mine Workers of America interfered with the coal company's business and that the strike was a local one, declared and conducted by a district organization. The decision also sustained the fourth contention of the mine workers that obstruction to coal mining was not obstruction to interstate commerce. The Supreme court held that "coal mining is not interstate commerce and the power of congress does not extend to its regulation as such." The conclusions as to the first four questions made it unnecessary, in the opinion of the court, to examine the objection to the supplemental charge of the court below.

In conclusion the Supreme court said:

"The case has been prepared by counsel for the plaintiffs with rare assiduity and ability. The circumstances are such as to awaken regret that in our view of federal jurisdiction we cannot affirm the judgment. But it is of far higher importance that we should preserve inviolate the fundamental limitations in respect to the federal jurisdiction.

"The judgment is reversed and the case remanded to the district court for further proceedings in conformity to this opinion."

INJUNCTION USED BY LABOR.

Ordinarily injunctions have been asked for and obtained by employers of labor in strikes, but in a case decided by Justice Robert F. Wagner of the New York State Supreme court, on Jan. 11, 1922, the situation was reversed, and labor was the beneficiary of the legal procedure. The Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective association in New York city had a three-year agreement with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, the contract ending June 1, 1922. It covered wages and working conditions. In October, 1921, the employers, to meet competition in other cities, tried to introduce longer hours and wages on the piece-price plan. This was considered a violation of the contract by the employes and a strike ensued. An injunction was applied for by the garment workers and was granted temporarily by a lower court. This injunction was made permanent by Justice Wagner on the date named. In his decision he called upon the employers to cease "taking or continuing in any concerted action involving the violation or repudiation" of the existing agreement with the union. The justice remarked:

"It is elementary and yet sometimes requires emphasis that the door of a court of equity is open to employer and employe alike. It is no respecter of persons; it is keen to protect the legal rights of all. Heretofore the employer alone has prayed the protection of a court of equity against threatened irreparable illegal acts of the employe.

"But mutuality of obligation compels a mutuality of remedy. The fact that the employes have entered equity's threshold by a hitherto untraveled path does not lessen their rights to the law's decree.

"Precedent is not our only guide in deciding these disputes, for many are worn out by time and made useless by the more enlightened and humane conception of social justice. That progressive sentiment of advanced civilization which has compelled legislative action to correct and improve conditions which a proper regard for humanity would no longer tolerate cannot be ignored by the courts. Our decisions should be in harmony with that modern conception and not in defiance of it.

"It can not be seriously contended that the plaintiffs have an adequate remedy at law. That the damages resulting from the alleged violation of the agreement would be irremediable at law is too patent for discussion. There are over 40,000 workers whose rights are involved and over 300 defendant organizations. The contract expires within six months, and a trial of the issues can hardly be held within that time. It is unthinkable that the court should force litigants into a court of law. A court of equity looks to the substance and essence of things, and disregards matters of form and technical niceties."

The issuance of the injunction resulted in the calling off of the strike and the reinstatement by the employers of the week-work system and the forty-four-hour week as provided in the original agreement.

SUMMIT OF MOUNT EVEREST NOT ATTAINED.

The members of the expedition organized in 1921 by the Royal Geographical society and the Alpine club of London to explore and if possible ascend Mount Everest, the highest peak in the world, made three heroic efforts to complete their mission in 1922, but failed to reach the summit by about 1,700 feet. On May 21 three members of the party, Somervell, Mallory and Norton, reached a point 26,800 feet up without the use of oxygen. On May 27 Capt. George Finch and Capt. Geoffrey Bruce reached a point about halfway between the northeast shoulder and the summit of Everest, at an altitude of 27,300 feet. This they were enabled to do by means of the oxygen apparatus they carried with them. They had only about 1,700 feet to go, but they were completely fagged out and had to turn back. Both the records made on the 21st and 27th of May exceeded the highest altitude ever reached previously by any mountain climber. The old record was held by the duke of the Abruzzi, who in 1909 reached a height of 24,583 feet on Mt. Godwin-Austen in India.

The expedition made still another attempt to reach the summit on June 7, when Mallory, Somervell and Crawford and three parties of coolies started up the north col or shoulder. The members of each party were roped together. At first all went well, but when they were about halfway up the shoulder the snow field on which they were climbing gave way and all the parties were carried down by an avalanche. Mallory, Somervell and Crawford with one porter slid 150 feet, but escaped unhurt. The second party, consisting of coolies, also escaped just as the slide reached the edge of a cliff. The other two parties were swept over the precipice. Seven of the porters fell into a deep crevasse and were buried by the avalanche. Six of the bodies were recovered. Four of the other porters were rescued with difficulty. This disaster put an end to the expedition's efforts to conquer Mount Everest. Many of the members suffered severely from frost bites and all were more or less disabled as the result of their extraordinary exertions.

Gen. C. G. Bruce, leader of the expedition, expressed the opinion that from the experience gained in 1922 there was no reason to believe that a future effort to reach the top would not be successful, though Everest had two powerful allies—the shortness of the season in which climbing could be done at all and the terrible winds from the west sweeping its heights. The organization of another expedition to continue the effort to scale the mighty peak was under way toward the close of 1922.

DEATH OF EX-EMPEROR CHARLES I. OF AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

Charles I., former emperor of Austria and king of Hungary, died in exile at Funchal, Madeira, April 1, 1922, after an illness of about a week from pneumonia. Charles was born Aug. 17, 1887, his father being Archduke Otto of Saxony and his mother Princess Marie-Josephe of Saxony. He was reared by his mother, as his father was a profligate and such a wreck mentally and physically as to make his confinement necessary. Charles attended the public schools in Vienna. Both here and later in the army he was democratic in his ways and was popular. When Archduke Francis Ferdinand was assassinated at Sarajevo on June 28, 1914, Charles became heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, which he ascended on the death of the aged Francis Joseph Nov. 21, 1916. The defeat of Austria-Hungary and Germany in the great war and revolutionary movements both in Hungary and Austria compelled him to flee to Switzerland late in 1918.

Charles made two futile attempts to regain the throne of Hungary, the first in March and the second in October, 1921. On the first occasion he crossed the border in an automobile and went to Budapest. There Admiral Horthy, the regent, refused to recognize him as king and he was compelled to return to Switzerland. On the second occasion he entered Hungary by airplane and attempted to regain power by force, but was defeated and arrested. The allies and the little entente (Czecho-Slovakia, Roumania and Jugo Slavia) demanded that he be exiled and in November he was sent to Madeira.

Charles was married to Princess Zita, daughter of Duke Robert of Parma, of Bourbon descent, Oct. 21, 1911. Seven children were born to them, the oldest being Francis Joseph Otto, whose natal day was Nov. 20, 1912. The Hungarian royalists proclaimed him their candidate for the throne.

LIQUOR FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES.

Act supplemental to the national prohibition act passed at the first session of the 67th congress and approved Nov. 23, 1921.

Be it enacted, etc., that the words "person," "commissioner," "application," "permit," "regulation" and "liquor," and the phrase "intoxicating liquor," when used in this act, shall have the same meaning as they have in title 2 of the national prohibition act.

Section 2. That only spirituous and vinous liquor may be prescribed for medicinal purposes and all permits to prescribe and prescriptions for any other liquor shall be void. No physician shall prescribe nor shall any person sell or furnish on any prescription any vinous liquor that contains more than 24 per centum of alcohol by volume, nor shall any one prescribe or sell or furnish on any prescription more than one-fourth of one gallon of vinous liquor, or any such vinous or spirituous liquor that contains separately or in the aggregate more than one-half pint of alcohol, for use by any person within any period of ten days. No physician shall be furnished with more than 100 prescription blanks for use in any period of ninety days, nor shall any physician issue more than that number of prescriptions within any such period unless on application therefor he shall make it clearly apparent to the commissioner that for some extraordinary reason a larger amount is necessary, whereupon the necessary additional blanks may be furnished him. But this provision shall not be construed to limit the sale of any article the manufacture of which is authorized under section 4, title 2, of the national prohibition act.

If the commissioner shall find after hearing, upon notice as required in section 5 of title 2 of the national prohibition act, that any article enumerated in subdivisions b, c, d or e of section 4 of title 2 of said national prohibition act is being used as a beverage, or for intoxicating beverage purposes, he may require a change of formula of such article, and in the event that such change is not made within a time to be named by the commissioner he may cancel the permit for the manufacture of such article unless it is made clearly to appear to the commissioner that such use can only occur in rare or exceptional instances, but such action of the commissioner may by appropriate proceedings in a court of equity be reviewed, as provided for in section 5, title 2, of said national prohibition act: Provided, That no change of formula shall be required and no permit to manufacture any article under subdivision (E), section 4, title 2 of the national prohibition act shall be revoked unless the sale or use of such article is substantially increased in the community by reason of its use as a beverage or for intoxicating beverage purposes.

No spirituous liquor shall be imported into the United States, nor shall any permit be granted authorizing the manufacture of any spirituous liquor, save alcohol, until the amount of such liquor now in distilleries or other bonded warehouses shall have been reduced to a quantity that in the opinion of the commissioner will, with liquor that may thereafter be manufactured and imported, be sufficient to supply the current need thereafter for all nonbeverage uses: Provided, That no vinous liquor shall be imported into the United States unless it is made to appear to the commissioner that vinous liquor for such nonbeverage use produced in the United States is not sufficient to meet such nonbeverage needs: Provided further, That this provision against importation shall not apply to shipments en route to the United States at the time of the passage of this act: And provided further, That the commissioner may authorize the return to the United States under such regulations and conditions as he may prescribe any distilled spirits of American production exported free of tax and reimported in original packages in which exported and consigned for redeposit in the distillery bonded warehouse from which originally removed.

Sec. 3. That this act and the national prohibition act shall apply not only to the United States but to all territory subject to its jurisdiction, including the territory of Hawaii and the Virgin islands; and jurisdiction is conferred on the courts of the territory of Hawaii and the Virgin islands to enforce this act and the national prohibition act in such territory and islands.

Sec. 4. That regulations may be made by the commissioner to carry into effect the provisions of this act. Any person who violates any of the provisions of this act shall be subject to the penalties provided for in the national prohibition act.

Sec. 5. That all laws in regard to the manufacture and taxation of and traffic in intoxicating liquor, and all penalties for violations of such laws that were in force when the national prohibition act was enacted, shall be and continue in force as to both beverage and nonbeverage liquor, except such provisions of such laws as are directly in conflict with any provision of the national prohibition act or of this act: but if any act is a violation of any of such laws and also of the national prohibition act or of this act, a conviction for such act or offense under one shall be a bar to prosecution therefor under the other. All taxes and tax penalties provided for in section 35 of title 2 of the national prohibition act shall be assessed and collected in the same manner and by the same procedure as other taxes on the manufacture of or traffic in liquor.

If distilled spirits upon which the internal-revenue tax has not been paid are lost by theft, accidental fire or other casualty while in possession of a common carrier subject to the transportation act of 1920 or the merchant marine act, 1920, or if lost by theft from a distillery or other bonded warehouse, and it shall be made to appear to the commissioner that such losses did not occur as the result of negligence, connivance, collusion or fraud on the part of the owner or person legally accountable for such distilled spirits, no tax shall be assessed or collected upon the distilled spirits so lost, nor shall any tax penalty be imposed or collected by reason of such loss, but the exemption from the tax and penalty shall only be allowed to the extent that the claimant is not indemnified against or recompensed for such loss. This provision shall apply to any claim for taxes or tax penalties that may have accrued since the passage of the national prohibition act or that may accrue hereafter. Nothing in this section shall be construed as in any manner limiting or restricting the provisions of title 3 of the national prohibition act.

Sec. 6. That any officer, agent or employe of the United States engaged in the enforcement of this act, or the national prohibition act, or any other law of the United States, who shall search any private dwelling as defined in the national prohibition act, and occupied as such dwelling, without a warrant directing such search, or who while so engaged shall without a search warrant maliciously and without reasonable cause search any other building or property, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined for a first offense not more than $1,000 and for a subsequent offense not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment.

Whoever not being an officer, agent or employe of the United States shall falsely represent himself to be such officer, agent or employe and in such assumed character shall arrest or detain any person, or shall in any manner search the person, buildings or other property of any person, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. (Approved Nov. 23, 1921.)

DEATH OF POPE BENEDICT XV.

Pope Benedict XV., the 260th in the line of heads of the Roman Catholic church, died in the Vatican, Rome, at 6 o'clock on Sunday morning, Jan. 22, 1922, after a brief illness from pneumonia resulting from an attack of influenza. He had occupied the papal throne less than eight years, having been elected pontiff Sept. 3, 1914, and crowned three days later. He was born in Genoa, Italy, Nov. 21, 1854, and consequently was in his 67th year at the time he passed away.

The body of the dead pope was removed from the room in which he died to the sacrament chapel of St. Peter's. There it was placed on a catafalque and surrounded by candles behind the massive gilded gates of the inclosure. The body was attired in regal robes with a gold miter on the head and a rosary in the hand. It lay in state for three days and was viewed by thousands of Italians and others. At noon on Jan. 26 the doors of St. Peter's church were closed. At 3 o'clock the body was carried from the catafalque in the sacrament chapel to the choir chapel across the nave, where the funeral ceremonies took place. Only the cardinals and the papal nobility, members of the late pope's family and the diplomatic corps attached to the Vatican were admitted. The body was placed in a white casket which in turn was inclosed in a lead coffin bearing in Latin the following inscription:

"The body of Benedict XV., pontifex maximus, who lived sixty-seven years, reigned over the universal church seven years and died Jan. 22, 1922."

The coffin was lowered into the old basilica under the papal altar, where it was placed beside the caskets containing the bodies of Pius X. and several other popes.

POPE PIUS XI. SUCCEEDS BENEDICT XV.

Cardinal Achille Ratti of Milan, Italy, was elected and proclaimed pope in succession to Benedict XV. on the forenoon of Feb. 6, 1922. He took the name of Pius XI. Soon after assuming the papal vestments he appeared on the balcony of St. Peter's and bestowed his benediction on the assembled multitude. He pleaded for universal pacification and blessed all nations and all peoples. The secretary of state, through Prince Chigi-Albani, marshal of the conclave, gave out the following statement concerning the benediction and the significance attached to the place from which it was bestowed:

His holiness Pope Pius XI., while making every reservation in favor of the inviolable rights of the church and the holy see, which rights he has sworn to defend, has given his first blessing from the exterior balcony overlooking the square of St. Peter's in the special intention that his blessing should be addressed not only to those present in the square, and not only to those in Rome and Italy, but to all nations and all peoples, and should bring to the whole world the wish and announcement of that universal pacification we all so ardently desire."

The conclave for the election of a new pope began in the Sistine chapel of the Vatican on the morning of Friday, Feb. 3. Two ballots were taken on that day, two on Saturday and two on Sunday, or six in all, without any candidate's receiving the two-thirds vote necessary. It was on the seventh ballot, taken on Monday morning, that Cardinal Ratti was chosen head of the Roman Catholic church. No American cardinal was present, William H. O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, arriving in Rome an hour after the election took place.

One of the first acts of Pope Pius XI. was to reappoint Cardinal Pietro Gasparri as papal secretary of state. The new pontiff was crowned with the usual ceremonies on Sunday, Feb. 14.

Achille Ratti, who became the 261st head of the Roman Catholic church, was born in Desio, Italy, March 31, 1857. For many years he was librarian of the Ambrosian library and archives at Milan. Later he became librarian at the Vatican. In this position he remained until the new republic of Poland established official diplomatic relations with the Vatican, at which time Ratti was appointed archbishop and was assigned to Poland as the representative of the holy see. His discharge of important ecclesiastical functions when the Polish question became acute earned for him the esteem of Benedict XV. and the gratitude of Vatican authorities. It was because of his service that the red hat was conferred upon him on June 16, 1921, when a similar honor was bestowed on Cardinal Laurenti. Poland was torn with the estrangements from church brought about by the communistic propaganda from soviet Russia. Archbishop Ratti counteracted the spread of radicalism. He also won the esteem of Polish Catholics by his efforts in behalf of destitute children orphaned by the war.

Cardinal Ratti as the archbishop of Milan presided over one of the most important archdioceses in Italy. The city being a great industrial center, one of its main requirements is that the cardinal shall possess a thorough knowledge of political and social problems.

Net Income of Individuals Defined.

Sec. 212. (a) That in the case of an individual the term "net income" means the gross income as defined in section 213, less the deductions allowed by section 214.

(b) The net income shall be computed upon the basis of the taxpayer's annual accounting period (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of such taxpayer; but if no such method of accounting has been so employed, or if the method employed does not clearly reflect the income, the computation shall be made upon such basis and in such manner as in the opinion of the commissioner does clearly reflect the income. If the taxpayer's annual accounting period is other than a fiscal year as defined in section 200, or if the taxpayer has no annual accounting period or does not keep books, the net income shall be computed on the basis of the calendar year.

(c) If a taxpayer changes his accounting period from fiscal year to calendar year, from calendar year to fiscal year, or from one fiscal year to another, the net income shall, with the approval of the commissioner, be computed on the basis of such new accounting period, subject to the provisions of section 226.

Gross Income Defined.

Sec. 213. That for the purposes of this title (except as otherwise provided in section 233) the term "gross income"—

(a) Includes gains, profits and income derived from salaries, wages or compensation for personal service (including in the case of the president of the United States, the judges of the Supreme and inferior courts of the United States and all other officers and employes, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, Alaska, Hawaii or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, the compensation received as such), of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce or sales, or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in such property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities or the transaction of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever. The amount of all such items (except as provided in subdivision (e) of section 201) shall be included in the gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer, unless, under methods of accounting permitted under subdivision (b) of section 212, any such amounts are to be properly accounted for as of a different period;

In the case of obligations of the United States issued after Sept. 1, 1917 (other than postal savings certificates of deposit); and in the case of bonds issued by the War Finance corporation, the interest shall be exempt only if and to the extent provided in the respective acts authorizing the issue thereof as amended and supplemented, and shall be excluded from gross income only if and to the extent it is wholly exempt to the taxpayer from income, war-profits and excess-profits taxes;

(5) The income of foreign governments received from investments in the United States in stocks, bonds or other domestic securities owned by such foreign governments, or from interest on deposits in banks in the United States of moneys belonging to such foreign governments, or from any other source within the United States.

(10) So much of the amount received by an individual, after Dec. 31, 1921, and before Jan. 1, 1927, as dividends or interest from domestic building and loan associations, operated exclusively for the purpose of making loans to members, as does not exceed $300;

(11) The rental value of a dwelling house and appurtenances thereof furnished to a minister of the gospel as part of his compensation;

(c) In the case of a nonresident alien individual, gross income means only the gross income from sources within the United States, determined under the provisions of section 217.

Deductions Allowed Individuals.

Sec. 214 (a) That in computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions:

(1) All the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered; traveling expenses (including the entire amount expended for meals and lodging) while away from home in the pursuit of a trade or business; and rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession, for purposes of the trade or business, of property to which the taxpayer has not taken or is not taking title or in which he has no equity;

(2) All interest paid or accrued within the taxable year on indebtedness, except on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations or securities (other than obligations of the United States issued after Sept. 24, 1917, and originally subscribed for by the taxpayer) the interest upon which is wholly exempt from taxation under this title;

(3) Taxes paid or accrued within the taxable year except (a) income, war profits and excess-profits taxes imposed by the authority of the United States, (b) so much of the income, war-profits and excess-profits taxes, imposed by the authority of any foreign country or possession of the United States, as is allowed as a credit under section 222; (c) taxes assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to increase the value of the property assessed, and (d) taxes imposed upon the taxpayer upon his interest as shareholder or member of a corporation, which are paid by the corporation without reimbursement from the taxpayer. For the purpose of this paragraph estate, inheritance, legacy and succession taxes accrue on the due date thereof except as otherwise provided by the law of the jurisdiction imposing such taxes;

(4) Losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, if incurred in trade or business;

(5) Losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, if incurred in any transaction entered into for profit, though not connected with the trade or business; but in the case of a nonresident alien individual only if and to the extent that the profit, if such transaction had resulted in a profit, would be taxable under this title. No deduction shall be allowed under this paragraph for any loss claimed to have been sustained in any sale or other disposition of shares of stock or securities made after the passage of this act where it appears that within thirty days before or after the date of such sale or other disposition the taxpayer has acquired (otherwise than by bequest or inheritance) substantially identical property, and the property so acquired is held by the taxpayer for any period after such sale or other disposition. If such acquisition is to the extent of part only of substantially identical property, then only a proportionate part of the loss shall be disallowed;

(6) Losses sustained during the taxable year of property not connected with the trade or business (but in the case of a nonresident alien individual only property within the United States) if arising from fires, storms, shipwreck or other casualty, or from theft, and if not compensated for by insurance or otherwise. In case of losses arising from destruction of or damage to property, where the property so destroyed or damaged was acquired before March 1, 1913, the deduction shall be computed upon the basis of its fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913;

(7) Debts ascertained to be worthless and charged off within the taxable year (or, in the discretion of the commissioner, a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts); and when satisfied that a debt is recoverable only in part, the commissioner may allow such debt to be charged off in part;

(8) A reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property used in the trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence. In the case of such property acquired before March 1, 1913, this deduction shall be computed upon the basis of its fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913;

(9) In the case of buildings, machinery, equipment or other facilities erected, installed or acquired on or after April 6, 1917, for the production of articles contributing to the prosecution of the war against the German government, and in the case of vessels constructed or acquired on or after such date for the transportation of articles or men contributing to the prosecution of such war, there shall be allowed, for any taxable year ending before March 3, 1924 (if claim therefor was made at the time of filing return for the taxable year 1918, 1919, 1920 or 1921) a reasonable deduction for the amortization of such part of the cost of such facilities or vessels as has been borne by the taxpayer, but not again including any amount otherwise allowed under this title or previous acts of congress as a deduction in computing net income. At any time before March 3, 1924, the commissioner may re-examine the return, and if he then finds that the deduction originally allowed was incorrect, the income, war-profits and excess-profits taxes for the year or years affected shall be redetermined.

(10) In the case of mines, oil and gas wells, other natural deposits and timber, a reasonable allowance for depletion and for depreciation of improvements, according to the peculiar conditions in each case, based upon cost including cost of development not otherwise deducted.

(11) Contributions or gifts made within the taxable year to or for the use of: (a) The United States, any state, territory or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, for exclusively public purposes; (b) any corporation or community chest, fund or foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational purposes, including posts of the American Legion or the women's auxiliary units thereof, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual; or (c) the special fund for vocational rehabilitation authorized by section 7 of the vocational rehabilitation act, to an amount which in all the above cases combined does not exceed 15 per centum of the taxpayer's net income as computed without the benefit of this paragraph.

(12) If property is compulsorily or involuntarily converted into cash or its equivalent as a result of (a) its destruction in whole or in part, (b) theft or seizure, or (c) an exercise of the power of requisition or condemnation or the threat or imminence thereof, and if the taxpayer proceeds forthwith in good faith, under regulations prescribed by the commissioner with the approval of the secretary, to expend the proceeds of such conversion in the acquisition of other property of a character similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, or in the acquisition of 80 per centum or more of the stock or shares of a corporation owning such other property, or in the establishment of a replacement fund, then there shall be allowed as a deduction such portion of the gain derived as the portion of the proceeds so expended bears to the entire proceeds. The provisions of this paragraph shall apply so far as may be practicable to the exemption or exclusion of such proceeds or gains from gross income under prior income, war-profits and excess-profits tax acts.

Items Not Deductible.

Sec. 215. (a) That in computing net income no deduction shall in any case be allowed in respect of:

(1) Personal, living or family expenses;

(2) Any amount paid out for new buildings or for permanent improvements or betterments made to increase the value of any property or estate;

(3) Any amount expended in restoring property or in making good the exhaustion thereof for which an allowance is or has been made; or

(4) Premiums paid on any life insurance policy covering the life of any officer or employe, or of any person financially interested in any trade or business carried on by the taxpayer, when the taxpayer is directly or indirectly a beneficiary under such policy.

(b) Amounts paid under the laws of any state or foreign country as income to the holder of a life or terminable interest acquired by gift, bequest or inheritance shall not be reduced or diminished by any deduction for shrinkage in the value of such interest due to the lapse of time, nor by any deduction allowed by this act for the purpose of computing the net income of an estate or trust but not allowed under the laws of such state or foreign country for the purpose of computing the income to which such holder is entitled.

Credits Allowed Individuals.

Sec. 216. That for the purpose of the normal tax only there shall be allowed the following credits:

(a) The amount received as dividends (1) from a domestic corporation other than a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262, or (2) from a foreign corporation when it is shown to the satisfaction of the commissioner that more than 50 per centum of the gross income of such foreign corporation for the three-year period ending with the close of its taxable year preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the corporation has been in existence) was derived from sources within the United States as determined under the provisions of section 217;

(b) The amount received as interest upon obligations of the United States and bonds issued by the War Finance corporation, which is included in gross income under section 213;

(c) In the case of a single person a personal exemption of $1,000; or in the case of the head of a family or a married person living with husband or wife, a personal exemption of $2,500, unless the net income is in excess of $5,000, in which case the personal exemption shall be $2,000. A husband and wife living together shall receive but one personal exemption. The amount of such personal exemption shall be $2,500, unless the aggregate net income of such husband and wife is in excess of $5,000, in which case the amount of such personal exemption shall be $2,000. If such husband and wife make separate returns, the personal exemption may be taken by either or divided between them. In no case shall the reduction of the personal exemption from $2,500 to $2,000 operate to increase the tax which would be payable if the exemption were $2,500 by more than the amount of the net income in excess of $5,000;

(d) $400 for each person (other than husband or wife) dependent upon and receiving his chief support from the taxpayer if such dependent person is under 18 years of age or is incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective.

(e) In the case of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262 the personal exemption shall be only $1,000, and he shall not be entitled to the credit provided in subdivision (d).

(f) The credits allowed by subdivisions (c), (d) and (e) of this section shall be determined by the status of the taxpayer on the last day of the period for which the return of income is made; but in the case of an individual who dies during the taxable year such credits shall be determined by his status at the time of his death, and in such case full credits shall be allowed to the surviving spouse, if any, according to his or her status at the close of the period for which such survivor makes return of income.

PARTNERSHIPS AND PERSONAL SERVICE CORPORATIONS.

Sec. 218. (a) That individuals carrying on business in partnership shall be liable for income tax only in their individual capacity. There shall be included in computing the net income of each partner his distributive share, whether distributed or not, of the net income of the partnership for the taxable year, or if his net income for such taxable year is computed upon the basis of a period different from that upon the basis of which the net income of the partnership is computed, then his distributive share of the net income of the partnership for any accounting period of the partnership ending within the fiscal or calendar year upon the basis of which the partner's net income is computed.

(b) The partner shall, for the purpose of the normal tax, be allowed as credits, in addition to the credits allowed to him under section 216, his proportionate share of such amounts specified in subdivisions (a) and (b) of section 216 as are received by the partnership.

(c) The net income of the partnership shall be computed in the same manner and on the same basis as provided in section 212, except that the deduction provided in paragraph 11 of subdivision (a) of section 214 shall not be allowed.

earnings and principal of the fund accumulated by the trust in accordance with such plan, shall not be taxable under this section, but the amount actually distributed or made available to any distributee shall be taxable to him in the year in which so distributed or made available to the extent that it exceeds the amounts paid in by him.

The return shall be sworn to by any one of the partners.

(a) That every fiduciary (except a receiver appointed by authority of law in possession of part only of the property of an individual) shall make under oath a return for any of the following individuals, estates or trusts for which he acts, stating specifically the items of gross income thereof and the deductions and credits allowed under this title—

(1) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $1,000 or over, if single, or if married and not living with husband or wife;

DEATH OF VISCOUNT JAMES BRYCE.

Viscount James Bryce, noted as an author, statesman and diplomat, died at Sidmouth, Devonshire, England, Jan. 22, 1922, at the age of 83. In the United States he was known chiefly as the author of "The American Commonwealth," long used as a standard textbook in the schools, and as British ambassador in Washington from 1907 to 1913. It was often said of him that he understood the principles on which the American republic was based better than did most American statesmen. Viscount Bryce filled many important posts, wrote much and ably on varied subjects and took part in numerous diplomatic conferences. His opinions and decisions were sought and accepted on both sides of the Atlantic and the public had complete confidence in the soundness and impartiality of his judgment. He was active almost to the last and died peacefully after a brief illness.

There shall be levied upon all articles coming into the United States from the Philippines the rates of duty required to be levied upon like articles imported from foreign countries: Provided, That articles the growth or product of or manufactured in the Philippines from materials the growth or product of the Philippines or of the United States, or of both, upon which no drawback of customs duties has been allowed therein, coming into the United States from the Philippines shall hereafter be admitted free of duty; similar articles under similar conditions shall be admitted to the Philippines duty free. There shall be levied and paid in the United States upon articles coming from the Philippines a tax equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed upon like articles of domestic merchandise; such articles shall be exempt from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal revenue laws of the Philippines. There shall be paid in the Philippines upon articles coming from the United States a tax equal to the internal revenue tax imposed in the Philippines on similar articles manufactured there; such articles shall be exempt from the payment of internal revenue taxes in the United States.

Goods for Porto Rico.

Articles, goods, wares or merchandise going into Porto Rico from the United States shall be exempted from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal revenue laws of the United States.

Bounties Equalized by Duties.

Whenever any country, dependency, colony, province or other political subdivision of government, person, partnership, association, cartel or corporation shall pay or bestow, directly or indirectly, any bounty or grant upon the manufacture or production or export of any article or merchandise manufactured or produced in such country, dependency, colony, province or other political subdivision of government, and such article or merchandise is dutiable under the provisions of this act, then upon the importation of any such article or merchandise into the United States, whether the same shall be imported directly from the country of production or otherwise, and whether such article or merchandise is imported in the same condition as when exported from the country of production or has been changed in condition by remanufacture or otherwise, there shall be levied and paid, in all such cases, in addition to the duties otherwise imposed by this act, an additional duty equal to the net amount of such bounty or grant, however the same be paid or bestowed. The net amount of all such bounties or grants shall be from time to time ascertained, determined and declared by the secretary of the treasury.

Any such article held in customs custody shall not be delivered until so marked, stamped, branded or labeled, and until every such article of the importation which shall have been released from customs custody not so marked, stamped, branded or labeled, shall be marked, stamped, branded or labeled in accordance with such rules and regulations as the secretary of the treasury may prescribe. Unless the article is exported under customs supervision, there shall be levied, collected and paid upon every such article which at the time of importation is not so marked, stamped, branded or labeled, in addition to the regular duty imposed by law on such article, a duty of 10 per centum of the appraised value thereof, or if such article is free of duty there shall be levied, collected and paid upon such article a duty of 10 per centum of the appraised value thereof.

Power Vested in President.

In order to regulate the foreign commerce of the United States and to put into force and effect the policy of the congress by this act intended, whenever the president, upon investigation of the differences in costs of production of articles wholly or in part the growth or product of the United States and of like or similar articles wholly or in part the growth or product of competing foreign countries, shall find it thereby shown that the duties fixed in this act do not equalize the said differences in costs of production in the United States and the principal competing country he shall by such investigation ascertain said differences and determine and proclaim the changes in classifications or increases or decreases in any rate of duty provided in this act shown by said ascertained differences in such costs of production necessary to equalize the same. Thirty days after the date of such proclamation or proclamations such changes in classification shall take effect, and such increased or decreased duties shall be levied, collected and paid on such articles when imported from any foreign country into the United States or into any of its possessions (except the Philippine islands, the Virgin islands and the islands of Guam and Tutuila): Provided, That the total increase or decrease of such rates of duty shall not exceed 50 per centum of the rates specified in title I. of this act, or in any amendatory act.

In order to regulate the foreign commerce of the United States and to put into force and effect the policy of the congress by this act intended, whenever the president upon investigation of the differences in costs of production of articles provided for in title I. of this act, wholly or in part the growth or product of the United States and of like or similar articles wholly or in part the growth or product of competing foreign countries, shall find it thereby shown that the duties prescribed in this act do not equalize said differences, and shall further find it thereby shown that the said differences in costs of production in the United States and the principal competing country cannot be equalized by proceeding under the provisions of this section, he shall make such findings public, together with a description of the articles to which they apply, in such detail as may be necessary for the guidance of appraising officers. In such cases and upon the proclamation by the president becoming effective the ad valorem duty or duty based in whole or in part upon the value of the imported article in the country of exportation shall thereafter be based upon the American selling price of any similar competitive article manufactured or produced in the United States embraced within the class or kind of imported articles upon which the president has made a proclamation.

The ad valorem rate or rates of duty based upon such American selling price shall be the rate found, upon said investigation by the president, to be shown by the said differences in costs of production necessary to equalize such differences, but no such rate shall be decreased more than 50 per centum of the rate specified in title I. of this act upon such articles, nor shall any such rate be increased. Such rate or rates of duty shall become effective fifteen days after the date of the proclamation of the president, whereupon the duties so estimated and provided shall be levied, collected and paid on such articles when imported from any foreign country into the United States or into any of its possessions (except the Philippine islands, the Virgin islands and the islands of Guam and Tutuila).

In ascertaining the differences in costs of production the president, in so far as he finds it practicable, shall take into consideration (1) the differences in conditions in production, including wages, costs of material and other items in costs of production of such or similar articles in the United States and in competing foreign countries; (2) the differences in the wholesale selling prices of domestic and foreign articles in the principal markets of the United States; (3) advantages granted to a foreign producer by a foreign government or by a person, partnership, corporation or association in a foreign country; and (4) any other advantages or disadvantages in competition.

Investigations to assist the president in ascertaining differences in costs of production under this section shall be made by the United States tariff commission, and no proclamation shall be issued under this section until such investigation shall have been made. The commission shall give reasonable public notice of its hearings and shall give reasonable opportunity to parties interested to be present, to produce evidence and to be heard. The commission is authorized to adopt such reasonable procedure, rules and regulations as it may deem necessary.

The president, proceeding as hereinbefore provided for in proclaiming rates of duty, shall, when he determines that it is shown that the differences in costs of production have changed or no longer exist which led to such proclamation, accordingly as so shown, modify or terminate the same. Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize a transfer of an article from the dutiable list to the free list or from the free list to the dutiable list, nor a change in form of duty. Whenever it is provided in any paragraph of title I. of this act that the duty or duties shall not exceed a specified ad valorem rate upon the articles provided for in such paragraph, no rate determined under the provision of this section upon such articles shall exceed the maximum ad valorem rate so specified.

Unfair Competition.

Unfair methods of competition and unfair acts in the importation of articles into the United States, or in their sale by the owner, importer, consignee or agent of either, the effect or tendency of which is to destroy or substantially injure an industry efficiently and economically operated in the United States, or to prevent the establishment of such an industry, or to restrain or monopolize trade and commerce in the United States, are hereby declared unlawful. To assist the president in making any decisions under this section the United States tariff commission is hereby authorized to investigate any alleged violation hereof on complaint under oath or upon its initiative. The final findings of the commission shall be transmitted with the record to the president.

Whenever the existence of any such unfair method or act shall be established to the satisfaction of the president he shall determine the rate of additional duty, not exceeding 50 nor less than 10 per centum of the value of such articles, which will offset such method or act, and which is hereby imposed upon articles imported in violation of this act, or, in what he shall be satisfied and find are extreme cases of unfair methods or acts as aforesaid, he shall direct that such articles as he shall deem the interests of the United States shall require, imported by any person violating the provisions of this act, shall be excluded from entry into the United States, and upon information of such action by the president, the secretary of the treasury shall, through the proper officers, assess such additional duties or refuse such entry; and that the decision of the president shall be conclusive.

Whenever the president has reason to believe that any article is offered or sought to be offered for entry into the United States in violation of this section but has not information sufficient to satisfy him thereof, the secretary of the treasury shall, upon his request in writing, forbid entry thereof until such investigation as the president may deem necessary shall be completed: Provided, That the secretary of the treasury may permit entry under bond upon such conditions and penalties as he may deem adequate.

Any additional duty or any refusal of entry under this section shall continue in effect until the president shall find and instruct the secretary of the treasury that the conditions which led to the assessment of such additional duty or refusal of entry no longer exist.

The president when he finds that the public interest will be served thereby shall by proclamation specify and declare new or additional duties as hereinafter provided upon articles wholly or in part the growth or product of any foreign country whenever he shall find as a fact that such country—

Imposes, directly or indirectly, upon the disposition in or transportation in transit through or re-exportation from such country of any article wholly or in part the growth or product of the United States any unreasonable charge, exaction, regulation, or limitation which is not equally enforced upon the like articles of every foreign country;

Discriminates in fact against the commerce of the United States, directly or indirectly, by law or administrative regulation or practice, by or in respect to any customs, tonnage, or port duty, fee, charge, exaction, classification, regulation, condition, restriction, or prohibition, in such manner as to place the commerce of the United States at a disadvantage compared with the commerce of any foreign country.

If at any time the president shall find it to be a fact that any foreign country has not only discriminated against the commerce of the United States as aforesaid, but has, after the issuance of a proclamation, maintained or increased its said discriminations against the commerce of the United States, the president is hereby authorized, if he deems it consistent with the interests of the United States, to issue a further proclamation directing that such articles of said country as he shall deem the public interests may require shall be excluded from importation into the United States.

Any proclamation issued by the president under the authority of this section shall, if he deems it consistent with the interests of the United States, extend to the whole of any foreign country or may be confined to any subdivision or subdivisions thereof; and the president shall, whenever he deems the public interests require, suspend, revoke, supplement or amend any such proclamation.

Whenever the president shall find as a fact that any foreign country places any burdens upon the commerce of the United States by any of the unequal impositions or discriminations aforesaid, he shall, when he finds that the public interest will be served thereby, by proclamation specify and declare such new or additional rate or rates of duty as he shall determine will offset such burdens, not to exceed 50 per centum ad valorem or its equivalent, and on and after thirty days after the date of such proclamation there shall be levied, collected and paid upon the articles enumerated in such proclamation when imported into the United States from such foreign country such new or additional rate or rates of duty; or, in case of articles declared subject to exclusion from importation into the United States, such articles shall be excluded from importation.

Whenever the president shall find as a fact that any foreign country imposes any unequal imposition or discrimination as aforesaid upon the commerce of the United States, or that any benefits accrue or are likely to accrue to any industry in any foreign country by reason of any such imposition or discrimination imposed by any foreign country other than the foreign country in which such industry is located, and whenever the president shall determine that any new or additional rate or rates of duty or any prohibition hereinbefore provided for do not effectively remove such imposition or discrimination and that any benefits from any such imposition or discrimination accrue or are likely to accrue to any industry in any foreign country, he shall, when he finds that the public interest will be served thereby, by proclamation specify and declare such new or additional rate or rates of duty upon the articles wholly or in part the growth or product of any such industry as he shall determine will offset such benefits, not to exceed 50 per centum ad valorem or its equivalent, upon importation from any foreign country into the United States of such articles and on and after thirty days after the date of any such proclamation such new or additional rate or rates of duty so specified and declared in such proclamation shall be levied, collected, and paid upon such articles.

All articles imported contrary to the provisions of this section shall be forfeited to the United States and shall be liable to be seized, prosecuted, and condemned in like manner and under the same regulations, restrictions, and provisions as may from time to time be established for the recovery, collection, distribution and remission of forfeitures to the United States by the several revenue laws.

Methods of Valuation.

For the purposes of this act the value of imported merchandise shall be—

(1) The foreign value or the export value, whichever is higher;

(2) If neither the foreign value nor the export value can be ascertained to the satisfaction of the appraising officer, then the United States value;

(3) If neither the foreign value, the export value, nor the United States value can be ascertained to the satisfaction of the appraising officers, then the cost of production;

(4) If there be any similar competitive article manufactured or produced in the United States of a class or kind upon which the president has made public a finding, then the American selling price of such article.

The foreign value of imported merchandise shall be the market value or the price at the time of exportation of such merchandise to the United States, at which such or similar merchandise is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in the principal markets of the country from which exported, in the usual wholesale quantities and in the ordinary course of trade, including the cost of all containers and coverings of whatever nature, and all other costs, charges and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States.

The export value of imported merchandise shall be the market value or the price, at the time of exportation of such merchandise to the United States, at which such or similar merchandise is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in the principal markets of the country from which exported, in the usual wholesale quantities and in the ordinary course of trade, for exportation to the United States, plus, when not included in such price, the cost of all containers and coverings of whatever nature, and all other costs, charges and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States. If in the ordinary course of trade imported merchandise is shipped to the United States to an agent of the seller, or to the seller's branch house, pursuant to an order or an agreement to purchase (whether placed or entered into in the United States or in the foreign country), for delivery to the purchaser in the United States, and if the title to such merchandise remains in the seller until such delivery, then such merchandise shall not be deemed to be freely offered for sale in the principal markets of the country from which exported for exportation to the United States, within the meaning of this subdivision.

The United States value of imported merchandise shall be the price at which such or similar imported merchandise is freely offered for sale, packed ready for delivery, in the principal market of the United States to all purchasers, at the time of exportation of the imported merchandise, in the usual wholesale quantities and in the ordinary course of trade, with allowance made for duty, cost of transportation and insurance, and other necessary expenses from the place of shipment to the place of delivery, a commission not exceeding 6 per centum, if any has been paid or contracted to be paid on goods secured otherwise than by purchase, or profits not to exceed 8 per centum and a reasonable allowance for general expenses, not to exceed 8 per centum on purchased goods.

For the purpose of this title the cost of production of imported merchandise shall be the sum of—

(1) The cost of materials of, and of fabrication, manipulation, or other process employed in manufacturing or producing such or similar merchandise, at a time preceding the date of exportation of the particular merchandise under consideration which would ordinarily permit the manufacture or production of the particular merchandise under consideration in the usual course of business;

(2) The usual general expenses (not less than 10 per centum of such cost) in the case of such or similar merchandise;

(3) The cost of all containers and coverings of whatever nature, and all other costs, charges and expenses incident to placing the particular merchandise under consideration in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States; and

(4) An addition for profit (not less than 8 per centum of the sum of the amounts found under paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subdivision) equal to the profit which ordinarily is added, in the case of merchandise of the same general character as the particular merchandise under consideration, by manufacturers or producers in the country of manufacture or production who are engaged in the production or manufacture of merchandise of the same class or kind.

The American selling price of any article manufactured or produced in the United States shall be the price, including the cost of all containers and coverings of whatever nature and all other costs, charges and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition packed ready for delivery, at which such article is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in the principal market of the United States, in the ordinary course of trade and in the usual wholesale quantities in such market, or the price that the manufacturer, producer or owner would have received or was willing to receive for such merchandise when sold in the ordinary course of trade and in the usual wholesale quantities at the time of exportation of the imported article.

MATERNITY AND INFANCY WELFARE ACT.

Sheppard-Towner law, passed at the first session of the 67th congress and approved Nov. 23. 1921.

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sums specified in section 2 of this act, to be paid to the several states for the purpose of co-operating with them in promoting the welfare and hygiene of maternity and infancy as hereinafter provided.

Section 2. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, there is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the treasury, not otherwise appropriated, for the current fiscal year $480,000, to be equally apportioned among the several states, and for each subsequent year, for the period of five years, $240,000, to be equally apportioned among the several states in the manner hereinafter provided: Provided, That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the use of the states, subject to the provisions of this act, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, an additional sum of $1,000,000, and annually thereafter, for the period of five years, an additional sum not to exceed $1,000,000: Provided, further, That the additional appropriations herein authorized shall be apportioned $5,000 to each state and the balance among the states in the proportion which their population bears to the total population of the states of the United States, according to the last preceding United States census: And provided further, That no payment out of the additional appropriation herein authorized shall be made in any year to any state until an equal sum has been appropriated for that year by the legislature of such state for the maintenance of the services and facilities provided for in this act.

So much of the amount apportioned to any state for any fiscal year as remains unpaid to such state at the close thereof shall be available for expenditures in that state until the close of the succeeding fiscal year.

Sec. 3. There is hereby created a board of maternity and infant hygiene, which shall consist of the chief of the children's bureau, the surgeon-general of the United States public health service, and the United States commissioner of education, and which is hereafter designated in this act as the board. The board shall elect its own chairman and perform the duties provided for in this act.

The children's bureau of the department of labor shall be charged with the administration of this act, except as herein otherwise provided, and the chief of the children's bureau shall be the executive officer. It shall be the duty of the children's bureau to make or cause to be made such studies, investigations and reports as will promote the efficient administration of this act.

Sec. 4. In order to secure the benefits of the appropriations authorized in section 2 of this act, any state shall, through the legislative authority thereof, accept the provisions of this act and designate or authorize the creation of a state agency with which the children's bureau shall have all necessary powers to co-operate as herein provided in the administration of the provisions of this act: Provided, That in any state having a child-welfare or child-hygiene division in its state agency of health, the said state agency of health shall administer the provisions of this act through such divisions. If the legislature of any state has not made provision for accepting the provisions of this act the governor of such state may in so far as he is authorized to do so by the laws of such state accept the provisions of this act and designate or create a state agency to co-operate with the children's bureau until six months after the adjournment of the first regular session of the legislature in such state following the passage of this act.

Sec. 5. So much, not to exceed 5 per centum, of the additional appropriations authorized for any fiscal year under section 2 of this act, as the children's bureau may estimate to be necessary for administering the provisions of this act, as herein provided, shall be deducted for that purpose, to be available until expended.

Sec. 6. Out of the amounts authorized under section 5 of this act the children's bureau is authorized to employ such assistants, clerks, and other persons in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, to be taken from the eligible lists of the civil service commission, and to purchase such supplies, material, equipment, office fixtures and apparatus, and to incur such travel and other expense as it may deem necessary for carrying out the purposes of this act.

Sec. 7. Within sixty days after any appropriation authorized by this act has been made, the children's bureau shall make the apportionment herein provided for and shall certify to the secretary of the treasury the amount estimated by the bureau to be necessary for administering the provisions of this act, and shall certify to the secretary of the treasury and to the treasurers of the various states the amount which has been apportioned to each state for the fiscal year for which such appropriation has been made.

Sec. 8. Any state desiring to receive the benefits of this act shall, by its agency described in section 4, submit to the children's bureau detailed plans for carrying out the provisions of this act within such state, which plans shall be subject to the approval of the board: Provided, That the plans of the states under this act shall provide that no official or agent or representative in carrying out the provisions of this act shall enter any home or take charge of any child over the objection of the parents, or either of them, or the person standing in loco parentis or having custody of such child. If these plans shall be in conformity with the provisions of this act and reasonably appropriate and adequate to carry out its purposes they shall be approved by the board and due notice of such approval shall be sent to the state agency by the chief of the children's bureau.

Sec. 9. No official, agent or representative of the children's bureau shall by virtue of this act have any right to enter any home over the objection of the owner thereof, or to take charge of any child over the objection of the parents, or either of them, or of the person standing in loco parentis or having custody of such child. Nothing in this act shall be construed as limiting the power of a parent or guardian or person standing in loco parentis to determine what treatment or correction shall be provided for a child or the agency or agencies to be employed for such purpose.

Sec. 10. Within sixty days after any appropriation authorized by this act has been made, and as often thereafter while such appropriation remains unexpended as changed conditions may warrant, the children's bureau shall ascertain the amounts that have been appropriated by the legislatures of the several states accepting the provisions of this act and shall certify to the secretary of the treasury the amount to which each state is entitled under the provisions of this act. Such certificate shall state (1) that the state has, through its legislative authority, accepted the provisions of this act and designated or authorized the creation of an agency to co-operate with the children's bureau, or that the state has otherwise accepted this act, as provided in section 4 hereof; (2) the fact that the proper agency of the state has submitted to the children's bureau detailed plans for carrying out the provisions of this act, and that such plans have been approved by the board; (3) the amount, if any, that has been appropriated by the legislature of the state for the maintenance of the services and facilities of this act, as provided in section 2 hereof; and (4) the amount to which the state is entitled under the provisions of this act. Such certificate, when in conformity with the provisions hereof, shall, until revoked as provided in section 12 hereof, be sufficient authority to the secretary of the treasury to make payment to the state in accordance therewith.

Sec. 11. Each state agency co-operating with the children's bureau under this act shall make such reports concerning its operations and expenditures as shall be prescribed or requested by the bureau. The children's bureau may, with the approval of the board, and shall, upon request of a majority of the board, withhold any further certificate provided for in section 10 hereof whenever it shall be determined as to any state that the agency thereof has not properly expended the money paid to it or the moneys herein required to be appropriated by such state for the purposes and in accordance with the provisions of this act. Such certificate may be withheld until such time or upon such conditions as the children's bureau, with the approval of the board, may determine; when so withheld the state agency may appeal to the president of the United States, who may either affirm or reverse the action of the bureau with such directions as he shall consider proper: Provided, That before any such certificate shall be withheld from any state the chairman of the board shall give notice in writing to the authority designated to represent the state, stating specifically wherein said state has failed to comply with the provisions of this act.

Sec. 12. No portion of any moneys apportioned under this act for the benefit of the states shall be applied, directly or indirectly, to the purchase, erection, preservation or repair of any building or buildings or equipment, or for the purchase or rental of any buildings or lands, nor shall any such moneys or moneys required to be appropriated by any state for the purposes and in accordance with the provisions of this act be used for the payment of any maternity or infancy pension, stipend or gratuity.

Sec. 13. The children's bureau shall perform the duties assigned to it by this act under the supervision of the secretary of labor, and he shall include in his annual report to congress a full account of the administration of this act and expenditures of the moneys herein authorized.

Sec. 14. This act shall be construed as intending to secure to the various states control of the administration of this act within their respective states, subject only to the provisions and purposes of this act. (Approved Nov. 23, 1921.)

THE MONROE AND DRAGO DOCTRINES.

The "Monroe doctrine" was enunciated by President Monroe in his message to congress Dec. 2, 1823. Referring to steps taken to arrange the respective rights of Russia, Great Britain and the United States on the northwest coast of this continent, the president went on to say:

"In the discussions to which this interest has given rise, and in the arrangements by which they may terminate, the occasion has been deemed proper for asserting, as a principle in which the rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintained, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European power. * * * We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere. But with the governments who have declared their independence and maintain it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and on just principles, acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

DRAGO DOCTRINE.

When in the winter of 1902-03 Germany, Britain and Italy blockaded the ports of Venezuela in attempt to make the latter country settle up its debts Dr. L. F. Drago, a noted jurist of Argentina, maintained that force cannot be used by one power to collect money owing to its citizens by another power. Prominence was given to the contention by the fact that it was officially upheld by Argentina and favored by other South American republics. The principle embodied has become generally known as the "Drago doctrine."

LODGE RESOLUTION.

In connection with the reported attempt of Japan to obtain land for the establishment of a naval base in Magdalena bay, on the western coast of Mexico, the senate of the United States adopted the following resolution Aug. 2, 1912:

"Resolved, That when any harbor or other place in the American continents is so situated that the occupation thereof for naval or military purposes might threaten the communications or the safety of the United States, the government of the United States could not see without grave concern the possession of such harbor or other place by any corporation or association which has such relation to another government, not American, as to give that government practical power of control for national purposes."

EARTHQUAKE IN CENTRAL WEST.

Several earth shocks were felt on the afternoon and evening of March 22, 1922, in eastern Missouri, southern Illinois, southern Indiana, northern Arkansas, western Kentucky and northern Tennessee. No serious damage was reported, though the tremors were severe enough to shake buildings, dislodge chimneys and rattle windows and dishes. The first and strongest quake was recorded on the seismograph at the St. Louis university at 4:30 p. m. It was followed by two slight tremors at 4:37 and 4:49 and another at 8:22 p. m. In December, 1811, a series of earth shocks occurred in the same region, the center then being at New Madrid, Mo.

FIRST UNITED STATES BUDGET.

President Harding on Dec. 5, 1921, sent the first federal budget to congress with the following message:

"I submit herewith the budget of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923. It will be noted that the estimated ordinary expenditures for 1922 show a reduction of $1,513,537,682.20, compared with the actual ordinary expenditures for 1921; and that the estimated ordinary expenditures for 1923 show a reduction of $447,704,239 under 1922, making the estimated ordinary expenditures under the budget for 1923 $1,961,241,921.20 less than the actual ordinary expenditures for 1921.

"Including transactions in the principal of the public debt and investments of trust funds, the total estimated expenditures for 1922 show a reduction under the total actual expenditures for 1921 of $1,570,118,323.30, and the total estimated expenditures for 1923 show a reduction of $462,167,639 under the total estimated expenditures for 1922, making a reduction in total expenditures in the estimated budget for 1923, as compared with the total actual expenditures for 1921, of $2,032,285,962.30.

"It will also be noted that the total estimated receipts for 1922 are in approximate balance with the total estimated expenditures, including reduction in the principal of the public debt, and that the total estimated receipts for 1923 are within approximately $150,000,000 of a balance with the total estimated expenditures of that year. Such a discrepancy is unavoidable, when authorizations of expenditure are being enacted during the process of budget closing, but ways are provided for relatively easy adjustment without added taxation.

"For the purpose of providing a portion of the funds necessary to balance the budget for 1923, in which the estimated expenditures exceed the estimated receipts by the sum of approximately $150,000,000, I recommend the following legislation in connection with the naval appropriation bill for 1923, which would result in the eventual automatic release of $100,000,000 now held in the naval supply account of the navy department:

" 'Hereafter, until the naval supply account shall have been reduced to a maximum sum of $150,000,000, which shall not thereafter be exceeded, one-half of all reimbursements otherwise due to the naval supply account, whether from current issues or from sales, shall be covered into the treasury as miscellaneous receipts, and only one-half shall be credited to the naval supply account.'

"With the continued pressure for economy in all departments and the passage of such legislation, the balancing of total receipts and total expenditures for the fiscal years 1922 and 1923 should be accomplished.

"I also transmit herewith the report of the director of the bureau of the budget on the budget of the United States and the operations of the bureau of the budget.

"WARREN G. HARDING."

PURPOSE OF THE BUDGET.

In his report accompanying the budget Charles G. Dawes, director of the bureau of the budget, said in part:

"In presenting the budget of the United States for the fiscal year 1923, covering the sum of $3,505,754,727, in compliance with the requirements of the budget act, the director of the budget has prepared it upon the basis of the amount of cash which must actually be withdrawn from the treasury during the fiscal year 1923.

"The method of appropriation of money heretofore followed has resulted in a condition of things under which it is almost impossible for either the executive, congress or the secretary of the treasury to have before them a true picture of the fiscal condition of the government at any particular time. Although congress has by stringent penal law prohibited the creation of deficiencies and clearly indicated that its annual appropriations were intended to limit the amount to be expended for such period, yet millions of dollars have been annually spent by the departments above the estimates submitted at the beginning of the fiscal year, and in recent years, due to the great sums appropriated in connection with the war, hundreds of millions of dollars have been so expended by the departments, a course made possible by deficiency and supplemental appropriations, the existence of revolving funds and unexpended balances. * * *

"The whole habit of making continuous appropriations to which the government has been committed in the past is only an encouragement to a lack of scrutiny of public work by the head of the department under which it is carried on, and an encouragement to shiftlessness and carelessness on the part of the subordinates more directly concerned in it. The more rigid the system under which continuous attention to the conduct of the business of government is made mandatory on the part of congress and the business administration the more efficient will be the conduct of government.

"Finally, this system of preparing the budget will confine the attention of the executive, of congress and of the public to the one great important question, to wit, the relation of the money actually to be spent by the government to the money actually to be received by the government in any given year, all its outstanding obligations and indefinite commitments, projects and enterprises considered. This will enable congress, with more intelligence, to determine at any time both the necessity for retrenchment and the ability of the government to engage in additional projects to be initiated by congress outside of the budgetary provisions. * * *

"The purpose of the budget act is to enable the president, as the responsible head of the administration of the government, to present to congress an annual business program which shall contain the necessary information concerning the financial requirements of all the departments and establishments of the government, and the resources from which this program of expenditures may be met, in such form as clearly to indicate the application of business principles to the government's administrative activities."

CO-ORDINATING AGENCIES.

Mr. Dawes in his report calls attention to about a dozen serious defects in the business methods of the corporation (government), arising mainly from the fact that the president of the corporation gave practically no attention to its ordinary routine business. He then specifies the following agencies, established by executive order, which are engaged in co-ordinating, in all matters of routine business, the activities of the separate departments and establishments:

1. The federal purchasing board.
2. The federal liquidation board.
3. The organization of corps area co-ordinators for the entire country.
4. Surveyor-general of real estate.
5. Federal motor transport agent.
6. The federal traffic board.
7. The federal board of hospitalization.
8. The federal specifications board.
9. The general supply committee.

MME. CURIE IN FRENCH ACADEMY OF MEDICINE.

Mme. Marie Curie, scientist and specialist in radiology, was elected a member of the French Academy of Medicine Feb. 7, 1922. It was the first time any woman had been elected a full member of that or any of the other leading French academies of the present day. Mme. Curie, whose maiden name was Marie Sklodowska, was born in Warsaw Nov. 7, 1867. She was educated in the Warsaw lyceum and in the scientific department of the Sorbonne in Paris, France. In Paris she met and was married to Pierre Curie, a French scientist, in collaboration with whom she discovered and made known the properties of radium. Her publications include "Researches Into the Magnetic Properties of Tempered Steel" and "Researches Into Radioactive Substances." Mme. Curie visited the United States in the spring of 1920 and was honored with degrees by several universities. She was also presented at the white house in Washington with a gram of radium valued at $100,000, purchased for her by American women.

GOVERNMENT AID TO MERCHANT MARINE.
PRESIDENT HARDING'S SPEECH BEFORE CONGRESS.

On Feb. 28, 1922, President Harding appeared before a joint session of congress and delivered the following address on the need of government aid to the American merchant marine:

Mr. Speaker, Vice-President and Members of Congress: When addressing the congress last December I reported to you the failure of the executive to carry out the intent of certain features of the merchant marine act of 1920, notably the provision for the notice of cancellation of all commercial treaties which hindered our grant of discriminating duties on imports brought to our shores in American ships. There was no doubt about the high purpose of congress to apply this proven practice to the upbuilding of our merchant marine. It had proven most effective in the earlier days of American shipping; it had, at various times, demonstrated its effectiveness in the upbuilding of commercial shipping for other nations.

The success of the earlier practice for this republic came at a time when we had few treaties, when our commerce was little developed. Its supersedure by reciprocity in shipping regulations and the adoption of other methods of upbuilding merchant marines, through various forms of government aid and the century of negotiation of commercial treaties, all combined to develop a situation which should lead to endless embarrassment if we denounced our treaties. We should not only be quite alone in supporting a policy long since superseded through the growing intimacy of international relationships, but we should invite the disturbance of those cordial commercial relations which are the first requisite to the expansion of our commerce abroad.

Contemplating the readiness of congress to grant a decreased duty on imports brought to our shores in American bottoms and facing the embarrassments incident to readjustment of all treaty arrangements, it seemed desirable to find a way of applying suitable aid to our shipping which the congress clearly intended and at the same time avoid the embarrassment of our trade relationships abroad.

The recommendation of to-day is based wholly on this commendable intent of congress. The proposed aid of the government to its merchant marine is to have its chief source in the duties collected on imports. Instead of applying the discriminating duty to the specific cargo and thus encouraging only the inbound shipment, I propose that we shall collect all import duties, without discrimination as between American and foreign bottoms, and apply the heretofore proposed reduction to create a fund for the government's aid to our merchant marine. By such a program we shall encourage not alone the carrying of inbound cargoes subject to our tariffs, but we shall strengthen American ships in the carrying of that greater inbound tonnage on which no duties are levied, and, more important than these, we shall equip our merchant marine to serve our outbound commerce, which is the measure of our eminence in foreign trade.

It is interesting to note, in connection with the heretofore proposed plan of discriminating tariffs on imports carried to our shores in American bottoms, that the total value of all dutiable imports for 1920, in all vessels, was $1,985,865,000, while the cargoes admitted free of duty, on which no discrimination was possible, were valued at $3,115,958,000. The actual tonnage comparison is even more significant from the viewpoint of cargo carrying because the dutiable cargoes measured, in round numbers, 10,000,000 tons and the nondutiable cargoes were 25,000,000 tons. The larger employment, by two and a half times, was in nondutiable shipments.

Continued trade must be reciprocal. We cannot long maintain sales where we do not buy. In the promotion of these exchanges we should have as much concern for the promotion of sales as for the facilitation of our purchases. There is not a record in all history of long-maintained eminence in export trade except as the exporting nations developed their own carrying capacity.

No story of national development is more fascinating or so full of romance as that of developing capacity for the exchanges of commerce. Expanding civilization may be traced over the avenues of exchanging cargoes. No matter how materialistic it may sound, nations have developed for themselves and have influenced the world almost precisely as they have promoted their commerce. We need not refer to the armed conflicts which have been incident thereto. When commerce has been destroyed fading glories have attended.

It will avail nothing to attempt even the briefest resume of our own efforts to re-establish that American importance in commerce carrying on the high seas which was recorded in the earlier days of the republic. The aspiration is nationwide. The conflict between two schools of political thought heretofore has defeated all efforts to employ the governmental aid which other nations found advantageous while we held aloof and the terms "subsidy" and "subvention" were made more or less hateful to the American public. But the nationwide desire to restore our merchant marine has outlived all defeats and every costly failure.

Eight years ago the aspiration found expression in a movement to have the government sponsor an enterprise in which individual genius seemingly had failed. It would be difficult correctly to appraise the policy, because the world war put an end to all normal activities. Before we were involved our shipyards were suddenly turned to feverish and costly activities by the calls of the allied powers for shipping, without which enterprise they could not hope to survive. American energies were applied to construction for others as we had never dreamed of doing for ourselves.

When we were later engaged we trebled and quadrupled the output for our account. Allied resources were called upon to build to meet the destruction by submarine warfare, and ships were so essential that material for them was given priority over arms and munitions. There was the call for ships and ships and yet more ships and we enlarged old yards and established new ones without counting the cost. We builded madly, extravagantly, impractically, and yet miraculously, but we met a pressing need and performed a great service.

A people indifferent to the vital necessity of a merchant marine to the national defense ungrudgingly expended at five times the cost of normal construction and appropriated billions where millions had been denied before. We acquired vast tonnage. Some of it, much of it, is suited to the peace service of expanded commerce. Some of it, much of it, may be charged to the errors and extravagances of war-time anxiety and haste. The war program and that completion of contracts which followed because such a course seemed best to those then charged with responsibility gave us something more than 12,000,000 gross tonnage, not counting the folly of the wood construction at a total outlay of approximately $3,500,000,000.

We thus are possessed of the vehicles of a great merchant marine. Not all of it was practical for use in the transoceanic trades; little of it was built for the speed which gives the coveted class to outstanding service. But here was vast tonnage for cargo service; and the government, in the exceptional call of commerce which immediately followed the war, sought the establishment of shipping lines in every direction calculated to enhance our foreign trade and further cement our friendly relations.

The movement lacked in most cases that inherent essential to success which is found in individual initiative. It was rather a government experiment where lines were established in high hope and little assurance because the public treasury was to bear the burden. There was the mere suggestion of private enterprise, inasmuch as allocations and charters were made under which private management was to share in profits and private interests were paid to make the experiment, though the government was to bear all the losses. I forbear the detailed recital. The misadventure was so unfortunate that when the present administration came into responsibility the losses were approximately $16,000,000 a month and to the cost of failure was added the humiliation of ships libeled in foreign ports.

In spite of all the later losses in operation, however, it is quite beyond question that our abundance of American tonnage was mainly responsible for our ability to share in the good fortunes of world trade during the two years immediately following the war. In all probability the losses we have sustained in our shipping activities were fully compensated to the American people in the saving of ocean freights in that period.

To-day we are possessed of vast tonnage, a large and very costly experience and the conviction of failure. It is fair to say that a mistaken policy was made more difficult by the unparalleled slump in shipping which came late in 1920 and prevailed throughout the year so recently closed. It was the inevitable reflex of the readjustments which follow a great war and there were heavy losses in operations which had to be met by long-established and heretofore successful shipping lines, and ships built at top war costs took the slump in prices below the normal levels of peace.

But we have our ships, the second largest tonnage in the world, and we have the aspiration, aye, let me say, the determination, to establish a merchant marine commensurate with our commercial importance.

Our problem is to turn the ships and our experience and aspirations into the effective development of an ocean-going shipping service, without which there can be no assurance of maintained commercial eminence, without which any future conflict at arms will send us building again, wildly and extravagantly, when the proper concern for this necessary agency of commerce in peace will be our guaranty of defense in case that peace is disturbed.

Out of the story of the making of great merchant marines and out of our own experience we ought to find the practical solution. Happily, we are less provincial than we once were, happily we have come to know how inseparable are our varied interests. Nobody pretends any longer that shipping is a matter of concern only to the ports involved. Commerce on the seas is quite as vital to the great interior as it is to our coast territory, east, south or west. Shipping is no more a sectional interest than is agriculture or manufacturing. No one of them can be prospered alone.

We have had a new manifestation of this broadened vision in the enthusiasm of the great middle west for the proposed great lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, by which it is intended to connect the great lakes ports with the marts of the world. There is far-seeing vision in the proposal and this great and commendable enterprise, deserving your favorable consideration, is inseparable from a great merchant marine.

What, then, is our problem? I bring to you the suggestions which have resulted from a comprehensive study, which are recommended to me by every member of the United States shipping board. It is a program of direct and indirect aid to shipping to be conducted by private enterprise. It is proposed to apply generally the benefits which it was designed to derive from discriminating duties to all ships engaged in foreign commerce, with such limitation of remuneration as will challenge every charge of promoting special interests at public cost.

In lieu of discriminating duties on imports brought to us in American bottoms it is proposed to take 10 per cent of all duties collected on imports brought to us in American or foreign bottoms and create therefrom a merchant marine fund. To this fund shall be added the tonnage charges, taxes and fees imposed on vessels entering the ports of continental United States, also such sums as are payable to American vessels by the post-office department for the transportation by water of foreign mails, parcel posts excepted.

Out of this fund shall be paid the direct aid in the development and maintenance of an American merchant marine. The compensation shall be based on one-half of 1 cent for each gross ton of any vessel, regardless of speed, for each 100 miles traveled. When the speed is 13 knots or over, but less than 14 knots, two-tenths of a cent on each gross ton shall be added; for 14 knots three-tenths of a cent; for 15 knots four-tenths of a cent; for 16 knots, five-tenths; for 17 knots, seven-tenths; for 18 knots, nine-tenths; for 19 knots, eleven-tenths; for 20 knots, thirteen-tenths shall be added to the basic rate. For 23 knots the maximum is reached at 2.6 cents for each gross ton per 100 miles traveled.

I will not attempt the details of requirements or limitations, save to say that all vessels thus remunerated shall carry the United States mails, except parcel post, free of cost, and that all such remuneration must end whenever the owner of any vessel or vessels shall have derived a net operating income in excess of 10 per cent per annum upon his actual investment, and thereafter the owner shall pay 50 per cent of such excess earnings to the merchant marine fund, until the full amount of subsidy previously received is returned to its source. In other words, it is proposed to encourage the shipping in foreign trade until the enterprise may earn 10 per cent on actual investment, whereupon direct aid extended is to cease and the amount advanced is to be returned out of a division with the government of profits in excess of that 10 per cent. The provision makes impossible the enrichment of any special interest at public expense, puts an end to the government assumption of all losses, and leaves to private enterprise the prospective profits of successful management.

The cost of such a program probably will reach $15,000,000 the first year, estimated on the largest possibilities of the present fleet. With larger reimbursement to high speed vessels and the enlargement of the merchant marine to a capacity comparable with our commerce, the total outlay may reach the limits of $30,000,000, but it is confidently believed that the scale may in due time thereafter be turned, until the larger reimbursements are restored to the treasury. Even if we accept the extreme possibility—that we shall expend the maximum and no return will ever be made, which is to confess our inability to establish an American merchant marine—the expenditure would be vastly preferable to the present unfortunate situation, with our dependence on our competitors for the delivery of our products. Moreover, the cost for the entire year would be little more than the deficit heretofore encountered in two months during the experiment of the government sponsoring the lines and guaranteeing the cost of their operation.

The proposed plan will supersede all postal subventions, postal compensations and extra compensations excepting parcel post freights, all of which combined are fast growing to approximately five millions annually. It will ultimately take the government out of a business which has been, and is now, excessively costly and wasteful and involving a loss in excess of the highest subsidy proposed. It will bring to shipping again that individual initiative which is the very soul of successful enterprise. It should enable the government to liquidate its vast fleet to the highest possible advantage.

The making of a successful American merchant marine, which must face the stiffest possible competition by the fleets of the maritime nations, requires something more than the direct aid to which I have alluded. The direct aid proposed, even though it ultimately runs to $30,000,000 annually, is insufficient alone to offset the advantages of competing fleets. There are more than wage costs and working conditions and the higher costs of rationing, which no considerable American sentiment will consent to have lowered to competing standards.

The men who sail the seas under our flag must be permitted to stand erect in the fullness of American opportunity. There is the higher cost of construction, the larger investment, the higher cost of insurance outlay, even though the rate is the same. There are higher interest charges. Our problems in shipping are very much the same as are those of our industries ashore, and we should be as zealous in promoting the one as we are in protecting the other. We may and must aid indirectly as well as directly.

We need a favoring spirit, an awakened American pride and an avowed American determination that we shall become, in the main, the carriers of our own commerce, in spite of all competition and all discouragements. With direct and indirect aid I bring to you a definite program. Those who oppose it ought, in all fairness, to propose an acceptable alternative. There can be no dispute about the end at which we are aiming.

Of the indirect aids there are many, practically all without draft upon the public treasury, and yet all highly helpful in promoting American shipping.

It is a simple thing—seemingly it ought not require the action of congress—but American officials traveling on government missions at government expense ought to travel on American ships, assuming that they afford suitable accommodations. If they do not afford the requisite accommodation on the main routes of world travel, the argument that we should upbuild is strongly emphasized.

I think we should discontinue so far as practical the transport services in the army and navy and make our merchant and passenger ships the agents of service in peace as well as war.

We should make insurance available at no greater cost than is afforded the ships under competing flags, and we can and will make effective the spirit of section 28 of the Jones act of 1920, providing for preferential rail and steamship rates on through shipments on American vessels. American railways must be brought into co-operation with American steamship lines. It is not in accord with either security or sound business practice to have our railways furthering the interests of foreign shipping lines, when the concord of American activities makes for common American good fortune.

Contemplating the competition to be met, there ought to be an amendment to the interstate commerce act which will permit railway systems to own and operate steamship lines engaged in other than coastwise trade. There is a measureless advantage in the longer shipments where rail and water transportation are co-ordinated, not alone in the service but in the solicitation of cargoes, which ever attends an expanding commerce.

We may further extend our long-established protection to our coastwise trade, which is quite in harmony with the policy of most maritime powers. There is authority now to include the Philippines in our coastwise trade, and we need only the establishment of proper facilities to justify the inclusion of our commerce with the islands in our coastwise provisions. The freedom of our continental markets is well worth such a favoring policy to American ships, whenever the facilities are suited to meet all requirements.

Other indirect aids will be found in the requirement that immigration shall join wherever it is found to be practical in aiding the merchant marine of our flag under which citizenship is to be sought and in the establishment of the merchant marine naval reserve. The remission of a proportion of income taxes is wholly compatible when the shipping enterprise is of direct government concern, provided that such remission is applied to the cost of new ship construction.

Congress has already provided for a loan fund to encourage construction. It might well be made applicable to some special requirements in reconditioning.

It is also worth our consideration that, in view of suspended naval construction, the continued building of merchant ships is the one guaranty of a maintained shipbuilding industry, without which no nation may hope to hold a high place in the world of commerce or be assured of adequate defense.

A very effective indirect aid, a substitute for a discriminating duty which shall inure to the benefit of the American shipper, will be found in the proposed deduction on incomes, amounting to 5 per cent of the freight paid on cargoes carried in American bottoms. The benefits can have no geographical restrictions and it offers its advantages to American exporters as well as those who engage in import trade.

Our existing ships should be sold at prices prevailing in the world market. I am not unmindful of the hesitancy to sacrifice the values to current price levels. We constructed at the top cost of war when necessity impelled, when the building resources of many nations were drawn upon to the limit to meet a great emergency. If there had come no depression, a return to approximate normal cost would have been inevitable. But the great slump in shipping has sent tonnage prices to the other extreme, not for America alone, but throughout the world.

If we held our ships to await the recovery we should only make more difficult our response to beckoning opportunity. One of the outstanding barriers to general readjustment is the tendency to await more favorable price conditions. In the widest view the nation will ultimately profit by selling now. We may end our losses in an enterprise for which we are not equipped and which no other government has successfully undertaken, and the low prices at which we must sell today will make a lower actual investment with which we deal in promoting permanent service.

If I were not deeply concerned with the upbuilding of our merchant marine I should nevertheless strongly urge congress to facilitate the disposal of the vast tonnage acquired or constructed in the great war emergency. The experiment we have made has been very costly. Much has been learned, to be sure, but the outstanding lesson is that the government cannot profitably manage our merchant shipping. The most fortunate changes in the personnel of management would still leave us struggling with a policy fundamentally wrong and practically impossible.

Having failed at such enormous cost, I bring you the proposal which contemplates the return to individual initiative and private enterprise, aided to a conservative success, wherein we are safeguarded against the promotion of private greed and do not discourage the hope of profitable investment, which underlies all successful endeavor.

We have voiced our concern for the good fortunes of agriculture and it is right that we should. We have long proclaimed our interest in manufacturing, which is thoroughly sound and helped to make us what we are. In the evolution of railway transportation we have revealed the vital relationship of our rail transportation to both agriculture and commerce. We have been expending for many years large sums for deepened channels and better harbors and improved inland waterways and much of it has found abundant return in enlarged commerce. But we have ignored our merchant marine. The world war revealed our weakness, our unpreparedness for defense in war, our unreadiness for self-reliance in peace.

It would seem as though transpiring events were combining to admonish us not to fail now to reassert ourselves. In the romantic days of wooden hulls and whitened sails and the sturdiest men of the sea we outsailed the world and carried our own cargoes, revealed our flag to the marts of the world.

Up to the world war we were a debtor nation. Our obligations were held largely by the maritime powers. Apart from the advantages in carrying our commerce they sought our shipments for the balances due to them. There is a different condition now. They are concerned with shipments to us, but not so interested in our shipments to them. It is our high purpose to continue our exchanges, both buying and selling, but we shall be surer of our selling, notably our foodstuffs, if we maintain facilities for their transportation.

Contemporaneous with the awakening we have the proposal to carry our ocean-going facilities to the great "unsalted seas," which shall place the farms of the upper Mississippi valley on a market way to the marts of the old world. We should fail to adjust our vision to the possibilities if we halted in making for American eminence on the ocean highways now awaiting our return.

We have recently joined the great naval powers in a program which not only puts an end to costly competition in naval armament and reduces the naval forces of the world but adds to the confidence in maintained peace. The relativity of strength among the powers would be wholly one of disappointing theory if ours is to be a merchant marine inadequate for the future. I do not care to stress it as a means of defense. The war and our enforced outlay have already stressed that point.

The merchant marine is universally recognized as the second line of naval defense. It is indispensable in the time of great national emergency. It is commendable to upbuild and maintain because it is the highest agency of peace and amity and bears no threat and incites no suspicion. And yet it is a supreme assurance, without which we should be unmindful of our safety and unheeding of our need to continued growth and maintained influence.

I am thinking of the merchant marine of peace. Commerce is inseparable from progress and attainment. Commerce and its handmaidens have wrought the greater intimacy among nations, which calls for understandings and guaranties of peace. However we work it out, whatever our adjustments are to promote international trade, it is inevitable that the hundred millions here, outstanding in genius and unrivaled in industry and incalculable in their resources, must be conspicuous in the world's exchanges. We cannot hope to compete unless we carry and our concord and our influence are sure to be measured by that unfailing standard which is found in a nation's merchant marine.

THEATER DISASTER IN WASHINGTON.

Nearly 100 persons were killed and more than that number were injured when the roof of the Knickerbocker moving picture theater in Washington, D. C., collapsed under a heavy weight of snow just before 9 o'clock on the evening of Saturday, Jan. 28, 1922. A cement gallery was carried away by the falling roof and part of a brick wall was torn down, burying scores under the debris. It was at first reported that more than 100 persons had lost their lives, but it developed later that the number killed outright was ninety-five. Two of the severely injured died, bringing the death list up to ninety-seven. One of those who succumbed to his injuries a short time afterward was Edward H. Shaughnessy, second assistant postmaster-general. Louis William Strayer, Washington correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch and a former president of the Gridiron club in Washington, was one of those instantly killed. Another was Chauncey C. Brainerd, correspondent of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. Mrs. Brainerd was also killed. Andrew Jackson Barchfeld, a former congressman from Pennsylvania, and Miss Helen Barchfeld, his daughter, both lost their lives. The list of victims included others equally well known in Washington, as the theater was one of the finest of its kind in the city and was located in a fine residence section, on the crest of a hill at Columbia road and 18th street, N. W. It was reported to have cost $1,000,000 to build. It had a seating capacity of 1,700.

"Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" was the play being thrown on the screen and the second show of the evening had just begun when the roof crashed.

Snow had been falling for twenty-eight hours and had partly tied up traffic throughout the city. It was the worst storm of its kind experienced in Washington in more than twenty years.

PRESIDENT HARDING'S MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

Delivered in person Dec. 6, 1921.

Mr. Speaker and Members of the Congress:

It is a very gratifying privilege to come to the congress with the republic at peace with all the nations of the world. More, it is equally gratifying to report that our country is not only free from every impending menace of war but there are growing assurances of the permanency of the peace which we so deeply cherish.

For approximately ten years we have dwelt amid menaces of war or as participants in war's actualities, and the inevitable aftermath, with its disordered conditions, has added to the difficulties of government which adequately cannot be appraised except by those who are in immediate contact and know the responsibilities.

Our tasks would be less difficult if we had only ourselves to consider, but so much of the world was involved, the disordered conditions are so well-nigh universal, even among nations not engaged in actual warfare, that no permanent readjustment can be effected without consideration of our inescapable relationship to world affairs in finance and trade.

Indeed, we should be unworthy of our best traditions if we were unmindful of social, moral and political conditions which are not of direct concern to us, but which do appeal to the human sympathies and the very becoming interest of a people blessed with our national good fortune.

It is not my purpose to bring to you a program of world restoration. In the main such a program must be worked out by the nations most directly concerned. They must themselves turn to the heroic remedies for the menacing conditions under which they are struggling; then we can help, and we mean to help. We shall do so unselfishly because there is compensation in the consciousness of assisting; selfishly, because the commerce and international exchanges in trade which marked our high tide of fortunate advancement are possible only when the nations of all continents are restored to stable order and normal relationship.

In the main the contribution of this republic to restored normalcy in the world must come through the initiative of the executive branch of the government, but the best of intentions and most carefully considered purposes would fail utterly if the sanction and the co-operation of congress were not cheerfully accorded.

I am very sure we shall have no conflict of opinion about constitutional duties or authority. During the anxieties of war, when necessity seemed compelling, there were excessive grants of authority and an extraordinary concentration of powers in the chief executive. The repeal of wartime legislation and the automatic expirations which attended the peace proclamations have put an end to these emergency excesses, but I have the wish to go further than that. I want to join you in restoring, in the most cordial way, the spirit of co-ordination and co-operation and that mutuality of confidence and respect which is necessary in representative popular government.

Encroachment upon the functions of congress or attempted dictation of its policy are not to be thought of, much less attempted, but there is an insistent call for harmony of purpose and concord of action to speed the solution of the difficult problems confronting both the legislative and executive branches of the government.

GOVERNMENT THROUGH PARTIES.

It is worth while to make allusion here to the character of our government, mindful as one must be that an address to you is no less a message to all our people, for whom you speak most intimately. Ours is a popular government through political parties. We divide along political lines, and I would ever have it so.

I do not mean that partisan preferences should hinder any public servant in the performance of a conscientious and patriotic official duty. We saw partisan lines utterly obliterated when war imperiled, and our faith in the republic was riveted anew. We ought not find these partisan lines obstructing the expeditious solution of the urgent problems of peace.

Granting that we are fundamentally a representative popular government with political parties the governing agencies, I believe the political party in power should assume responsibility, determine upon policies in the conference which supplements conventions and election campaigns and then strive for achievement through adherence to the accepted policy.

There is vastly greater security, immensely more of the national viewpoint, much larger and prompter accomplishment, where our divisions are along party lines, in the broad and loftier sense, than to divide geographically or according to pursuits or personal following.

For a century and a third parties have been charged with responsibility and held to strict accounting. When they fail they are relieved of authority; and the system has brought us to a national eminence no less than a world example.

Necessarily legislation is a matter of compromise. The full ideal is seldom attained. In that meeting of minds necessary to insure results there must and will be accommodations and compromises, but in the estimate of convictions and sincere purposes the supreme responsibility to national interest must not be ignored. The shield to the high-minded public servant who adheres to party policy is manifest, but the higher purpose is the good of the republic as a whole.

It would be ungracious to withhold acknowledgment of the really large volume and excellent quality of work accomplished by the extraordinary session of congress which so recently adjourned. I am not unmindful of the very difficult tasks with which you were called to deal, and no one can ignore the insistent conditions which during recent years have called for the continued and almost exclusive attention of your memberships to public work.

It would suggest insincerity if I expressed complete accord with every expression recorded in your roll calls, but we are all agreed about the difficulties and the inevitable divergence of opinion in seeking the reduction, amelioration and readjustment of the burdens of taxation.

Later on, when other problems are solved, I shall make some recommendations about renewed consideration of our tax program, but for the immediate time before us we must be content with the billion-dollar reduction in the tax draft upon the people and diminished irritations, banished uncertainty and improved methods of collection.

By your sustainment of the rigid economies already inaugurated, with hoped for extension of these economies and added efficiencies in administration, I believe further reductions may be enacted and hindering burdens abolished.

THE FIRST BUDGET.

In these urgent economies we shall be immensely assisted by the budget system, for which you made provision in the extraordinary session. The first budget is before you. Its preparation is a signal achievement, and the perfection of the system, a thing impossible in the few months available for its initial trial, will mark its enactment as the beginning of the greatest reformation in governmental practices since the beginning of the republic.

There is pending a grant of authority to the authoritative branch of the government for the funding and settlement of our vast foreign loans growing out of our grant of war credits. With the hands of the executive branch held impotent to deal with these debts, we are hindering urgent readjustment among our debtors and accomplishing nothing for ourselves.

I think it is fair for the congress to assume that the executive branch of the government would adopt no major policy in dealing with these matters which would conflict with the purpose of congress in authorizing the loans, certainly not without asking congressional approval, but there are minor problems incident to prudent loan transactions and the safeguarding of our interests which cannot even be attempted without this authorization. It will be helpful to ourselves and it will improve conditions among our debtors if funding and the settlement of defaulted interest may be negotiated.

SHIPPING PLANS.

The previous congress, deeply concerned in behalf of our merchant marine, in 1920 enacted the existing shipping law, designed for the upbuilding of the American merchant marine. Among other things provided to encourage our shipping on the world's seas the executive was directed to give notice of the termination of all existing commercial treaties in order to admit of reduced duties on imports carried in American bottoms.

During the life of the act no executive has complied with this order of the congress. When the present administration came into responsibility it began an early inquiry into the failure to execute the expressed purpose of the Jones act. Only one conclusion has been possible.

Frankly, members of house and senate, eager as I am to join you in the making of an American merchant marine commensurate with our commerce, the denouncement of our commercial treaties would involve us in a chaos of trade relationships and add indescribably to the confusion of the already disordered commercial world.

Our power to do so is not disputed, but power and ships, without comity of relationship, will not give us the expanded trade which is inseparably linked with a great merchant marine. Moreover, the applied reduction of duty, for which the treaty denouncements were necessary, encouraged only the carrying of dutiable imports to our shores, while the tonnage which unfurls the flag on the seas is both free and dutiable, and the cargoes which make a nation eminent in trade are outgoing, rather than incoming.

It is not my thought to lay the problem in detail before you to-day. It is desired only to say to you that the executive branch of the government, uninfluenced by the protest of any nation, for none has been made, is well convinced that your proposal, highly intended and heartily supported here, is so fraught with difficulties and so marked by tendencies to discourage trade expansion that I invite your tolerance of noncompliance for a very few weeks until a plan may be presented which contemplates no greater draft upon the public treasury, and which, though yet too crude to offer to-day, gives such promise of expanding our merchant marine that it will argue its own approval.

It is enough to say to-day that we are so possessed of ships and the American intention to establish a merchant marine is so unalterable that a plan of reimbursement, at no other cost than is contemplated in the existing act, will appeal to the pride and encourage the hope of all the American people.

ACTION ON TARIFF.

There is before you the completion of the enactment of what has been termed a "permanent" tariff law, the word "permanent" being used to distinguish it from the emergency act, which the congress expedited early in the extraordinary session and which is the law to-day. I cannot too strongly urge an early completion of this necessary legislation. It is needed to stabilize our industry at home; it is essential to make more definite our trade relations abroad. More, it is vital to the preservation of many of our own industries, which contribute so notably to the very life blood of our nation.

There is now, and there always will be, a storm of conflicting opinion about any tariff revision. We cannot go far wrong when we base our tariffs on the policy of preserving the productive activities which enhance employment and add to our national prosperity.

Again comes the reminder that we must not be unmindful of world conditions, that peoples are struggling for industrial rehabilitation and that we cannot dwell in industrial and commercial exclusion and at the same time do the just thing in aiding world rehabilitation and readjustment.

We do not seek a selfish aloofness and we could not profit by it were it possible. We recognize the necessity of buying wherever we sell, and the permanency of trade lies in its acceptable exchanges. In our pursuit of markets we must give as well as receive. We cannot sell to others who do not produce, nor can we buy unless we produce at home.

Sensible of every obligation of humanity, commerce and finance, linked as they are in the present world condition, it is not to be argued that we need destroy ourselves to be helpful to others. With all my heart I wish restoration to the peoples blighted by the awful world war, but the process of restoration does not lie in our acceptance of like conditions. It were better to remain on firm ground, strive for ample employment and high standards of wages at home and point the way to balanced budgets, rigid economy and resolute, efficient work as the necessary remedies to cure disaster.

Everything relating to trade among ourselves and among nations has been expanded, excessive, inflated, abnormal, and there is a madness in finance which no American policy alone can cure. We are a creditor nation, not by normal processes, but made so by war. It is not an unworthy selfishness to seek to save ourselves when the processes of that salvation are not only not denied to others but commended to them. We seek to undermine for others no industry by which they subsist; we are obligated to permit the undermining of none of our own which make for employment and maintained activities.

Every contemplation—it little matters in which direction one turns—magnifies the difficulty of tariff legislation, but the necessity of the revision is magnified with it. Doubtless we are justified in seeking a more flexible policy than we have provided heretofore. I hope a way will be found to make for flexibility and elasticity, so that rates may be adjusted to meet unusual and changing conditions which cannot be accurately anticipated.

There are problems incident to unfair practices and to exchanges which madness in money have made almost unsolvable. I know of no manner in which to effect this flexibility other than the extension of the powers of tariff commissions, so that it can adapt itself to a scientific and wholly just administration of the law.

I am not unmindful of the constitutional difficulties. These can be met by giving authority to the chief executive, who could proclaim additional duties to meet conditions, which the congress may designate.

At this point I must disavow any desire to enlarge the executive's powers or add to the responsibilities of the office. These are already too large. If there were any other plan I would prefer it.

The grant of authority to proclaim would necessarily bring the tariff commission into new and enlarged activities, because no executive could discharge such a duty except upon the information acquired and recommendations by this commission. But the plan is feasible, and the proper functioning of the board would give us a better administration of a defined policy than ever can be made possible by tariff duties prescribed without flexibility.

There is a manifest difference of opinion about the American valuation. Many nations have adopted delivery valuation as the basis for collecting duties; that is, they take the cost of the imports delivered at the port of entry as the basis for levying duty. It is no radical departure, in view of the varying conditions and the disordered state of money values, to provide for American valuation, but there cannot be ignored the danger of such a valuation brought to the level of our own production costs, making our tariffs prohibitive.

It might do so in many instances where imports ought to be encouraged, I believe. Congress ought well to consider the desirability of the only promising alternative—namely, a provision authorizing proclaimed American valuation, under prescribed conditions, on any given list of articles imported.

In this proposed flexibility, authorizing increases to meet conditions so likely to change, there should also be provision for decreases. A rate may be just to-day and entirely out of proportion six months from to-day. If our tariffs are to be made equitable, and not necessarily burden our imports and hinder our trade abroad, frequent adjustment will be necessary for years to come. Knowing the impossibility of modification by act of congress for any one of a score of lines without involving a long array of schedules, I think we shall go a long way toward stabilization if there is recognition of the tariff commission's fitness to recommend urgent changes by proclamation.

UNEMPLOYMENT.

I am sure about public opinion favoring the early determination of our tariff policy. There have been reassuring signs of a business revival from the deep slump which all the world has been experiencing. Our unemployment, which gave us deep concern only a few weeks ago, has grown encouragingly less, and new assurances and renewed confidence will attend the congressional declaration that American industry will be held secure.

Much has been said about the protective policy for ourselves making it impossible for our debtors to discharge their obligations to us. This is a contention not now pressing for decision. If we must choose between a people in idleness pressing for the payment of indebtedness or a people resuming the normal ways of employment and carrying the credit, let us choose the latter.

Sometimes we appraise largest the human ill most vivid in our minds. We have been giving, and are giving now, of our influence and appeals to minimize the likelihood of war and throw off the crushing burdens of armament. It is all very earnest, with a national soul impelling. But a people unemployed and gaunt with hunger face a situation quite as disheartening as war, and our greater obligation to-day is to do the government's part toward resuming productivity and promoting fortunate and remunerative employment.

NEEDS OF AGRICULTURE.

Something more than tariff protection is required by American agriculture. To the farm has come the earlier and the heavier burdens of readjustment. There is actual depression in our agricultural industry, while agricultural prosperity is absolutely essential to the general prosperity of the country.

Congress has sought very earnestly to provide relief. It has promptly given such temporary relief as has been possible, but the call is insistent for the permanent solution. It is inevitable that large crops lower the prices and short crops advance them. No legislation can cure that fundamental law. But there must be some economic solution for the excessive variation in returns for agricultural production.

It is rather shocking to be told, and to have the statement strongly supported, that 9,000,000 bales of cotton raised on American plantations in a given year actually will be worth more to the producers than 13,000,000 bales would have been. Equally shocking is the statement that 700,000,000 bushels of wheat raised by American farmers would bring them more money than 1,000,000,000 bushels. Yet these are not exaggerated statements. In a world where there are tens of millions who need food and clothing which they cannot get such a condition is sure to indict the social system which makes it possible.

CO-OPERATION SUGGESTED.

In the main the remedy lies in distribution and marketing. Every proper encouragement should be given to the co-operative marketing programs. These have proven very helpful to the co-operative communities in Europe. In Russia the co-operative community has become a recognized bulwark of law and order and saved individualism from engulfment in social paralysis. Ultimately they will be accredited with the salvation of the Russian state.

There is the appeal for this experiment. Why not try it? No one challenges the right of the farmer to a larger share of the consumers' pay for his product; no one can dispute that we cannot live without the farmer. He is justified in rebelling against the transportation cost. Given a fair return for his labor, he will have less occasion to appeal for financial aid; and, given assurance that his labor shall not be in vain, we reassure all the people of a production sufficient to meet our national requirement and guard against disaster.

The base of the pyramid of civilization, which rests upon the soil, is shrinking through the drift of population from farm to city. For a generation we have been expressing more or less concern about this tendency. Economists have warned and statesmen have deplored. We thought for a time that modern conveniences and the more intimate contact would halt the movement, but it has gone steadily on. Perhaps only grim necessity will correct it, but we ought to find a less drastic remedy.

The existing scheme of adjusting freight rates has been favoring the basing points, until industries are attracted to some centers and repelled from others. A great volume of uneconomic and wasteful transportation has attended and the cost increased accordingly. The grain milling and meat packing industries afford ample illustration and the attending concentration is readily apparent.

The menaces in concentration are not limited to the retarding influences on agriculture. Manifestly the conditions and terms of railway transportation ought not to be permitted to increase the undesirable tendency. We have a just pride in our great cities, but we shall find a greater pride in the nation which has a larger distribution of its population into the country, where comparatively self-sufficient smaller communities may blend agricultural and manufacturing interests in harmonious helpfulness and enhanced good fortune.

Such a movement contemplates no destruction of things wrought, of investments made or wealth involved. It only looks to a general policy of transportation, of distributed industry and of highway construction to encourage the spread of our population and restore the proper balance between city and country. The problem may well have your earnest attention.

It has been perhaps the proudest claim of our American civilization that in dealing with human relationships it has constantly moved toward such justice in distributing the product of human energy that it has improved continuously the economic state of the mass of people. Ours has been a highly productive social organization. On the way up from the elemental stages of society we have eliminated slavery and serfdom and are now far on the way to the elimination of poverty.

Through the eradication of illiteracy and the diffusion of education, mankind has reached a stage where we may fairly say that in the United States equality of opportunity has been attained, though all are not prepared to embrace it.

There is, indeed, a too great divergence between the economic conditions of the most and the least favored classes in the community. But even that divergence has now come to the point where we bracket the very poor and the very rich together as the least fortunate classes. Our efforts may well be directed to improving the status of both.

While this set of problems is commonly comprehended under the general phrase, "capital and labor," it is really vastly broader. It is a question of social and economic organization. Labor has become a large contributor, through its savings, to the stock of capital; while the people who own the largest individual aggregates of capital are themselves often hard and earnest laborers.

Very often it is extremely difficult to draw the line of demarcation between the two groups, to determine whether a particular individual is entitled to be set down as laborer or as capitalist. In a very large proportion of cases he is both, and, when he is both, he is the most useful citizen.

RIGHT TO ORGANIZE.

The right of labor to organize is just as fundamental and necessary as is the right of capital to organize. The right of labor to negotiate, to deal with and solve its particular problems in an organized way, through its chosen agents, is just as essential as is the right of capital to organize, to maintain corporations, to limit the liabilities of stockholders. Indeed, we have come to recognize that the limited liability of the citizen as a member of a labor organization closely parallels the limitation of liability of the citizen as a stockholder in a corporation for profit. Along this line of reasoning we shall make the greatest progress toward solution of our problem of capital and labor.

In the case of the corporation which enjoys the privilege of limited liability of stockholders, particularly when engaged in the public service, it is recognized that the outside public has a large concern which must be protected, and so we provide regulations, restrictions and in some cases detailed supervision.

Likewise in the case of labor organizations, we might well supply similar and equally well defined principles of regulation and supervision in order to conserve the public's interests as affected by their operations.

Just as it is not desirable that a corporation shall be allowed to impose undue exactions upon the public, so it is not desirable that a labor organization shall be permitted to exact unfair terms of employment or subject the public to actual distresses in order to enforce its terms.

Finally, just as we are earnestly seeking for procedures whereby to adjust and settle political differences between nations without resort to war, so we may well look about for means to settle the differences between organized capital and organized labor without resort to those forms of warfare which we recognize under the name of strikes, lockouts, boycotts and the like.

QUASI-JUDICIAL TRIBUNALS.

As we have great bodies of law carefully regulating the organization and operations of industrial and financial corporations, as we have treaties and compacts among nations which look to the settlement of differences without the necessity of conflict in arms, so we might well have plans of conference, of common counsel, of mediation, arbitration and judicial determination in controversies between labor and capital.

To accomplish this would involve the necessity to develop a thoroughgoing code of practice in dealing with such affairs. It might be well to frankly set forth the superior interest of the community as a whole to either the labor group or the capital group. With rights, privileges, immunities and modes of organization thus carefully defined, it should be possible to set up judicial or quasi-judicial tribunals for the consideration and determination of all disputes which menace the public welfare.

In an industrial society such as ours the strike, the lockout and the boycott are as much out of place and as disastrous in their results as is war or armed revolution in the domain of politics. The same disposition to reasonableness, to conciliation, to recognition of the other side's point of view, the same provision of fair and recognized tribunals and processes ought to make it possible to solve the one set of questions as easily as the other. I believe the solution is possible.

The consideration of such a policy would necessitate the exercise of care, of deliberation in the construction of a code and a charter of elemental rights, dealing with the relations of employer and employe. This foundation in the law dealing with the modern conditions of social and economic life would hasten the building of the temple of peace in industry which a rejoicing nation would acclaim.

LAND RECLAMATION.

After each war, until the last, the government has been able to give homes to its returned soldiers, and a large part of our settlement and development has attended this generous provision of land for the nation's defenders.

There is yet unreserved approximately 200,000,000 acres in the public domain, 20,000,000 acres of which are known to be susceptible of reclamation and made fit for homes by provision for irrigation.

The government has been assisting in the development of its remaining lands, until the estimated increase in land values in the irrigated sections is fully $500,000,000, and the crops of 1920 alone on these lands are estimated to exceed $100,000,000.

Under the law authorizing these expenditures for development, the advances are to be returned, and it would be good business for the government to provide for the reclamation of the remaining 20,000,000 acres, in addition to expediting the completion of projects long under way.

Under what is known as the coal and gas lease law, applicable also to deposits of phosphates and other minerals on the public domain, leases are now being made on the royalty basis and are producing large revenues to the government. Under this legislation, 10 per centum of all royalties is to be paid directly to the federal treasury, and of the remainder 50 per centum is to be used for reclamation of arid lands by irrigation, and 40 per centum is to be paid to the states in which the operations are located, to be used by them for school and road purposes.

These resources are so vast and the development is affording so reliable a basis of estimate that the interior department expresses the belief that ultimately the present law will add in royalties and payments to the treasuries of the federal government and the states containing these public lands a total of $12,000,000,000. This means, of course, an added wealth of many times that sum. These prospects seem to afford every justification of government advances in reclamation and irrigation.

Contemplating the inevitable and desirable increase of population, there is another phase of reclamation fully worthy of consideration. There are 79,000,000 acres of swamp and cut-over lands which may be reclaimed and made as valuable as any farm lands we possess. These acres are largely located in southern states, and the greater proportion is owned by the states or by private citizens. Congress has a report of the survey of this field for reclamation and the feasibility is established. I gladly commend federal aid, by way of advances where state and private participation is assured.

Homemaking is one of greater benefits which government can bestow. Measures are pending embodying this sound policy to which we may well adhere. It is easily possible to make available permanent homes which will provide, in turn, for prosperous American families without injurious competition with established activities or imposition on wealth already acquired.

AID FOR RUSSIA.

While we are thinking of promoting the fortunes of our own people I am sure there is room in the sympathetic thought of America for fellow human beings who are suffering and dying of starvation in Russia. A severe drought in the valley of the Volga has plunged 15,000,000 people into grievous famine. Our voluntary agencies are exerting themselves to the utmost to save the lives of children in this area, but it is now evident that unless relief is afforded the loss of life will extend into many millions. America cannot be deaf to such a call as that.

We do not recognize the government of Russia nor tolerate the propaganda which emanates therefrom, but we do not forget the traditions of Russian friendship. We may put aside our consideration of all international politics and fundamental differences in government. The big thing is the call of the suffering and the dying.

Unreservedly I recommend the appropriation necessary to supply the American relief administration with 10,000,000 bushels of corn and 1,000,000 bushels of seed grains, not alone to halt the wave of death through starvation, but to enable spring planting in areas where the seed grains have been exhausted temporarily to stem starvation.

The American relief administration is directed in Russia by former officers of our own armies and has fully demonstrated its ability to transport and distribute relief through American hands without hindrance or loss. The time has come to add the government support to the wonderful relief already wrought out of the generosity of the American private purse.

I am not unaware that we have suffering and privation at home. When it extends the capacity for the relief within the states concerned it will have federal consideration. It seems to me we should be indifferent to our own heart promptings and out of accord with the spirit which acclaims the Christmastide if we do not give out of our national abundance to lighten this burden of woe upon a people blameless and helpless in famine's peril.

NONTAXABLE BONDS.

There are a full score of topics concerning which it would be becoming to address you, and on which I hope to make report at a later time. I have alluded to the things requiring your earlier attention. However, I cannot end this limited address without a suggested amendment to the organic law.

Many of us belong to that school of thought which is hesitant about altering the fundamental law. I think our tax problems, the tendency of wealth to seek nontaxable investment and the menacing increase of public debt—federal, state and municipal—all justify a proposal to change the constitution so as to end the issue of nontaxable bonds. No action can change the status of the many billions outstanding, but we can guard against future encouragement of capital paralysis, while a halt in the growth of public indebtedness would be beneficial throughout our whole land.

Such a change in the constitution must be very thoroughly considered before submission. There ought to be known what influence it will have on the inevitable refunding of our vast national debt, how it will operate on the necessary refunding of state and municipal debt, how the advantages of national over state and municipal or the contrary may be avoided.

Clearly the states would not ratify to their own apparent disadvantage. I suggest the consideration because the drift of wealth into nontaxable securities is hindering the flow of large capital to our industries, manufacturing, agricultural and carrying, until we are discouraging the very activities which make our wealth.

Agreeable to your expressed desire and in complete accord with the purposes of the legislative branch of the government, there is in Washington, as you happily know, an international conference now most earnestly at work on plans for the limitation of armament, a naval holiday and the just settlement of problems which might develop into causes of international disagreement.

It is easy to believe a world hope is centered on this capital city. A most gratifying world accomplishment is not improbable.

On and after July 1, 1922, retired enlisted men of the navy and coast guard shall have their retired pay computed as now authorized by law on the basis of pay provided by this act.

Sec. 11. That warrant officers of the army, including those of the army mine planter service, of the navy, marine corps and coast guard, shall be entitled at all times to the same money allowance for subsistence as is authorized in section 5 of this act for officers receiving the pay of the first period, and to the same money allowance for rental of quarters as is authorized in section 6 of this act for officers receiving the pay of the first period. To each enlisted man not furnished quarters or rations in kind there shall be granted, under such regulations as the president may prescribe, an allowance for quarters and subsistence, the value of which shall depend on the conditions under which the duty of the man is being performed, and shall not exceed $4 per day. These regulations shall be uniform for all the services mentioned in the title of this act. Subsistence for pilots shall be paid in accordance with existing regulations, and rations for enlisted men may be commuted as now authorized by law.

Sec. 12. That officers of any of the services mentioned in the title of this act, when traveling under competent orders without troops, shall receive a mileage allowance at the rate of 8 cents per mile, distance to be computed by the shortest usually traveled route and existing laws providing for the issue of transportation requests to officers of the army traveling under competent orders, and for deduction to be made from mileage accounts when transportation is furnished by the United States, are hereby made applicable to all the services mentioned in the title of this act, but in cases when orders are given for travel to be performed repeatedly between two or more places in the same vicinity, as determined by the head of the executive department concerned, he may, in his discretion, direct that actual and necessary expenses only be allowed. Actual expenses only shall be paid for travel under orders outside the limits of the United States in North America. Unless otherwise expressly provided by law, no officer of the services mentioned in the title of this act shall be allowed or paid any sum in excess of expenses actually incurred for subsistence while traveling on duty away from his designated post of duty, nor any sum for such expenses actually incurred in excess of $7 per day. The heads of the executive departments concerned are authorized to prescribe per diem rates of allowance, not exceeding $6, in lieu of subsistence to officers traveling on official business and away from their designated posts of duty.

In lieu of the transportation in kind authorized by section 12 of an act entitled "An act to increase the efficiency of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the army, navy, marine corps, coast guard, coast and geodetic survey and public health service," approved May 18, 1920, to be furnished by the United States for dependents, the president may authorize the payment in money of amounts equal to such commercial transportation costs when such travel shall have been completed. Dependent children shall be such as are defined in section 4 of this act.

Sec. 13. That, commencing July 1, 1922, the annual pay of female nurses of the army and navy shall be as follows: During the first three years of service, $840; from the beginning of the fourth year of service until the completion of the sixth year of service, $1,080; from the beginning of the seventh year of service until the completion of the ninth year of service, $1,380; from the beginning of the tenth year of service, $1,560. Superintendents of the nurse corps shall receive a money allowance at the rate of $2,500 a year, assistant superintendents, directors and assistant directors at the rate of $1,500 a year, and chief nurses at the rate of $600 a year, in addition to their pay as nurses. Nurses shall be entitled to the same allowance for subsistence as is authorized in section 5 of this act for officers receiving the pay of the first period, and to the same allowance for rental of quarters as is authorized in section 6 of this act for officers receiving the pay of the first period.

Sec. 14. That officers of the national guard receiving federal pay, except for armory drill, and reserve officers of any of the services mentioned in the title of this act while on active duty shall receive the allowances herein prescribed for officers of the regular services in sections 5 and 6 of this act. Hereafter, in addition to the pay authorized in section 109, act of June 3, 1916, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920, field officers and lieutenants of the national guard commanding organizations less than a brigade and having administrative functions shall receive $240 per year for the faithful performance of the administrative duties connected therewith; and warrant officers of the national guard shall receive not more than four-thirtieths of the monthly base pay of their grade for satisfactory performance of their appropriate duties, under such regulations as the secretary of war may prescribe.

On and after July 1, 1922, the armory drill pay for enlisted men of the national guard of the sixth grade shall be $1.15, and for those of the seventh grade shall be $1, in lieu of that authorized in section 110, act of June 3, 1916, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920; and the pay of enlisted men of the national guard of the sixth and seventh grades shall be $1.15 and $1 per day respectively whenever they are participating in exercises provided for by sections 94, 97 and 99 of the national defense act, approved June 3, 1916.

Sec. 15. That existing laws authorizing increase of pay for foreign service and commutation of quarters, heat and light are hereby repealed, effective July 1, 1922.

Sec. 16. That nothing contained in this act shall operate to reduce the pay of any officer on the active list below the pay to which he is entitled by reason of his grade and length of service on June 30, 1922, not including additional pay authorized by the act entitled "An act to increase the efficiency of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the army, navy, marine corps, coast guard, coast and geodetic survey and public health service," approved May 18, 1920; and nothing contained in this act shall operate to reduce the total of the pay and allowances which any enlisted man of the army, navy, marine corps or coast guard is now receiving during his current enlistment and while he holds his present grade or rating.

The provisions of this section shall apply in like manner to each person not commissioned whose pay is based by law on that of a commissioned officer.

Sec. 17. That on and after July 1, 1922, retired officers and warrant officers shall have their retired pay or equivalent pay computed as now authorized by law on the basis of pay provided in this act: Provided, That nothing contained in this act shall operate to reduce the present pay of officers, warrant officers and enlisted men now on the retired list or officers or warrant officers in an equivalent status of any of the services mentioned in the title of this act. Active duty performed after June 30, 1922, by an officer on the retired list or its equivalent shall not entitle such officer to promotion: Provided, That officers and former officers of the Philippine scouts who were placed on the retired list prior to June 4, 1920, shall be entitled to promotion on the retired list for active duty heretofore performed subsequent to retirement, in accordance with the provisions of section 127a of the act of June 3, 1916, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920, and to the same pay and benefits received by other officers of the army of like grade and length of service on the retired list. Retired officers of the army, navy, marine corps, coast guard and coast and geodetic survey below the grade of brigadier-general or commodore and retired warrant officers and enlisted men of those services shall, when on active duty, receive full pay and allowances.

Sec. 18. That under such regulations as the president may prescribe enlisted men of the army, navy, marine corps and coast guard may receive additional compensation not less than $1 or more than $5 per month for special qualification in the use of the arm or arms which they may be required to use. All laws and parts of laws authorizing extra pay for qualification in the use of arms or instruments or for holding rated positions, except as otherwise specifically provided herein, are hereby repealed, to take effect July 1, 1922.

Sec. 19. That cadets at the military academy and cadets and cadet engineers of the coast guard shall receive the same pay and allowances as are now or may hereafter be provided by law for midshipmen in the navy.

Sec. 20. That all officers, warrant officers and enlisted men of all branches of the army, navy, marine corps and coast guard, when detailed to duty involving flying, shall receive the same increase of their pay and the same allowance for traveling expenses as are now authorized for the performance of like duties in the army. Exclusive of the army air service and student aviators and qualified aircraft pilots of the navy, marine corps and coast guard the number of officers of any of the services mentioned in the title of this act detailed to duty involving flying shall not at any one time exceed one-half of 1 per centum of the total authorized commissioned strength of such service. Regulations in execution of the provisions of this section shall be made by the president and shall be uniform for all the services concerned.

Sec. 21. That nothing in this act shall operate to change in any way existing laws or regulations made in pursuance of law governing pay and allowances of the general of the armies, the enlisted men of the Philippine scouts, marine band, naval academy band, Indian scouts or flying cadets; nor the allowances in kind for rations, quarters, heat and light for enlisted men; nor allowances in kind for quarters, heat, and light for officers and warrant officers; nor allowances for private mounts for officers; nor transportation in kind for officers and warrant officers and enlisted men and their dependents; nor transportation and packing allowances for baggage or household effects of officers and warrant officers and enlisted men; nor additional pay for aids; nor extra pay to enlisted men serving as stenographic reporters or employed as cooks or messmen or mail clerks or assistant mail clerks or engaged in submarine diving or service on submarines; nor money allowances granted to enlisted men on account of awards of medals or decorations expressly authorized by congress.

Sec. 22. That the provisions of this act shall be effective beginning July 1, 1922, and all laws and parts of laws which are inconsistent herewith or in conflict with the provisions hereof are hereby repealed as of that date. (Aproved June 10, 1922.)

FEDERAL RESERVE ACT AMENDED.

Section 10 of the federal reserve act, approved Dec. 23, 1913, is amended to read as follows:

Sec. 10. A federal reserve board is hereby created which shall consist of eight members, including the secretary of the treasury and the comptroller of the currency, who shall be members ex officio, and six members appointed by the president of the United States by and with the advice and consent of the senate. In selecting the six appointive members of the federal reserve board, not more than one of whom shall be selected from any one federal reserve district, the president shall have due regard to a fair representation of the financial, agricultural, industrial and commercial interests and geographical divisions of the country. The six members of the federal reserve board appointed by the president and confirmed as aforesaid shall devote their entire time to the business of the federal reserve board and shall each receive an annual salary of $12,000, payable monthly, together with actual necessary traveling expenses, and the comptroller of the currency, as ex officio member of the federal reserve board, shall, in addition to the salary now paid him as comptroller of the currency, receive the sum of $7,000 annually for his services as a member of said board.

The secretary of the treasury and the comptroller of the currency shall be ineligible during the time they are in office and for two years thereafter to hold any office, position or employment in any member bank. The appointive members of the federal reserve board shall be ineligible during the time they are in office and for two years thereafter to hold any office, position or employment in any member bank, except that this restriction shall not apply to a member who has served the full term for which he was appointed. Of the six members thus appointed by the president one shall be designated by the president to serve for two, one for four, one for six, one for eight and the balance of the members for ten years, and thereafter each member so appointed shall serve for a term of ten years unless sooner removed for cause by the president. Of the six persons thus appointed one shall be designated by the president as governor and one as vice-governor of the federal reserve board. The governor of the federal reserve board, subject to its supervision, shall be the active executive officer. The secretary of the treasury may assign offices in the department of the treasury for the use of the federal reserve board. Each member of the federal reserve board shall within fifteen days after notice of appointment make and subscribe to the oath of office.

The federal reserve board shall have power to levy semiannually upon the federal reserve banks, in proportion to their capital stock and surplus, an assessment sufficient to pay its estimated expenses and the salaries of its members and employes for the half year succeeding the levying of such assessment, together with any deficit carried forward from the preceding half year.

The first meeting of the federal reserve board shall be held in Washington, D. C., as soon as may be after the passage of this act, at a date to be fixed by the reserve bank organization committee. The secretary of the treasury shall be ex-officio chairman of the federal reserve board. No member of the federal reserve board shall be an officer or director of any bank, banking institution, trust company or federal reserve bank nor hold stock in any bank, banking institution or trust company; and before entering upon his duties as a member of the federal reserve board he shall certify under oath to the secretary of the treasury that he has complied with this requirement. Whenever a vacancy shall occur, other than by expiration of term, among the six members of the federal reserve board appointed by the president as above provided, a successor shall be appointed by the president with the advice and consent of the senate to fill such vacancy, and when appointed he shall hold office for the unexpired term of the member whose place he is selected to fill.

The president shall have power to fill all vacancies that may happen on the federal reserve board during the recess of the senate by granting commissions which shall expire with the next session of the senate.

Nothing in this act contained shall be construed as taking away any powers heretofore vested by law in the secretary of the treasury which relate to the supervision, management and control of the treasury department and bureaus under such department, and wherever any power vested by this act in the federal reserve board or the federal reserve agent appears to conflict with the powers of the secretary of the treasury such powers shall be exercised subject to the supervision and control of the secretary.

The federal reserve board shall annually make a full report of its operations to the speaker of the house of representatives, who shall cause the same to be printed for the information of the congress.

Section 324 of the revised statutes of the United States shall be amended so as to read as follows:

"Sec. 324. There shall be in the department of the treasury a bureau charged with the execution of all laws passed by congress relating to the issue and regulation of national currency secured by United States bonds and, under the general supervision of the federal reserve board, of all federal reserve notes, the chief officer of which bureau shall be called the comptroller of the currency and shall perform his duties under the general direction of the secretary of the treasury.

"No federal reserve bank shall have authority hereafter to enter into any contract or contracts for the erection of any building of any kind or character, or to authorize the erection of any building, in excess of $250,000, without the consent of congress having previously been given therefor in express terms: Provided, That nothing herein shall apply to any building now under construction." (Approved June 3, 1922.)

PROTECTION OF RIVER LEVEES.

Resolved, etc., That there be appropriated the sum of $1,000,000 to be immediately available as an emergency fund to be expended by the Mississippi river commission during the present flood in the Mississippi river for the purpose of preserving, protecting and repairing the levees under its jurisdiction: Provided, that the secretary of the treasury shall deduct $1,000,000 from the appropriation that shall first hereafter be made for the use of said Mississippi river commission under the terms of the flood control act of March 1, 1917, and said $1,000,000 be carried to the surplus fund and covered into the treasury: Provided further, That any unexpended balance of the sum hereby appropriated remaining after the present flood emergency has passed may be expended by the Mississippi river commission under the authority and subject to the provisions of the flood control act. (Approved April 21, 1922.)

Resolved, etc., That a sum not to exceed $200,000 from funds heretofore appropriated for improvement of rivers and harbors and which remain in the treasury unexpended because the works or projects for which the same were appropriated have been completed or have been recommended for abandonment is hereby made available for expenditure by and under the direction of the secretary of war and the supervision of the chief of engineers for the purpose of protecting life and property by preserving and maintaining during the present flood emergency the levees not under government control on the Mississippi river, its tributaries and outlets. (Approved May 2, 1922.)

Resolved, etc., That an amount not exceeding $100,000 of the funds authorized to be expended by public resolution approved May 2, 1922, is hereby made available as an emergency fund to be expended by the Mississippi river commission, under the direction of the secretary of war, for repairing and restoring any levees on the Mississippi river above Cairo, Ill., which have been destroyed or seriously injured by the recent floods of the Mississippi river and which are not now within, but may before June 15, 1922, be brought within, the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the control of floods of the Mississippi river and of the Sacramento river and for other purposes," approved March 1, 1917: Provided, That if the Mississippi river commission finds that the levee or drainage district in which the broken levee is situated cannot legally, by or before June 15, 1922, comply with section (b) of such act of March 1, 1917, the commission may accept, in this emergency, bonds of standing approved by it in amount sufficient to cover not less than one-third of the cost involved: Provided further, That nothing in this resolution shall be construed as authorizing a departure from the established practice of the commission except so far as may be necessary to permit the restoration of broken levees in districts which are willing but can not legally comply with said method of procedure in time to avoid another threatened overflow this year. (Approved June 10, 1922.)

"(b) That it is unlawful to import or bring any narcotic drug into the United States or any territory under its control or jurisdiction; except that such amounts of crude opium and coca leaves as the board finds to be necessary to provide for medical and legitimate uses only may be imported and brought into the United States or such territory under such regulations as the board shall prescribe. All narcotic drugs imported under such regulations shall be subject to the duties which are now or may hereafter be imposed upon such drugs when imported.

"(c) That if any person fraudulently or knowingly imports or brings any narcotic drug into the United States or any territory under its control or jurisdiction contrary to law, or assists in so doing, or receives, conceals, buys, sells or in any manner facilitates the transportation, concealment or sale of any such narcotic drug after being imported or brought in, knowing the same to have been imported contrary to law, such person shall upon conviction be fined not more than $5,000 and imprisoned for not more than ten years.

Any narcotic drug which is forfeited in a proceeding for condemnation or not claimed under such sections, or which is summarily forfeited as provided in this subdivision, shall be placed in the custody of the board and in its discretion be destroyed or delivered to some agency of the United States government for use for medical or scientific purposes.

"(e) Any alien who at any time after his entry is convicted under subdivision (c) shall, upon the termination of the imprisonment imposed by the court upon such conviction and upon warrant issued by the secretary of labor, be taken into custody and deported in accordance with the provisions of sections 19 and 20 of the act of Feb. 5, 1917, entitled 'An act to regulate the immigration of aliens to and the residence of aliens in the United States,' or provisions of law hereafter enacted which are amendatory of or in substitution for such sections.

"(g) The master of any vessel or other water craft, or a person in charge of a railroad car or other vehicle, shall not be liable under subdivision (c) if he satisfies the jury that he had no knowledge of and used due diligence to prevent the presence of the narcotic drug in or on such vessel, water craft, railroad car or other vehicle; but the narcotic drug shall be seized, forfeited and disposed of as provided in subdivision (d)."

Sec. 2. That sections 5 and 6 of such act of Feb. 9, 1909, as amended are amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 6. (a) That it shall be unlawful for any person subject to the jurisdiction of the United States government to export or cause to be exported from the United States, or from territory under its control or jurisdiction, or from countries in which the United States exercises extraterritorial jurisdiction, any narcotic drug to any other country: Provided, That narcotic drugs (except smoking opium and opium prepared for smoking, the exportation of which is hereby absolutely prohibited) may be exported to a country only which has ratified and become a party to the convention and final protocol between the United States government and other powers for the suppression of the abuses of opium and other drugs, commonly known as the international opium convention of 1912, and then only if (1) such country has instituted and maintains, in conformity with that convention, a system which the board deems adequate of permits or licenses for the control of imports of such narcotic drugs; (2) the narcotic drug is consigned to an authorized permittee; and (3) there is furnished to the board proof deemed adequate by it that the narcotic drug is to be applied exclusively to medical and legitimate uses within the country to which exported, that it will not be re-exported from such country and that there is an actual shortage of and a demand for the narcotic drug for medical and legitimate uses within such country.

"(b) The secretary of state shall request all foreign governments to communicate through the diplomatic channels copies of the laws and regulations promulgated in their respective countries which prohibit or regulate the importation and shipment in transit of any narcotic drug and when received advise the board thereof.

"(c) The board shall make and publish all proper regulations to carry into effect the authority vested in it by this act."

(a) That a narcotic drug that is found upon a vessel arriving at a port of the United States or territory under its control or jurisdiction and is not shown upon the vessel's manifest, or that is landed from any such vessel without a permit first obtained from the collector of customs for that purpose, shall be seized, forfeited and disposed of in the manner provided in subdivision (d) of section 2, and the master of the vessel shall be liable, (1) if the narcotic drug is smoking opium, to a penalty of $25 an ounce, and (2) if any other narcotic drug to a penalty equal to the value of the narcotic drug.

"(b) Such penalty shall constitute a lien upon the vessel which may be enforced by proceedings by libel in rem. Clearance of the vessel from a port of the United States may be withheld until the penalty is paid or until there is deposited with the collector of customs at the port a bond in a penal sum double the amount of the penalty, with sureties approved by the collector, and conditioned on the payment of the penalty (or so much thereof as is not remitted by the secretary of the treasury) and of all costs and other expenses to the government in proceedings for the recovery of the penalty in case the master's application for remission of the penalty is denied in whole or in part by the secretary of the treasury.

"(c) The provisions of law for the mitigation and remission of penalties and forfeitures incurred for violations of the customs laws shall apply to penalties incurred for a violation of the provisions of this section."

Sec. 4. That such act of Feb. 9, 1909, as amended is amended by adding at the end thereof a new section to read as follows:

"Sec. 9. That this act may be cited as the 'Narcotic Drugs Import and Export Act.'"

(Approved May 26, 1922.)

GRAIN FUTURES ACT.

Be it enacted, etc., This act shall be known by the short title of "The Grain Futures Act."

Sec. 2. (a) For the purposes of this act "contract of sale" shall be held to include sales, agreements of sale and agreements to sell. The word "person" shall be construed to import the plural or singular, and shall include individuals, associations, partnerships, corporations and trusts. The word "grain" shall be construed to mean wheat, corn, oats, barley, rye, flax and sorghum. The term "future delivery" as used herein shall not include any sale of cash grain for deferred shipment or delivery. The words "board of trade" shall be held to include and mean any exchange or association, whether incorporated or unincorporated, of persons who shall be engaged in the business of buying or selling grain or receiving the same for sale on consignment. The act, omission or failure of any official, agent or other person acting for any individual, association, partnership, corporation or trust within the scope of his employment or office shall be deemed the act, omission or failure of such individual, association, partnership, corporation or trust, as well as of such official, agent or other person. The words "interstate commerce" shall be construed to mean commerce between any state, territory or possession, or the District of Columbia, and any place outside thereof; or between points within the same state, territory or possession, or the District of Columbia, but through any place outside thereof, or within any territory or possession or the District of Columbia.

(b) For the purposes of this act (but not in any wise limiting the foregoing definition of interstate commerce) a transaction in respect to any article shall be considered to be in interstate commerce if such article is part of that current of commerce usual in the grain trade whereby grain and grain products and by-products thereof are sent from one state with the expectation that they will end their transit, after purchase, in another, including, in addition to cases within the above general description, all cases where purchase or sale is either for shipment to another state or for manufacture within the state and the shipment outside the state of the products resulting from such manufacture. Articles normally in such current of commerce shall not be considered out of such commerce through resort being had to any means or device intended to remove transactions in respect thereto from the provisions of this act. For the purpose of this paragraph the word "state" includes territory, the District of Columbia, possession of the United States and foreign nation.

Sec. 3. Transactions in grain involving the sale thereof for future delivery as commonly conducted on boards of trade and known as "futures" are affected with a national public interest; that such transactions are carried on in large volume by the public generally and by persons engaged in the business of buying and selling grain and the products and by-products thereof in interstate commerce; that the prices involved in such transactions are generally quoted and disseminated throughout the United States and in foreign countries as a basis for determining the prices to the producer and the consumer of grain and the products and by-products thereof and to facilitate the movements thereof in interstate commerce; that such transactions are utilized by shippers, dealers, millers, and others engaged in handling grain and the products and by-products thereof in interstate commerce as a means of hedging themselves against possible loss through fluctuations in price; that the transactions and prices of grain on such boards of trade are susceptible to speculation, manipulation and control, and sudden or unreasonable fluctuations in the prices thereof frequently occur as a result of such speculation, manipulation or control which are detrimental to the producer or the consumer and the persons handling grain and products and by-products thereof in interstate commerce, and that such fluctuations in prices are an obstruction to and a burden upon interstate commerce in grain and the products and by-products thereof and render regulation imperative for the protection of such commerce and the national public interest therein.

Sec. 4. It shall be unlawful for any person to deliver for transmission through the mails or in interstate commerce by telegraph, telephone, wireless or other means of communication any offer to make or execute, or any confirmation of the execution of, or any quotation or report of the price of, any contract of sale of grain for future delivery on or subject to the rules of any board of trade in the United States, or for any person to make or execute such contract of sale, which is or may be used for (a) hedging any transaction in interstate commerce in grain or the products or by-products thereof, or (b) determining the price basis for any such transaction in interstate commerce, or (c) delivering grain sold, shipped or received in interstate commerce for the fulfillment thereof, except—

(a) Where the seller is at the time of the making of such contract the owner of the actual physical property, covered thereby, or is the grower thereof, or in case either party to the contract is the owner or renter of land on which the same is to be grown, or is an association of such owners, or growers of grain, or of such owners or renters of land; or

(b) Where such contract is made by or through a member of a board of trade which has been designated by the secretary of agriculture as a "contract market," as hereinafter provided, and if such contract is evidenced by a record in writing which shows the date, the parties to such contract and their addresses, the property covered and its price, and the terms of delivery: Provided, That each board member shall keep such record for a period of three years from the date thereof, or for a longer period if the secretary of agriculture shall so direct, which record shall at all times be open to the inspection of any representative of the United States department of agriculture or the United States department of justice.

Sec. 5. The secretary of agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to designate any board of trade as a "contract market" when, and only when, such board of trade complies with and carries out the following conditions and requirements:

(a) When located at a terminal market where cash grain of the kind specified in the contracts of sale of grain for future delivery to be executed on such board is sold in sufficient volumes and under such conditions as fairly to reflect the general value of the grain and the differences in value between the various grades of such grain, and where there is available to such board of trade official inspection service approved by the secretary of agriculture for the purpose.

(b) When the governing board thereof provides for the making and filing by the board or any member thereof, as the secretary of agriculture may direct, of reports in accordance with the rules and regulations, and in such manner and form and at such times as may be prescribed by the secretary of agriculture, showing the details and terms of all transactions entered into by the board or the members thereof, either in cash transactions consummated at, on or in a board of trade, or transactions for future delivery, and when such governing board provides, in accordance with such rules and regulations, for the keeping of a record by the board or the members of the board of trade, as the secretary of agriculture may direct, showing the details and terms of all cash and future transactions entered into by them, consummated at, on or in a board of trade, such record to be in permanent form, showing the parties to all such transactions, including the persons for whom made, any assignments or transfers thereof, with the parties thereto, and the manner in which said transactions are fulfilled, discharged or terminated. Such record shall be required to be kept for a period of three years from the date thereof, or for a longer period if the secretary of agriculture shall so direct, and shall at all times be open to the inspection of any representative of the United States department of agriculture or United States department of justice.

(c) When the governing board thereof provides for the prevention of dissemination by the board or any member thereof of false or misleading or knowingly inaccurate reports concerning crop or market information or conditions that affect or tend to affect the price of grain in interstate commerce.

(d) When the governing board thereof provides for the prevention of manipulation of prices or the cornering of any grain by the dealers or operators upon such board.

(e) When the governing board thereof does not exclude from membership in, and all privileges on, such board of trade any duly authorized representative of any lawfully formed and conducted co-operative association of producers having adequate financial responsibility which is engaged in cash grain business, if such association has complied, and agrees to comply, with such terms and conditions as are or may be imposed lawfully on other members of such board: Provided, That no rule of a contract market shall forbid or be construed to forbid the return on a patronage basis by such co-operative association to its bona fide members of moneys collected in excess of the expense of conducting the business of such association.

(f) When the governing board provides for making effective the final orders or decisions entered pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (b) of section 6 of this act.

Sec. 6. Any board of trade desiring to be designated a "contract market" shall make application to the secretary of agriculture for such designation and accompany the same with a showing that it complies with the above conditions, and with a sufficient assurance that it will continue to comply with the above requirements.

(a) A commission composed of the secretary of agriculture, the secretary of commerce and the attorney-general is authorized to suspend for a period not to exceed six months or to revoke the designation of any board of trade as a "contract market" upon a showing that such board of trade has failed or is failing to comply with any of the above requirements or is not enforcing its rules of government made a condition of its designation as set forth in section 5. Such suspension or revocation shall only be after a notice to the officers of the board of trade affected and upon a hearing: Provided, That such suspension or revocation shall be final and conclusive unless within fifteen days after such suspension or revocation by the said commission such board of trade appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the circuit in which it has its principal place of business by filing with the clerk of such court a written petition praying that the order of the said commission be set aside or modified in the manner stated in the petition, together with a bond in such sum as the court may determine, conditioned that such board of trade will pay the costs of the proceedings if the court so directs. The clerk of the court in which such a petition is filed shall immediately cause a copy thereof to be delivered to the secretary of agriculture, chairman of said commission, or any member thereof, and the said commission shall forthwith prepare, certify and file in the court a full and accurate transcript of the record in such proceedings, including the notice to the board of trade, a copy of the charges, the evidence and the report and order. The testimony and evidence taken or submitted before the said commission duly certified and filed as aforesaid as a part of the record shall be considered by the court as the evidence in the case. The proceedings in such cases in the Circuit Court of Appeals shall be made a preferred cause and shall be expedited in every way. Such a court may affirm or set aside the order of the said commission or may direct it to modify its order. No such order of the said commission shall be modified or set aside by the Circuit Court of Appeals unless it is shown by the board of trade that the order is unsupported by the weight of the evidence or was issued without due notice and a reasonable opportunity having been afforded to such board of trade for a hearing, or infringes the constitution of the United States, or is beyond the jurisdiction of said commission: Provided further, That if the secretary of agriculture shall refuse to designate as a contract market any board of trade that has made application therefor, then such board of trade may appeal from such refusal to the commission described therein, consisting of the secretary of agriculture, the secretary of commerce and the attorney-general of the United States, with the right to appeal as provided for in other cases in this section, the decision on such appeal to be final and binding on all parties interested.

(b) If the secretary of agriculture has reason to believe that any person is violating any of the provisions of this act, or is attempting to manipulate the market price of any grain in violation of the provisions of section 5 hereof, or of any of the rules or regulations made pursuant to its requirements, he may serve upon such person a complaint stating his charge in that respect, to which complaint shall be attached or contained therein a notice of hearing, specifying a day and place not less than three days after the service thereof, requiring such person to show cause why an order should not be made directing that all contract markets until further notice of the said commission refuse all trading privileges thereon to such person. Said hearing may be held in Washington, D. C., or elsewhere before the said commission, or before a referee designated by the secretary of agriculture, who shall cause all evidence to be reduced to writing and forthwith transmit the same to the secretary of agriculture as chairman of the said commission. That for the purpose of securing effective enforcement of the provisions of this act the provisions, including penalties, of section 12 of the interstate commerce act, as amended, relating to the attendance and testimony of witnesses, the production of documentary evidence and the immunity of witnesses, are made applicable to the power, jurisdiction and authority of the secretary of agriculture, the said commission, or said referee in proceedings under this act and to persons subject to its provisions. Upon evidence received the said commission may require all contract markets to refuse such person all trading privileges thereon for such period as may be specified in said order. Notice of such order shall be sent forthwith by registered mail or delivered to the offending person and to the governing boards of said contract markets. After the issuance of the order by the commission as aforesaid the person against whom it is issued may obtain a review of such order or such other equitable relief as to the court may seem just by filing in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the circuit in which the petitioner is doing business a written petition praying that the order of the commission be set aside. A copy of such petition shall be forthwith served upon the commission by delivering such copy to its chairman or to any member thereof, and thereupon the commission shall forthwith certify and file in the court a transcript of the record theretofore made, including evidence received. Upon the filing of the transcript the court shall have jurisdiction to affirm, to set aside or modify the order of the commission, and the findings of the commission as to the facts, if supported by the weight of evidence, shall in like manner be conclusive. In proceedings under paragraphs (a) and (b) the judgment and decree of the court shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme court upon certiorari, as provided in section 240 of the judicial code.

Sec. 7. Any board of trade that has been designated a contract market in the manner herein provided may have such designation vacated and set aside by giving notice in writing to the secretary of agriculture requesting that its designation as a contract market be vacated, which notice shall be served at least ninety days prior to the date named therein as the date when the vacation of designation shall take effect. Upon receipt of such notice the secretary of agriculture shall forthwith order the vacation of the designation of such board of trade as a contract market, effective upon the day named in the notice, and shall forthwith send a copy of the notice and his order to all other contract markets. From and after the date upon which the vacation became effective the said board of trade can thereafter be designated again a contract market by making application to the secretary of agriculture in the manner herein provided for an original application.

Sec. 8. For the efficient execution of the provisions of this act, and in order to provide information for the use of congress, the secretary of agriculture may make such investigations as he may deem necessary to ascertain the facts regarding the operations of boards of trade, whether prior or subsequent to the enactment of this act, and may publish from time to time in his discretion the result of such investigation and such statistical information gathered therefrom as he may deem of interest to the public, except data and information which would separately disclose the business transactions of any person and trade secrets or names of customers: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit the secretary of agriculture from making or issuing such reports as he may deem necessary relative to the conduct of any board of trade or of the transactions of any person found guilty of violating the provisions of this act under the proceedings prescribed in section 6 of this act: Provided further, That the secretary of agriculture in any report may include the facts as to any actual transaction. The secretary of agriculture, upon his own initiative or in co-operation with existing governmental agencies, shall investigate marketing conditions of grain and grain products and by-products, including supply and demand for these commodities, cost to the consumer and handling and transportation charges. He shall likewise compile and furnish to producers, consumers and distributors, by means of regular or special reports, or by such methods as he may deem most effective, information respecting the grain markets, together with information on supply, demand, prices and other conditions in this and other countries that affect the markets.

Sec. 9. Any person who shall violate the provisions of section 4 of this act, or who shall fail to evidence any contract mentioned in said section by a record in writing as therein required, or who shall knowingly or carelessly deliver for transmission through the mails or in interstate commerce by telegraph, telephone, wireless or other means of communication false or misleading or knowingly inaccurate reports concerning crop or market information or conditions that affect or tend to affect the price of grain in interstate commerce, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

Sec. 10. If any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the act and of the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

Sec. 11. No fine or imprisonment shall be imposed for any violation of this act occurring before the first day of the second month following its passage.

Sec. 12. The secretary of agriculture may co-operate with any department or agency of the government, any state, territory, district or possession, or department, agency, or political subdivision thereof, or any person, and shall have the power to appoint, remove and fix the compensation of such officers and employes, not in conflict with existing law, and make such expenditures for rent outside the District of Columbia, printing, telegrams, telephones, lawbooks, books of reference, periodicals, furniture, stationery, office equipment, travel and other supplies and expenses as shall be necessary to the administration of this act in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, and there are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary for such purposes. (Approved Sept. 21, 1922.)

ADDITIONS TO PENSION ROLL.

And this section shall apply to a former widow of any officer or enlisted man who rendered service as hereinbefore described, and who was honorably discharged, or died in service due to disability or disease incurred in the service, such widow having remarried either once or more than once after the death of the soldier, sailor or marine, if it be shown that such subsequent or successive marriage or marriages has or have been dissolved, either by the death of the husband or husbands, or by divorce without fault on the part of the wife; and any such former widow shall be entitled to and be paid a pension at the rate of $20 per month; and any widow or former widow as mentioned in this section shall also be paid $4 per month for each child of such officer or enlisted man under the age of 16 years, and in case of the death or remarriage of the widow leaving a child or children of such officer or enlisted man under the age of 16 years, such pension shall be paid such child or children until the age of 16 years: Provided, That in case a minor child is insane, idiotic or otherwise mentally or physically helpless, the pension shall continue during the life of such child or during the period of such disability; and this proviso shall apply to all pensions heretofore granted or hereafter to be granted under this or any former statute: Provided further, That in case of any widow whose name has been dropped from the pension roll because of her remarriage, if the pension has been granted to an insane, idiotic or otherwise helpless child, or to a child or children under the age of 16 years, she shall not be entitled to renewal of pension under this act until the pension to such child or children terminates, unless such child or children be a member or members of her family and cared for by her, and upon renewal of pension to such widow payment of pension to such child or children shall cease.

Sec. 2. The benefits of the act of congress approved June 5, 1920, entitled "An act to pension soldiers and sailors of the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection and the China relief expedition," be, and are hereby, extended to include any woman who served honorably as an army nurse, chief nurse or superintendent of the nurse corps, under contract for ninety days or more between the beginning of the war with Spain and Feb. 2, 1901, when the nurse corps (female) was declared by law a component part of the army, and any such nurse who was released from service before the expiration of ninety days because of disability contracted in line of duty in said service: Provided, That the release from service of any nurse, chief nurse or superintendent shall operate as if she had received an honorable discharge, it being the intent and purpose to give to said nurses, chief nurses and superintendents of the nurse corps (female) the same status in all respects as members of said corps who served after Feb. 2, 1901: Provided, That no person shall receive more than one pension for the same period: Provided further, That all dependent parents of any officer or enlisted man who served in the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection or the Chinese Boxer rebellion, whose names are now on the pension roll or who are now entitled to pension under any existing law, shall be entitled to and shall be paid a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

Sec. 3. From and after the approval of this act all persons whose names are on the pension roll and all persons hereafter granted a pension, who while in the military or naval service of the United States under the provision of this act and all other acts relating to pensions of soldiers who served in the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection or the Chinese Boxer rebellion and in line of duty shall have lost both hands or both feet or been totally disabled therein, or who while in such service and in like manner sustained injuries that proved the direct cause of the subsequent total disability of both hands or both feet, shall receive a pension at the rate of $100 per month.

Sec. 4. The pension or increase of pension herein provided for, as to all persons whose names are now on the pension roll or who are now in receipt of a pension under existing law, shall commence at the rates herein provided from the date of the approval of this act; and as to persons whose names are not now on the pension roll or who are not now in receipt of pension under existing law but who may be entitled to pension under the provisions of this act, such pensions shall commence from the date of filing application therefor in the bureau of pensions in such form as may be prescribed by the secretary of the interior.

Sec. 5. In the adjudication of claims arising under section 1 of this act and claims arising under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to pension soldiers and sailors of the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection and the China relief expedition," approved June 5, 1920, all leaves of absence and furloughs under general orders numbered 130, Aug. 29, 1898, war department, shall be included in determining the period of pensionable service: Provided, That as to any claimant who filed an application for pension under the act of July 16, 1918, or the act of June 5, 1920, and whose application is still pending in the bureau of pensions or has been rejected on the ground that ninety days' service was not shown exclusive of the leave of absence or furlough under the order herein referred to, the pension shall commence from the date when the original application was filed in the bureau of pensions, and as to claims under the act of July 16, 1918, the pension shall be at the rate provided in that act, with increase at the rate provided herein from the date of the approval of this act: Provided further, That persons who are now receiving pensions under existing laws or whose claims are pending in the bureau of pensions may, by application to the commissioner of pensions, in such form as he may prescribe, showing themselves entitled thereto, receive the benefits of this act; and nothing therein shall be so construed as to prevent any pensioner thereunder from prosecuting his claim under any other general or special act: And provided further, That this act shall not be so construed as to reduce any pension under any act, public or private: Provided, however, That no person shall receive more than one pension for the same period.

Sec. 6. The second section of the act entitled "An act to pension the survivors of certain Indian wars from Jan. 1, 1859, to January, 1891, inclusive, and for other purposes," approved March 4, 1917, be so amended as to read as follows:

"Sec. 2. That the period of service performed by beneficiaries under this act shall be determined: First, by reports from the records of the war department, where there are such records; second, by reports from the records of the treasury department showing payment by the United States, where there is no record of regular enlistment or muster into the United States military service; and, third, when there is no record of service or payment for same in the war department or the treasury department, by satisfactory evidence from muster rolls on file in the several state or territorial archives; fourth, where there is no muster roll or pay roll on file in the several state or territorial archives showing service of the beneficiary or same has been destroyed by fire or otherwise lost, and no record of service has been made in the war department or treasury department, the applicant may make proof of service by furnishing evidence satisfactory to the commissioner of pensions: Provided, That the want of a certificate of discharge shall not deprive any applicant of the benefits of this act."

Sec. 7. That no claim agent or attorney or other person shall be recognized in the adjustment of claims under this act except in claims for original pension, and in such cases no more than the sum of $10 shall be allowed for services in preparing, presenting or prosecuting any such claim, which sum shall be payable only on the order of the commissioner of pensions; and any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this section, or shall wrongfully withhold from the pensioner or claimant the whole or any part of a pension allowed or due to such pensioner or claimant under this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall, for each and every such offense, be fined not exceeding $500 or be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. (Approved Sept. 1, 1922.)

Every judge shall reside in the district or circuit or one of the districts or circuits for which he is appointed.

Sec. 2. It shall be the duty of the chief justice of the United States, or in case of his disability of one of the other justices of the Supreme court, in order of their seniority, as soon as may be after the passage of this act, and annually thereafter, to summon to a conference on the last Monday in September, at Washington, D. C., or at such other time and place in the United States as the chief justice, or, in case of his disability, any of said justices in order of their seniority, may designate, the senior circuit judge of each judicial circuit. If any senior circuit judge is unable to attend, the chief justice, or in case of his disability, the justice of the Supreme court calling said conference, may summon any other circuit or district judge in the judicial circuit whose senior circuit judge is unable to attend, that each circuit may be adequately represented at said conference. The senior district judge of each United States District court, on or before the first day of August in each year, shall prepare and submit to the senior circuit judge of the judicial circuit in which said district is situated a report setting forth the condition of business in said district court, including the number and character of cases on the docket, the business in arrears, and cases disposed of, and such other facts pertinent to the business dispatched and pending as said district judge may deem proper, together with recommendations as to the need of additional judicial assistance for the disposal of business for the year ensuing. The attorney-general shall, upon request of the chief justice, report to said conference on matters relating to the business of the several courts of the United States, with particular reference to causes or proceedings in which the United States may be a party.

The chief justice and each justice or judge summoned and attending said conference shall be allowed his actual expenses of travel and his necessary expenses for subsistence, not to exceed $10 per day, which payments shall be made by the marshal of the Supreme court of the United States upon the written certifi-

"Sec. 13. Whenever any district judge by reason of any disability or necessary absence from his district or the accumulation or urgency of business is unable to perform speedily the work of his district, the senior circuit judge of that circuit, or, in his absence, the circuit justice thereof, may, if in his judgment the public interest requires, designate and assign any district judge of any District court within the same judicial circuit to act as district judge in such district and to discharge all the judicial duties of a judge thereof for such time as the business of the said District court may require. Whenever it is found impracticable to designate and assign another district judge within the same judicial circuit as above provided and a certificate of the needs of any such district is presented by said senior circuit judge or said circuit justice to the chief justice of the United States, he, or in his absence the senior associate justice, may, if in his judgment the public interest so requires, designate and assign a district judge of an adjoining judicial circuit if practicable, or if not practicable, then of any judicial circuit, to perform the duties of district judge and hold a District court in any such district as above provided: Provided, however, That before any such designation or assignment is made the senior circuit judge of the circuit from which the designated or assigned judge is to be taken shall consent thereto. All designations and assignments made hereunder shall be filed in the office of the clerk and entered on the minutes of both the court from and to which a judge is designated and assigned."

Sec. 4. Section 15 of the judicial code is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 15. Each district judge designated and assigned under the provisions of section 13 may hold separately and at the same time a District court in the district or territory to which such judge is designated and assigned and discharge all the judicial duties of the district or territorial judge therein."

Sec. 5. Section 18 of the judicial code is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 18. The chief justice of the United States, or the circuit justice of any judicial circuit, or the senior circuit judge thereof, may, if the public interest requires, designate and assign any circuit judge of a judicial circuit to hold a District court within such circuit. The judges of the United States Court of Customs Appeals, or any of them, whenever the business of that court will permit, may, if in the judgment of the chief justice of the United States the public interest requires, be designated and assigned by him for service from time to time, and until he shall otherwise direct, in the Supreme court of the District of Columbia or the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, when requested by the chief justice of either of said courts.

"During the period of service of any judge designated and assigned under this act he shall have all the powers, and rights, and perform all the duties, of a judge of the district, or a justice of the court, to which he has been assigned (excepting the power of appointment to a statutory position or of permanent designation of newspaper or depository of funds): Provided, however, That in case a trial has been entered upon before such period of service has expired and has not been concluded, the period of service shall be deemed to be extended until the trial has been concluded.

"Any designated and assigned judge who has held court in another district than his own shall have power, notwithstanding his absence from such district and the expiration of the time limit in his designation, to decide all matters which have been submitted to him within such district, to decide motions for new trials, settle bills of exceptions, certify or authenticate narratives of testimony, or perform any other act required by law or the rules to be performed in order to prepare any case so tried by him for review in an appellate court; and his action thereon in writing filed with the clerk of the court where the trial or hearing was had shall be as valid as if such action had been taken by him within that district and within the period of his designation."

Sec. 6. Section 118 of the judicial code, as amended, is hereby further amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 118. There shall be in the second, seventh, and eighth circuits, respectively, four circuit judges; and in each of the other circuits, three circuit judges, to be appointed by the president, by and with the advice and consent of the senate. All circuit judges shall receive a salary of $8,500 a year each, payable monthly. Each circuit judge shall reside within his circuit, and when appointed shall be a resident of the circuit for which he is appointed. The circuit judges in each circuit shall be judges of the Circuit Court of Appeals in that circuit, and it shall be the duty of each circuit judge in each circuit to sit as one of the judges of the Circuit Court of Appeals in that circuit from time to time according to law: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent any circuit judge holding District court or otherwise, as provided by other sections of the judicial code."

Sec. 7. All laws or parts thereof inconsistent or in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed. (Approved Sept. 14, 1922.)

NUMBER OF OFFICERS IN ARMY.

The president, upon the recommendation of the board of general officers convened to carry out the elimination provisions of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the war department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and for other purposes," approved June 30, 1922, is authorized to determine the number of officers below the grade of lieutenant-colonel that shall be discharged and recommissioned in the next lower grade notwithstanding the limitation of 800 in said act: Provided, That the president is authorized, upon the recommendation of said board, to increase the authorized strength of various grades as prescribed in said act by not more than fifty colonels, 150 majors and 300 captains, and to decrease by a total of not to exceed 500, apportioned among the grades as the president may determine, the authorized strength of the two lowest grades as prescribed by said act: Provided further, That on and after Jan. 1, 1923, there shall be not to exceed a total of 12,000 officers in the army and on and after that date the authorized number in each grade shall be as prescribed in said act or as modified and prescribed by the president in accordance with the provisions of the preceding proviso, and on that date there shall not be any promotion list officers in any grade in addition to these prescribed numbers: Provided further, That the discharge and recommission of officers in the next lower grade shall not operate to reduce the pay or allowances which they are now receiving or to deprive them of credit for service now counted for purposes of pay or retirement: And provided further, That in discharging and recommissioning officers in inverse order of standing on the promotion list any officer who is once discharged from the grade he now holds and is recommissioned in the next lower grade shall be passed over.

Sec. 2. The retired general officers who have been called to active duty for service on the said elimination board shall be entitled from date of detail and while so serving to the active pay and allowances of their grade.

Sec. 3. That the first proviso under the heading "Arms, uniforms, equipment and so forth, for field service, national guard" in title I. of said act is amended to read as follows: "That members of the national guard and officers' reserve corps who have or shall become entitled for a continuous period of less than one month to federal pay at the rates fixed for the regular army, whether by virtue of a call by the president, of attendance at school or maneuver, or of any other cause, and whose accounts have not yet been settled, shall receive such pay for each day of such period; and the thirty-first day of a calendar month shall not be excluded from the computation."

Sec. 4. That all laws and parts of laws in so far as they are inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed. (Approved Sept. 14, 1922.)

COAL DISTRIBUTION AND PRICES.

Be it enacted, etc., That by reason of the prolonged interruption in the operation of a substantial part of the coal-mining industry in the United States and of the impairment in the service of certain carriers engaged in commerce between the states and by reason of the disturbance in economic and industrial conditions caused by the world war a national emergency exists which endangers the public health and general welfare of the people of the United States, injures industry and business generally throughout the United States, furnishes an opportunity for the disposition of coal and other fuel at unreasonably high prices, limits the supply of heat, light and power, threatens to obstruct and hamper the operation of the government of the United States and of its several departments, the transportation of the mails, the operation and efficiency of the army and the navy and the operation of carriers engaged in commerce among the several states and with foreign countries.

Sec. 2. That the powers of the interstate commerce commission under the act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved Feb. 4, 1887, as amended, including the transportation act, 1920, and especially under section 402 of said transportation act, 1920, are, during the aforesaid emergency, enlarged to include the authority to issue in transportation of coal or other fuel orders for priorities in car service, embargoes and other suitable measures in favor of or against any carrier, including vessels suitable for transportation of coal on the inland waters of the United States which for such purpose shall be subject to the interstate commerce act, or region, municipality, community or person, copartnership or corporation, and to take any other necessary and appropriate steps for the priority in transportation and for the equitable distribution of coal or other fuel so as best to meet the emergency and to promote the general welfare, and to prevent upon the part of any person, partnership, association or corporation the purchase or sale of coal or other fuel at prices unjustly or unreasonably high. This act shall not be construed as repealing any of the powers heretofore granted by law to the interstate commerce commission, but shall be construed as conferring supplementary and additional powers to said commission and as an amendment to section 1 of the interstate commerce act, and subject to the limitations and definitions of commerce controlled by said act, and all powers given said interstate commerce commission shall be applicable in the execution of this act.

Sec. 3. Because of such emergency and to assure an adequate supply and an equitable distribution of coal and other fuel and to facilitate the movement thereof between the several states and with foreign countries, to supply the army and navy, the government of the United States and its several departments and carriers engaged in interstate commerce with the same during such an emergency, and for other purposes and for the further purpose of assisting in carrying into effect the orders of the interstate commerce commission made under existing law or under section 2 hereof, there is hereby created and established an agency of the United States to be known as federal fuel distributor, whose appointment shall be made and compensation fixed by the president of the United States. Said distributor shall perform his duties under the direction of the president.

Sec. 4. It shall be the duty of the federal fuel distributor to ascertain—

(a) Whether there exists within the United States or any part thereof a shortage of coal or other fuel and the extent of such shortage;

(b) The fields of production of coal and other fuel and the principal markets to which such production is or may be transported and distributed and the means and methods of distribution;

(c) The prices normally and usually charged for such coal and other fuel and whether current prices, considering the costs of production and distribution, are just and reasonable; and

(d) The nature and location of the consumers; what persons, copartnerships, corporations, regions, municipalities or communities should, under the acts to regulate commerce administered by the interstate commerce commission, including the transportation act, 1920, in time of shortage of coal and other fuel, or the transportation thereof, receive priority in transportation and distribution, and the degree thereof and any other facts relating to the production, transportation and distribution of coal and other fuel; and when so ascertained the federal fuel distributor shall make appropriate recommendations pertaining thereto to the interstate commerce commission from time to time either on his own motion or upon the request of the commission, to the end that an equitable distribution of coal and other fuel may be secured so as best to meet the emergency and promote the general welfare. All facts and data within the possession of the federal fuel distributor shall be at all times accessible and furnished to the interstate commerce commission upon its request. The interstate commerce commission is hereby authorized and directed to receive and consider the recommendation of the federal fuel distributor, based upon his reports upon the foregoing subjects and any other information which it may secure in any manner authorized by law.

Sec. 5. The federal fuel distributor may make such rules, regulations and orders as he may deem necessary to carry out the duties imposed upon him by this act and may co-operate with any department or agency of the government, any state, territory, district or possession, or department, agency, or political subdivision thereof, or any person or persons and may avail himself of the advice and assistance of any department, commission or board of the government, and may appoint or create any agent or agency to facilitate the power and authority herein conferred upon him; and he shall have the power to appoint, remove and fix the compensation of such assistants and employes, not in conflict with existing laws, and make such expenditures for rent, printing, telegrams, telephones, furniture, stationery, office equipment, travel and other operating expenses as shall be necessary for the due and effective administration of this act. All facts, data and records relating to the production, supply, distribution and transportation of coal and other fuel in the possession of any commission, board, agency or department of the government shall at all times be available to the federal fuel distributor and the interstate commerce commission, and the person having custody of such facts, data and records shall furnish the same promptly to the federal fuel distributor or his duly authorized agent or to the commission on request therefor.

Sec. 6. That whenever the president shall be of the opinion that the national emergency hereby declared has passed he shall by proclamation declare the same and thereupon, except as to prosecutions for offenses, this act shall no longer be in force or effect and in no event shall it continue in force and effect for longer than twelve months from the passage thereof.

Sec. 7. Every person or corporation who shall knowingly make any false representation to the interstate commerce commission or the federal fuel distributor, or to any person acting in their behalf or the behalf of either of them, respecting the price at which coal or other fuel has been, is being or is to be sold or bought, the inquiry being made for the purposes of this act, or whoever having obtained coal or other fuel through a priority order or direction shall dispose of the same for purposes other than those for which said priority order or direction was issued without the consent of the interstate commerce commission, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $20,000: Provided, That any person or any officer or director of any corporation subject to the provisions of this act or the interstate commerce act and the acts amendatory thereof, or any receiver, trustee, lessee, agent or person acting for or employed by any such corporation, who shall be convicted as aforesaid, shall, in addition to the fine herein provided for, be liable to imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding two years, in the discretion of the court. Every violation of this section may be prosecuted in any court of the United States having jurisdiction of crimes within the district in which such violation is committed, or through which the transportation is conducted, or in which the car service is performed, or in which such concession or discrimination is granted, or given, or solicited, or accepted, or received; and whenever the offense is begun in one jurisdiction and completed in another it may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined and punished in either jurisdiction in the same manner as if the offense had been actually and wholly committed therein.

Sec. 8. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $250,000, available until expended for the purposes of this act, including payment of personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere and all expenses incident to organizing the work of the president's fuel distribution committee, and not exceeding $50,000 thereof shall be available for reimbursement and payment upon specific approval of the president of expenses incurred since May 15, 1922, in connection with the work of the president's fuel distribution committee organized for the purpose of helping to meet the emergency existing in the matter of fuel. (Approved Sept. 22, 1922.)

UNITED STATES COAL COMMISSION.

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of securing information in connection with questions relative to interstate commerce in coal and all questions and problems arising out of and connected with the coal industry, there is hereby established a governmental agency to be known and designated as the United States coal commission, to be composed of not more than seven members, appointed by the president of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the senate. No member of the United States senate or of the house of representatives shall be eligible to serve on said commission. Said commission shall elect a chairman by majority vote of its members, shall maintain central offices in the District of Columbia, but may whenever it deems it necessary meet at such other places as it may determine. A member of the commission may be removed by the president for neglect of duty or malfeasance in office but for no other cause. Each member of said commission shall receive a salary of $7,500 a year. Any vacancy on the commission shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment. Said commission shall cease to exist one year after the taking effect of this act.

The term "person" as used in this act means any individual, partnership, corporation or association; the term "coal" means anthracite, bituminous and other coal, lignite, coke and culm whether in place, extracted or banked.

It shall be the duty of said commission to investigate and ascertain fully the facts and conditions and study the problems and questions relative to the coal industry with a view to and for the purpose of aiding, assisting and advising congress in matters of legislation which will insure a supply of this commodity to the industries and the people generally throughout the country and maintain the uninterrupted flow of commerce among the states, or any legislation which congress may, after said investigation, deem wise and which under the constitution congress has the power to enact.

To this end said commission shall ascertain and report to the president and congress: As to the ownership and titles of the mines; prices of coal; the organizations and persons connected with the coal industry; cost of production; profits realized by the operators or owners of said mines during the last ten years; profits of other persons or corporations having to do with production, distribution, or sale of coal; labor costs; wages paid; wage contracts; irregular production; waste of coal; and suggestions as to the remedy for the same; the conditions generally under which coal is produced; distribution; the causes which from time to time induce strikes, thereby depriving interstate carriers of their fuel supply and otherwise interrupting the flow of interstate commerce; and all facts, circumstances or conditions which would be deemed helpful in determining and establishing a wise and efficient policy by the government relative to said industry.

Said commission shall, under the provisions of this act, make a separate investigation and report for the anthracite industry, which investigation and report shall cover all of the matters specified in the last preceding paragraph, and shall cover also every other phase of the anthracite industry, including the production, transportation and distribution of anthracite, and the organized or other relationships, if any, among the mine operators or the mine workers, or among any persons engaged in the production, transportation or distribution of coal.

Said commission shall also submit recommendations relative to:

(a) Standardizing the mines upon the basis of their economic productive capacity and regarding the closing down of mines which, by reason of their natural limitations or other conditions, fall below the standard.

(b) Ascertaining and standardizing the cost of living for mine workers and the living conditions which must be supplied or afforded in order to surround the workmen with reasonable comforts, and standardizing also as far as practicable the amount of work a man shall perform for a reasonable wage, recognizing the value and effect of such surroundings in respect of their efficiency.

(c) Standardizing a basis of arriving at the overhead cost of producing and distributing the coal, including delivery at the door of the consumer, recognizing in this compilation that the standardized cost of living to the miners should be the first and irreducible item of expense.

(d) The advisability of any legislation having to do with government or private ownership, regulation or control in the coal industry.

Said commission shall render its first report and recommendations to the congress and to the president not later than Jan. 15, 1923. Said commission shall render its separate report on the anthracite industry on or before July 1, 1923, and shall endeavor, in said separate report and in the recommendations contained therein, regarding wages in the anthracite industry, to take into consideration the conditions obtaining up to the time when said report is made.

That any officer or employe of the commission who shall make public any information obtained by the commission without its authority, unless directed by a court, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

That any member of said commission shall have power to administer oaths, to subpœna and examine witnesses, and to compel the production of any book, paper, document or other evidence from any place in the United States at any designated place of hearing, and to take or authorize the taking of the deposition of any person before any person having power to administer oaths. In the case of a deposition the testimony shall be reduced to writing by the person taking the deposition or under his direction and be subscribed to by the deponent. The same fees and mileage as are paid in the courts of the United States shall be paid in the case of witnesses subpœnaed or depositions taken under this act.

No person shall be excused from so attending and testifying and deposing, or from so producing any book, paper, document or other evidence on the ground that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, may tend to incriminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture; but no natural person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter or thing as to which, in obedience to a subpœna and under oath, he may be compelled to testify or produce in evidence: except that no person shall be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying.

Any member of the commission, officer or employe thereof, duly authorized in writing by the commission, shall, at all reasonable times for the purpose of examination, have access to and the right to copy any book, account, record, paper or correspondence relating to any matter which the commission is authorized by this act to investigate.

That every officer or employe of the United States whenever requested by the commission shall supply it with any data or information pertaining to any investigation by the commission which may be contained in the records of the office of such officer or employe.

That any person who shall willfully neglect or refuse to attend and testify or depose, or to produce or permit access to any book, account, record, document, correspondence or paper, as herein provided for, shall be guilty of an offense, and upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

That the commission may appoint and remove such officers, employes and agents; and make such expenditures for rent, printing, telegrams, telephone, law books, books or reference, periodicals, furniture, stationery, office equipment and other supplies and expenses, including salaries, traveling expenses of its members, secretary, officers, employes and agents, and witness fees, as are necessary for the efficient execution of the functions vested in the commission by this act and as may be provided for by congress from time to time, and make such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the efficient administration of this act. All of the expenditures of the commission shall be allowed and paid upon the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor approved by the chairman of the commission. No salary or compensation of any employe shall exceed $7,500 per year.

That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $200,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary to be available until expended for carrying out the provisions of this act. (Approved Sept. 22, 1922.)

NATIONAL DEFENSE ACT AMENDED.

"After the completion of the initial general staff corps eligible list the name of no officer shall be added thereto unless, upon graduation from the general staff school, he is specifically recommended as qualified for general staff duty, and hereafter no officer of the general staff corps, except the chief of staff, shall be assigned as a member of the war department general staff unless he is a graduate of the general staff college or his name is borne on the initial eligible list: Provided, That the name of any national guard or reserve officer who has demonstrated by actual service with the war department general staff during a period of not less than six months, as hereinafter provided for, that he is qualified for general staff duty, may, upon the recommendation of a board consisting of the general officers of the war department general staff, assistants to the chief of staff, be added to said eligible list at any time. The secretary of war shall publish annually the list of officers eligible for general staff duty, and such eligibility shall be noted in the annual army register. If at any time the number of officers available and eligible for detail to the general staff is not sufficient to fill all vacancies therein majors or captains may be detailed as acting general staff officers under such regulations as the president may prescribe: Provided, That in order to insure intelligent co-operation between the general staff and the several noncombatant branches officers of such branches may be detailed as additional members of the general staff corps under such special regulations as to eligibility and redetail as may be prescribed by the president, but not more than two officers from each such branch shall be detailed as members of the war department general staff."

Sec. 2. That section 37 of said act, as contained in section 32 of the national defense act of June 4, 1920, be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 37. Officers' reserve corps: For the purpose of providing a reserve of officers available for military service when needed there shall be organized an officers' reserve corps, consisting of general officers of sections corresponding to the various branches of the regular army and of such additional sections as the president may direct. The grades in each section and the number in each grade shall be as the president may prescribe. Reserve officers shall be appointed and commissioned by the president alone, except general officers, who shall be appointed by and with the advice and consent of the senate. Appointment in every case shall be for a period of five years, but an appointment in force at the outbreak of war or made in time of war shall continue in force until six months after its termination. Any reserve officer may be discharged at any time in the discretion of the president. A reserve officer appointed during the existence of a state of war shall be entitled to discharge within six months after its termination if he makes application therefor. In time of peace a reserve officer must at the time of his appointment be a citizen of the United States or of the Philippine islands, between the ages of 21 and 60 years. Any person who has been an officer of the army at any time between April 6, 1917, and June 30, 1919, or an officer of the regular army at any time may be appointed as a reserve officer in the highest grade which he held in the army or any lower grade. Any person commissioned in the national guard and recognized as a national guard officer by the secretary of war may upon his own application be appointed as a reserve officer in the grade held by him in the national guard. No other person shall in time of peace be originally appointed as a reserve officer of infantry, cavalry, field artillery, coast artillery or air service in a grade above that of second lieutenant. In time of peace appointments in the infantry, cavalry, field artillery, coast artillery and air service shall be limited to former officers of the army, officers of the national guard recognized as such by the secretary of war, graduates of the reserve officers' training corps, as provided in section 47b hereof, warrant officers and enlisted men of the regular army, national guard and enlisted reserve corps and persons who served in the army at some time between April 6, 1917, and Nov. 11, 1918. Promotions and transfers shall be made under such rules as may be prescribed by the president and shall be based so far as practicable upon recommendations made in the established chain of command. So far as practicable reserve officers shall be assigned to units in the locality of their places of residence. Nothing in this act shall operate to deprive a reserve officer of the reserve commission he now holds. Any reserve officer may hold a commission in the national guard without thereby vacating his reserve commission."

Sec. 3. That the second paragraph of section 67 of said act be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"The appropriation provided for in this section shall be apportioned among the several states and territories under just and equitable procedure to be prescribed by the secretary of war and in direct ratio to the number of enlisted men in active service in the national guard existing in such states and territories at the date of apportionment of said appropriation, and to the District of Columbia, under such regulations as the president may prescribe: Provided, That the sum so apportioned among the several states, territories and the District of Columbia shall be available under such rules as may be prescribed by the secretary of war for the actual and necessary expenses incurred by officers and enlisted men of the regular army when traveling on duty in connection with the national guard; for the transportation of supplies furnished to the national guard for the permanent equipment thereof; for office rent and necessary office expenses of officers of the regular army on duty with the national guard; for the expenses of the militia bureau, including clerical services; for expenses of enlisted men of the regular army on duty with the national guard, including an allowance for quarters and subsistence provided in section 11 of the pay readjustment act of June 10, 1922, medicine and medical attendance; and such expenses shall constitute a charge against the whole sum annually appropriated for the support of the national guard and shall be paid therefrom and not from the allotment duly apportioned to any particular state, territory or the District of Columbia; for the promotion of rifle practice, including the acquisition, construction, maintenance and equipment of shooting galleries and suitable target ranges; for the hiring of horses and draft animals for use of mounted troops, batteries and wagons; for forage for the same and for such other incidental expenses in connection with lawfully authorized encampments, maneuvers and field instruction as the secretary of war may deem necessary and for such other expenses pertaining to the national guard as are now or may hereafter be authorized by law."

Sec. 4. That section 81 of said act, as contained in section 44 of the national defense act of June 4, 1920, be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 81. Militia bureau of the war department: The militia division of the war department shall hereafter be known as the militia bureau of the war department. After Jan. 1, 1921, the chief of the militia bureau shall be appointed by the president by and with the advice and consent of the senate, by selection from lists of present and former national guard officers, recommended by the governors of the several states and territories as suitable for such appointment, who hold commissions in the officers' reserve corps and have had ten or more years' commissioned service in the national guard, at least five of which have been in the line and who have attained at least the grade of major. He shall hold office for four years unless sooner removed for cause and shall have the rank, pay and allowances of a major-general of the regular army during his tenure of office, but shall not be entitled to retirement or retired pay. While serving as chief his reserve commission shall continue in force and shall not be terminated except for cause assigned. Until the chief is appointed, as provided in this section, the president may assign an officer of the regular army, not below the grade of colonel, to perform the duties of chief. For duty in the militia bureau and for the instruction of the national guard the president shall assign such number of officers and enlisted men of the regular army as he may deem necessary. He may also assign for duty in the militia bureau three officers who hold or have held commissions in the national guard and who at the time of assignment are reserve officers, and any such officer while so assigned shall receive out of the whole fund appropriated for the support of the national guard the pay and allowances provided in the pay readjustment act of June 10, 1922, for officers of the national guard when authorized by law to receive federal pay. The president may also assign, with their consent, and within the limits of the appropriations previously made for this specific purpose, not exceeding 500 officers of the national guard who hold reserve commissions to duty with the regular army in addition to those attending service schools, and while so assigned they shall receive the pay and allowances authorized in the preceding sentence, to be paid out of the whole fund appropriated for the support of the militia."

Sec. 5. That section 99 of said act be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 99. National guard officers and men at service schools and so forth: Under such regulations as the president may prescribe the secretary of war may, upon the recommendation of the governor of any state or territory or the commanding general of the national guard of the District of Columbia, authorize a limited number of selected officers or enlisted men of the national guard to attend and pursue a regular course of study at any military service school of the United States, except the United States Military academy, or to be attached to an organization of the same arm, corps or department to which such officer or enlisted man shall belong for routine practical instruction at or near an army post during a period of field training or other outdoor exercises; and any such officer shall receive out of any national guard allotment of funds available for the purpose the pay and allowances provided in the pay readjustment act of June 10, 1922, for officers of the national guard when authorized by law to receive federal pay and the travel allowances provided in section 12 thereof, and any such enlisted man shall receive therefrom, except as otherwise provided in section 14 of the pay readjustment act of June 10, 1922, the same pay and allowances, including allowances for quarters, subsistence and travel, to which an enlisted man of the regular army of like grade would be entitled for attending such school, college or practical course of instruction under orders from proper military authority, while in actual attendance at such school, college or practical course of instruction and for the necessary period of travel from and to his home station."

Sec. 6. That section 110 of said act, as amended by section 48 of the national defense act of June 4, 1920, be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 110. "All amounts appropriated for the purpose of this and the last preceding section shall be disbursed and accounted for by the officers and agents of the finance department of the army, and all disbursements under the foregoing provisions of this section shall be made as soon as practicable after the 31st day of March, the 30th day of June, the 30th day of September and the 31st day of December of each year upon pay rolls prepared and authenticated in the manner to be prescribed by the secretary of war: Provided, That stoppages may be made against the compensation payable to any officer or enlisted man hereunder to cover the cost of public property lost or destroyed by and chargeable to such officer or enlisted man.

"Except as otherwise specifically provided herein no money appropriated under the provisions of this or the last preceding section shall be paid to any person not on the active list, nor to any person over 64 years of age, nor to any person who shall fail to qualify as to fitness for miliatry service under such regulations as the secretary of war shall prescribe, nor to any state, territory or district, or officer or enlisted man in the national guard thereof unless and until such state, territory or district provides by law that staff officers, including officers of the finance, inspection, quartermaster and medical departments, hereafter appointed shall have had previous military experience and shall hold their positions until they shall have reached the age of 64 years, unless retired prior to that time by reason of resignation, disability or for cause to be determined by a court-martial legally convened for that purpose, and that vacancies among said officers shall be filled by appointment from the officers of the militia of such state, territory or district." (Approved Sept. 22, 1922.)

RETIREMENT OF EMPLOYES IN CIVIL SERVICE.

The act entitled "An act for the retirement of employes in the classified civil service, and for other purposes," approved May 22, 1920, is hereby amended as follows:

"That any employe 55 years of age or over to whom the act of May 22, 1920, applies, who shall have served for a total period of not less than fifteen years and who, before reaching the retirement age as fixed in section 1 of said act, shall become involuntarily separated from the service, unless removed for cause on charges of misconduct or delinquency preferred against him, shall be granted an annuity certificate in the manner provided in section 7 of said act which will entitle said employe, upon reaching retirement age, to an annuity as provided in section 2 thereof equal to the annuity he would have received upon such separation from the service had he been of full retirement age: Provided, That the deductions made under the provisions of section 8 of said act of May 22, 1920, from such employe's salary, pay or compensation prior to separation from the service shall remain in the 'civil service retirement and disability fund' subject to the provisions of section 11 of said act governing the return of deductions in the case of a deceased annuitant or employe.

"Sec. 2. That any employe coming within the provisions of section 1 of this act shall have the right to apply for an immediate annuity in lieu of deferred annuity at the age of retirement: and, if otherwise entitled, such immediate annuity shall be granted under the following conditions:

"If the employe is eligible for retirement upon reaching the age of 70 years, his immediate annuity is to be found by multiplying the annuity which he would receive were he then 70 years of age by the decimal 0.951945 raised to a power the exponent of which is the number of years his age at such separation from the service is less than seventy years.

For mechanics, city and rural letter carriers and postoffice clerks, who are eligible for retirement at 65 years of age, the immediate annuity is found by deducting 47-900 of the annuity he would receive were he then 65 years of age for each year his age at such separation is less than 65 years.

For railway postal clerks, who are eligible for retirement at 62 years of age, the immediate annuity is to be found by deducting 47-630 of the annuity he would receive were he then 62 years of age for each year his age at separation is less than 62 years.

For the purpose of computing annuities as provided in this section fractional parts of a year in respect to the age of the applicant shall be disregarded.

Sec. 3. That in case such former employe be re-employed by the government in a position affected by the provisions of the act of May 22, 1920, the annuity certificate issued under the provisions of this act shall be canceled and all rights and benefits under this act shall terminate from and after the date of such re-employment.

Sec. 4. That this act shall include former employes coming within the provisions of the act of May 22, 1920, who have been separated from the service subsequent to Aug. 20, 1920, under the conditions defined in section 1 hereof: Provided, That in the case of an employe who has withdrawn from the "civil service retirement and disability fund" his deductions under the provisions of section 11 of the act of May 22, 1920, such employe shall be required to return the amount so withdrawn with interest compounded at the rate of 4 per centum per annum before he shall be entitled to the benefits of this act.

Sec. 5. That any employe otherwise entitled to the benefits of the act of May 22, 1920, who, prior to the passage of this act, has been continued in the service without the approval of the civil service commission as provided in section 6 thereof, or who has been re-employed in the civil service subsequent to retirement, shall be entitled to credit for such subsequent service and to receive salary, pay, or compensation therefor at the regular rates, but shall not be entitled to annuity covering the same time; and this act shall operate as a direction to the commissioner of pensions to remove suspension of annuity in all such cases, and shall be warrant for the proper fiscal officer of the government to make payment or adjustment of salary, pay, or compensation earned by such employe.

Sec. 6. That nothing contained in this act shall modify the provisions of section 5 of the act of May 22, 1920. (Approved Sept. 22, 1922.)

Sec. 13. Dividends declared by a China trade act corporation shall be derived wholly from the surplus profits of its business.

Sec. 14. The registrar may, in order to ascertain if the affairs of a China trade act corporation are conducted contrary to any provision of this act, or any other law, or any treaty of the United States, or the articles of incorporation or by-laws of the corporation, investigate the affairs of the corporation. The registrar, whenever he is satisfied that the affairs of any China trade act corporation are or have been so conducted, may institute in the United States court for China proceedings for the revocation of the certificate of incorporation of the corporation. The court may revoke such certificate if it finds the affairs of such corporation have been so conducted. Pending final decision in the revocation proceedings the court may, at any time, upon application of the registrar or upon its own motion, make such orders in respect to the conduct of the affairs of the corporation as it deems advisable.

Sec. 15. (a) For the efficient administration of the functions vested in the registrar by this act he may require, by subpœna issued by him or under his direction, (1) the attendance of any witness and the production of any book, paper, document or other evidence from any place in China at any designated place of hearing in China, or, if the witness is actually resident or temporarily sojourning outside of China, at any designated place of hearing within fifty miles of the actual residence or place of sojourn of such witness, and (2) the taking of a deposition before any designated person having power to administer oaths. In the case of a deposition the testimony shall be reduced to writing by the person taking the deposition or under his direction, and shall then be subscribed by the deponent. Any witness summoned or whose deposition is taken, under this section, shall be paid the same fees and mileage as are paid witnesses in the courts of the United States.

(b) In the case of failure to comply with any subpœna or in the case of the contumacy of any witness before the registrar, or any individual so authorized by him, the registrar or such individual may invoke the aid of any federal District court. Such court may thereupon order the witness to comply with the requirements of such subpœna and to give evidence touching the matter in question. Any failure to obey such order may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

(c) No person shall be excused from so attending and testifying or deposing, nor from so producing any book, paper, document or other evidence on the ground that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to incriminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture; but no natural person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter or thing as to which, in obedience to a subpœna and under oath, he may so testify, except that no person shall be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying.

(d) For the efficient administration of the functions vested in the registrar by this act, he, or any officer, employe or agent of the United States authorized in writing by him, shall at all reasonable times for the purpose of examination have access to and the right to copy any book, account, record, paper or correspondence relating to the business or affairs of a China trade act corporation. Any person who upon demand refuses the registrar or any duly authorized officer, employe or agent such access or opportunity to copy, or hinders, obstructs or resists him in the exercise of such right, shall be liable to a penalty of not more than $5,000 for each such offense. Such penalty shall be recoverable in a civil suit brought in the name of the United States.

Sec. 16. In case of the voluntary dissolution of a China trade act corporation or revocation of its certificate of incorporation, the directors of the corporation shall be trustees for the creditors and stockholders of the corporation; except that upon application to the United States court for China by any interested party, or upon the motion of any court of competent jurisdiction in any proceeding pending before it, the court may in its discretion appoint as the trustees such persons, other than the directors, as it may determine. The trustees are invested with the powers and shall do all acts necessary to wind up the affairs of the corporation and divide among the stockholders according to their respective interests the property of the corporation remaining after all obligations against it have been settled. For the purposes of this section the trustees may sue and be sued in the name of the corporation and shall be jointly and severally liable to the stockholders and creditors of the corporation to the extent of the property coming into their hands as trustees.

Regulations.

Sec. 17. (a) The secretary is authorized to make such regulations as may be necessary to carry into effect the functions vested in him or in the registrar by this act.

(b) That the secretary is authorized to prescribe and fix the amount of such fees (other than the incorporation fee) to be paid him or the registrar for services rendered by the secretary or the registrar to any person in the administration of the provisions of this act. All fees and penalties paid under this act shall be covered into the treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts.

No stockholder, director, officer, employe or agent of a China trade act corporation shall, if all the authorized capital stock thereof has not been paid in, make, issue or publish any written statement or advertisement in any form stating the amount of the authorized capital stock without also stating as the amount actually paid in, a sum not greater than the amount paid in. Any person violating any provisions of this section shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than ten years or both.

Sec. 19. No individual, partnership or association or corporation not incorporated under this act or under a law of the United States, shall engage in business within China under a name in connection with which the legend "Federal Inc. U. S. A." is used. Any person violating this section shall upon conviction thereof be fined not more than $1,000 for each violation.

That the federal district courts shall have exclusive original jurisdiction of all suits (except as provided by the act entitled "An act creating a United States court for China and prescribing the jurisdiction thereof," approved June 30, 1906, as amended) to which a China trade act corporation or a stockholder, director or officer thereof in his capacity as such is a party. Suit against the corporation may be brought in the United States court for China or in the Supreme court of the District of Columbia or in the federal District court for any district in which the corporation has an agent and is engaged in doing business.

If at the termination of the marital status she is a citizen of the United States she shall retain her citizenship regardless of her residence. If during the continuance of the marital status she resides continuously for two years in a foreign state of which her husband is a citizen or subject, or for five years continuously outside the United States, she shall thereafter be subject to the same presumption as is a naturalized citizen of the United States under the second paragraph of section 2 of the act entitled "An act in reference to the expatriation of citizens and their protection abroad," approved March 2, 1907. AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATIONS AUTHORIZED.

Be it enacted, etc., That persons engaged in the production of agricultural products, as farmers, planters, ranchmen, dairymen, nut or fruit growers, may act together in associations, corporate or otherwise, with or without capital stock, in collectively processing, preparing for market, handling and marketing in interstate and foreign commerce such products of persons so engaged. Such associations may have marketing agencies in common; and such associations and their members may make the necessary contracts and agreements to effect such purposes: Provided, however, That such associations are operated for the mutual benefit of the members thereof as such producers and conform to one or both of the following requirements:

First. That no member of the association is allowed more than one vote because of the amount of stock or membership capital he may own therein, or,

Second. That the association does not pay dividends on stock or membership capital in excess of 8 per centum per annum.

And in any case to the following:

Third. That the association shall not deal in the products of nonmembers to an amount greater in value than such as are handled by it for members.

Sec. 2. That if the secretary of agriculture shall have reason to believe that any such association monopolizes or restrains trade in interstate or foreign commerce to such an extent that the price of any agricultural product is unduly enhanced by reason thereof he shall serve upon such association a complaint stating his charge in that respect, to which complaint shall be attached or contained therein a notice of hearing, specifying a day and place not less than thirty days after the service thereof, requiring the association to show cause why an order should not be made directing it to cease and desist from monopolization or restraint of trade. An association so complained of may at the time and place so fixed show cause why such order should not be entered. The evidence given on such a hearing shall be taken under such rules and regulations as the secretary of agriculture may prescribe, reduced to writing and made a part of the record therein. If upon such hearing the secretary of agriculture shall be of the opinion that such association monopolizes or restrains trade in interstate or foreign commerce to such an extent that the price of any agricultural product is unduly enhanced thereby he shall issue and cause to be served upon the association an order reciting the facts found by him, directing such association to cease and desist from monopolization or restraint of trade. On the request of such association or if such association fails or neglects for thirty days to obey such order the secretary of agriculture shall file in the District court, in the judicial district in which such association has its principal place of business, a certified copy of the order and of all the records in the proceeding, together with a petition asking that the order be enforced, and shall give notice to the attorney-general and to said association of such filing. Such District court shall thereupon have jurisdiction to enter a decree affirming, modifying or setting aside said order, or enter such other decree as the court may deem equitable, and may make rules as to pleadings and proceedings to be had in considering such order. The place of trial may, for cause or by consent of parties, be changed as in other causes.

The facts found by the secretary of agriculture and recited or set forth in said order shall be prima facie avidence of such facts, but either party may adduce additional evidence. The department of justice shall have charge of the enforcement of such order. After the order so filed in such District court, and while pending for review therein the court may issue a temporary writ of injunction forbidding such association from violating such order or any part thereof. The court may, upon conclusion of its hearing, enforce its decree by a permanent injunction or other appropriate remedy. Service of such complaint and of all notices may be made upon such association by service upon any officer or agent thereof engaged in carrying on its business or on any attorney authorized to appear in such proceeding for such association, and such service shall be binding upon such association, the officers and members thereof. (Approved Feb. 18, 1922.)

Such advances, loans, or sales shall be made upon such terms and conditions and subject to such regulations as the secretary of agriculture shall prescribe, including an agreement by each farmer to use the seed thus obtained by him for the production of grain or flaxseed. A first lien on the crop to be produced from seed obtained through a loan, advance, or sale made under this section shall, in the discretion of the secretary of agriculture, be deemed sufficient security therefor. POLLUTION OF NAVIGABLE WATERS.

Whereas, the careless casting of oil refuse into the sea from oil-burning and oil-carrying steamers has become a serious menace to the maritime and the fishing industries of the United States and other countries; and,

Whereas, the fire hazard created by the accumulation of floating oil on the piles of piers and bulkheads into harbor waters is a growing source of alarm; and,

Whereas, most serious is the destruction of ocean fisheries resulting from the constant discharge into territorial waters of the waste products of the oil used for fuel on many steamers in place of coal, which threatens to exterminate the food fish, oysters, clams, crabs and lobsters, which are a vital part of our various national food supplies; and,

Whereas, the dumping of this oil refuse is not only ruining the bathing beaches situate on the territorial waters of the various countries, which during the summer attract hundreds of thousands of people to the seashore resorts, but the depreciation in value of millions of dollars of seashore property is most alarming; and,

Whereas, this pollution takes place on the high seas as well as within territorial waters: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, That the president is requested to call a conference of maritime nations with a view to the adoption of effective means for the prevention of pollution of navigable waters. PROPOSED BONUS FOR WORLD-WAR VETERANS.

Though a bill "to provide adjusted compensation for veterans of the world war" passed both houses at the second session of the 57th congress it failed to become a law. President Harding vetoed the measure, and though the house passed it over his objections the senate failed to do so. The bill was originally passed by the house on March 23, 1922, by a vote of 333 to 70, and by the senate on Aug. 31, the vote standing 47 for and 22 against. Many changes were made in conference, but in substance it was the same as when it first was sent to the senate from the house. As the bill was framed it provided that a cash bonus should be given only to those veterans entitled to less than $50 under the scale of adjusted service compensation providing for $1 per day of home service and $1.25 per day of overseas service, after deducting the $60 which was paid to ex-service men when they were being demobilized. Veterans who would be entitled to a greater sum had the option of four kinds of compensation —an adjusted service certificate, vocational training aid, farm or home aid and land settlement aid. The chief feature of the bill was the adjusted service certificate, which was the equivalent of a twenty-year endowment insurance policy. As a substitute for the cash bonus it provided that veterans might borrow from banks immediately up to 50 per cent of the original face value of the adjusted service certificates. Interest on these loans was limited to the federal reserve bank rediscount rate plus 2 per cent.

The senate finance committee estimated that the cost of the soldiers' bonus would be $3,845,659,481, spread over a period of about twenty years. Those who were opposed to the measure believed that the cost would be considerably greater. The bill as finally passed did not provide for any means of meeting the expenses involved, though it was frequently suggested that the interest on the foreign debts to the United States might be so used. President Harding and the secretary of the treasury, Andrew W. Mellon, were opposed to the measure from the beginning because of the absence of any plan for raising the required revenue. In a letter to Chairman Fordney of the house ways and means committee on Feb. 16 Mr. Harding wrote:

SALES TAX SUGGESTED.

"In accordance with the promise made to yourself and your assistants on the senate and house committees charged with the responsibility of formulating proposed bonus legislation, I have carefully looked into the program of taxation which has been suggested.

"In addition thereto I have made inquiry into the feasibility of issuing either short-time treasury notes or long-time bonds to meet the financial obligations which the proposed legislation will impose. It is not possible to commend to you either of the plans suggested.

"It continues to be my best judgment that any compensation legislation enacted at this time ought to carry with it the provisions for raising the needed revenues, and I find myself unable to suggest any commendable plan other than that of a general sales tax. Such a tax will distribute the cost of rewarding the ex-service men in such a manner that it will be borne by all the people whom they served, and does not commit the government to class imposition of taxes or the resumption of the burdens recently repealed, the maintenance of which can be justified only by a great war emergency.

"It is fully realized how great is the difficulty which confronts the congress in solving this difficult problem. I am aware of the strong sentiment in congress in favor of this adjusted compensation. I have spoken approvingly myself, always with the reservation that the bestowal shall be made when it may be done without such injury to the country as will nullify the benefits to the ex-service men themselves, which the expression of gratitude is designed to bestow.

"It is not an agreeable thing to suggest that action be postponed again, but frankly, I do not find myself favorable to the piecemeal payment plan, which is manifestly designed to avoid embarrassment to the treasury. The long drawn out payments will not afford an effective helpfulness to the service men.

"We have no serious problem in beginning the allotments of public lands and the immediate issue of paid-up insurance. The real difficulty lies in the payment of the cash bonus. Rather than provide that the maximum cash payments shall extend over a period of two and one-half years it would be a vastly better bestowal if we could await the day when we may safely undertake to pay at once in full, so that the award may be turned to real advantage."

VETO MESSAGE.

President Harding stated his objections to the bonus bill more in detail in the following message, which he sent to the house of representatives on Sept. 19:

Herewith is returned, without approval, H. R. 10874, a bill "to provide adjusted compensation for the veterans of the world war, and for other purposes."

With the avowed purpose of the bill to give expression of a nation's gratitude to those who served in its defense in the world war I am in accord, but to its provisions I do not subscribe. The United States never will cease to be grateful; it cannot and never will cease giving expression to that gratitude.

In legislating for what is called adjusted compensation congress fails, first of all, to provide the revenue from which the bestowal is to be paid. Moreover, it establishes the very dangerous precedent of creating a treasury covenant to pay which puts a burden variously estimated between four and five billions upon the American people, not to discharge an obligation which the government always must pay but to bestow a bonus which the soldiers themselves while serving in the world war did not expect.

It is not to be denied that the nation has certain very binding obligations to those of its defenders who made real sacrifices in the world war, and who left the armies injured, disabled or diseased so that they could not resume their places in the normal activities of life. These obligations are being gladly and generously met. Perhaps there are here and there inefficiencies and injustices and some distressing instances of neglect, but they are all unintentional and every energy is being directed to their earliest possible correction. In meeting this obligation there is no complaint about the heavy cost. In the current fiscal year we are expending $510,000,000 on hospitalization and care of sick and wounded, on compensation and vocational training for the disabled and for insurance. The figures do not include the more than $35,000,000 in process of expenditure on hospital construction. The estimates for the year to follow are approximately $470,000,000, and the figures may need to be made larger. Though the peak in hospitalization may have passed, there is a growth in domicilization and the discharge in full of our obligations to the diseased, disabled or dependent who have a right to the government's care, with insurance liability added, will probably reach a total sum in excess of $25,000,000,000.

More than 99,000 veterans are now enrolled in some of the 445 different courses in vocational training. Fifty-four thousand of them are in schools or colleges, more than 38,000 are in industrial establishments, and a few more than 6,000 are being trained in schools operated by the veterans' bureau.

Approximately 19,000 have completed their courses and have employment in all cases where they desire it, and 53,000 have deferred for the present time their acceptance of training. The number eligible under the law may reach close to 400,000, and facilities will continue to be afforded, unmindful of the necessary cost, until every obligation is fulfilled.

Two hundred and seventy-six thousand patients have been hospitalized, more than a quarter of a million discharged, and 25,678 patients are in our hospitals to-day.

Four hundred and sixteen thousand awards of compensation have been made on account of death or disability, and $480,000,000 have been paid to disabled men or their dependent relatives. One hundred and seventy-five thousand disabled ex-service men are now receiving compensation along with medical or hospital care where needed, and a quarter of a million checks go out monthly in distributing the $8,000,000 payment on indisputable obligations.

I recite the figures to remind the congress how generously and how properly it has opened the treasury doors to discharge the obligations of the nation to those to whom it indisputably owes compensation and care. Though undying gratitude is the meed of every one who served, it is not to be said that a material bestowal is an obligation to those who emerged from the great conflict not only unharmed but physically, mentally and spiritually richer for the great experience. If an obligation were to be admitted it would be to charge the adjusted compensation bill with inadequacy and stinginess wholly unbecoming our republic. Such a bestowal, to be worth while, must be generous and without apology. Clearly the bill returned herewith takes cognizance of the inability of the government wisely to bestow, and says, in substance, "We do not have the cash; we do not believe in a tax levy to meet the situation, but here is our note; you may have our credit for half its worth." This is not compensation but rather a pledge by the congress, while the executive branch of the government is left to provide for payments falling due in ever-increasing amounts.

When the bill was under consideration in the house I expressed the conviction that any grant of bonus ought to provide the means of paying it, and I was unable to suggest any plan other than that of a general sales tax. Such a plan was unacceptable to the congress, and the bill has been enacted without even a suggested means of meeting the cost. Indeed, the cost is not definitely known, either for the immediate future or in the ultimate settlement. The treasury estimates, based on what seems the most likely exercise of the options, figures the direct cost at approximately $145,000,000 for 1923, $225,000,000 for 1924, $114,000,000 for 1925, $312,000,000 for 1926, making a total of $795,000,000 for the first four years of its operation and a total cost in excess of $4,000,000,000. No estimate of the large indirect cost ever has been made. The certificate plan sets up no reserve against the ultimate liability. The plan avoids any considerable direct outlay by the government during the earlier years of the bill's proposed operations, but the loans on the certificates would be floated on the credit of the nation. This is borrowing on the nation's credit just as truly as though the loans were made by direct government borrowing, and involves a dangerous abuse of public credit. Moreover, the certificate plan of payment is little less than certified inability of the government to pay, and invites a practice in sacrificial barter which I cannot sanction.

It is worth remembering that the public credit is founded on the popular belief in the defensibility of public expenditure as well as the government's ability to pay. Loans come from every rank in life, and our heavy tax burdens reach, directly or indirectly, every element in our citizenship. To add one-sixth of the total sum of our public debt for a distribution among less than 5,000,000 out of 110,000,000, whether inspired by grateful sentiment or political expediency, would undermine the confidence on which our credit is builded and establish the precedent of distributing public funds whenever the proposal and the numbers affected make it seem politically appealing to do so.

Congress clearly appraised the danger of borrowing directly to finance a bestowal which is without obligation, and manifestly recognized the financial problems with which the nation is confronted. Our maturing promises to pay within the current fiscal year amount to approximately $4,000,000,000, most of which will have to be refunded. Within the next six years more than $10,000,000,000 of debt will mature and will have to be financed. These outstanding and maturing obligations are difficult enough to meet without the complication of added borrowings, every one of which threatens higher interest and delays the adjustment to stable government financing and the diminution of federal taxes to the defensible cost of government.

It is sometimes thoughtlessly urged that it is a simple thing for the rich republic to add four billions to its indebtedness. This impression comes from the readiness of the public response to the government's appeal for funds amid the stress of war. It is to be remembered that in the war everybody was ready to give his all. Let us not recall the comparatively few exceptions. Citizens of every degree of competence loaned and sacrificed, precisely in the same spirit that our armed forces went out for service. The war spirit impelled. To a war necessity there was but one answer, but a peace bestowal on the ex-service men, as though the supreme offering could be paid for with cash, is a perversion of public funds, a reversal of the policy which exalted patriotic service in the past, and suggests that future defense is to be inspired by compensation rather than consciousness of duty to flag and country.

The pressing problem of the government is that of diminishing our burdens rather than adding thereto. It is the problem of the world. War inflations and war expenditures have unbalanced budgets and added to indebtedness until the whole world is staggering under the load. We have been driving in every direction to curtail our expenditures and establish economies without impairing the essentials of governmental activities. It has been a difficult and unpopular task. It is vastly more applauded to expend than to deny. After nearly a year and a quarter of insistence and persuasion, with a concerted drive to reduce government expenditure in every quarter possible, it would wipe out everything thus far accomplished to add now this proposed burden, and it would rend the commitment to economy and saving so essential to our future welfare.

The financial problems of the government are too little heeded until we are face to face with a great emergency. The diminishing income of the government, due to the receding tides of business and attending incomes, has been overlooked momentarily, but cannot be long ignored. The latest budget figures for the current fiscal year show an estimated deficit of more than $650,000,000 and a further deficit for the year succeeding, even after counting upon all interest collections on foreign indebtedness which the government is likely to receive. To add to our pledges to pay, except as necessity compels, must seem no less than governmental folly. Inevitably it means increased taxation, which congress was unwilling to levy for the purposes of this bill, and will turn us from the course toward economy so essential to promote the activities which contribute to common welfare.

It is to be remembered that the United States played no self-seeking part in the world war, and pursued an unselfish policy after the cause was won. We demanded no reparations for the cost involved, no payments out of which obligations to our soldiers could be met. I have not magnified the willing outlay in behalf of those to whom we have a sacred obligation. It is essential to remember that a more than $4,000,000,000 pledge to the able-bodied ex-service men now will not diminish the later obligation which will have to be met when the younger veterans of to-day shall contribute to the rolls of the aged, indigent and dependent. It is as inevitable as that the years will pass that pension provision for world-war veterans will be made, as it has been made for those who served in previous wars. It will cost more billions than I venture to suggest. There will be justification when the need is apparent, and a rational financial policy to-day is necessary to make the nation ready for the expenditure which is certain to be required in the coming years. The contemplation of such a policy is in accord with the established practice of the nation, and puts the service men of the world war on the same plane as the millions of men who fought the previous battles of the republic.

I confess a regret that I must sound a note of disappointment to the many ex-service men who have the impression that it is as simple a matter for the government to bestow billions in peace as it was to expend billions in war. I regret to stand between them and the pitiably small compensation proposed. I dislike to be out of accord with the majority of congress which has voted the bestowal. The simple truth is that this bill proposes a government obligation of more than four billions without a provision of funds for the extraordinary expenditure, which the executive branch of the government must finance in the face of difficult financial problems and the complete defeat of our commitment to effect economies. I would rather appeal, therefore, to the candid reflections of congress and the country, and to the ex-service men in particular, as to the course better suited to further the welfare of our country. These ex-soldiers who served so gallantly in war and who are to be so conspicuous in the progress of the republic in the half century before us must know that nations can only survive where taxation is restrained from the limits of oppression, where the public treasury is locked against class legislation, but ever open to public necessity and prepared to meet all essential obligations. Such a policy makes a better country for which to fight, or to have fought, and affords a surer abiding place in which to live and attain. WARREN G. HARDING.

The White House, Sept. 19, 1922.

Passes House; Fails in Senate.

The bill was brought up in the house on Sept. 20 and without debate was passed, the objections of the president notwithstanding, by a vote of yeas 258, nays 54, not voting 119. On party lines the division was: To sustain the veto, republicans 35 and democrats 19; to override the veto, republicans 188, democrats 69 and socialist 1.

The senate on the same day voted 44 to 28 in favor of passing the bill over the veto, but the affirmative vote fell four short of the required two-thirds and so the bill failed to become a law. Twenty-seven republicans and seventeen democrats voted to override the veto, while twenty-one republicans and seven democrats voted to sustain it.

MANY SMALL STATES IN SOVIET RUSSIA.

[By F. A. Mackenzie, special correspondent of The Chicago Daily News.]

In theory Russia consists of a group of independent republics and autonomous states and districts, federated by mutual choice, each state retaining the right to secede if it desires. In actual practice, however, Moscow is supreme. The first group around central Russia includes the independent republics Azerbaidjan, Ukrainia, Georgia, Armenia, White Russia, Chiva and Buchara. Chiva and Buchara, being almost entirely agricultural, enjoy a special degree of independence. They are called "special agreement federated states."

The agreements with the remaining states, while differing in minor details, are all simple. They consist, as a rule, of six or seven clauses, providing for a unification of the military, financial and economic systems of the two countries. The unification of military systems does not prevent these republics from having their own armies, but the supreme command is consolidated.

In foreign affairs the states are nominally independent, but in practice they accept the direction of Russia. They maintain their own representatives in the foreign office in Moscow. They all follow the Russian monetary system and taxation imposed by Moscow is obligatory for the whole federation, each republic, however, having power to impose further taxation within its borders for local purposes.

The Far Eastern Republic, which extends from near the east of Lake Baikal to the Pacific, stands by itself. It was created as a buffer state between Russia and Japan, with such modifications of communist rule as would deprive Japan of an excuse for seizing eastern Siberia. It is administered by a constitutional assembly, and not by soviets. It is not communist, and encourages foreign enterprise to a much greater degree than does Russia. It has not adopted and does not use soviet currency. It sends its own missions, when necessary, to foreign powers. At the same time it works in closest co-operation with Moscow and largely under its direction.

The second group of states is the autonomous republics Bashkiria, Turkestan, Tartar, Kirghiz, Crimea, Gorskaya, Jatusky and Dagestan. In foreign affairs these are under the direction of Moscow. For military affairs they are under the nearest military provincial commissar. Their foreign trade is entirely in the hands of the central government.

The third group—the autonomous states and provinces—consists of localities inhabited by non-Russian tribes and nationalities, including Utsk, Mariinsk, Chuovashi, Kalmuk, Buriat-Mongol, Kabardino, Karachay, the Germans of the Volga, Zirian and Karelia. The policy here has been to give the tribes and non-Russian nationalities the utmost freedom in the observance of their customs and the use of their own languages. No attempt is made to force Russian speech on them or to make Russian obligatory in courts or schools.

Conference on Limitation of Armament.

The conference in Washington, D. C., on the question of limitation of armament, called by President Harding, began its labors Nov. 12, 1921, and concluded them on Feb. 6, 1922. Agreement was reached on some of the more important subjects mentioned in the tentative agenda submitted to the invited powers, including limitation of naval armament and rules for the control of new agencies of warfare. No action was taken as to the reduction of land armaments. An understanding was also reached on various Pacific and far eastern questions, particularly with reference to the mandated islands and China. All these agreements or treaties are given in full, beginning on page 372, and in connection with them will be found the names of the delegates who took part in framing and signing them.

REPORT OF AMERICAN DELEGATION.

The story of the conference is told lucidly in a report submitted by the American delegation to President Harding on Feb. 9, 1922. It was signed by Charles E. Hughes, Henry Cabot Lodge, Oscar W. Underwood and Elihu Root. This report, in part, is as follows:

"On July 8, 1921, by direction of the president, the department of state addressed an informal inquiry to the group of powers known as the principal allied and associated powers—that is, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan—to ascertain whether it would be agreeable to them to take part in a conference on the subject of limitation of armament, to be held in Washington at a time to be mutually agreed upon. In making this inquiry it was stated to be manifest that the question of limitation of armament had a close relation to Pacific and far eastern problems, and the president suggested that the powers especially interested in these problems should undertake, in connection with the conference, the consideration of all matters bearing upon their solution, with a view to reaching a common understanding with respect to principles and policies in the far east. The suggestion having been favorably received, formal invitations were issued to the powers above mentioned to participate in a conference on limitation of armament to be held in Washington on Nov. 11, 1921, and an invitation was also extended to Belgium, China, the Netherlands and Portugal to participate in the discussion of Pacific and far eastern questions in connection with the conference.

"These invitations were formally accepted and the first session of the conference was held in Continental hall in the city of Washington on the twelfth day of November, 1921, the time of the first session being postponed in order to permit the delegates to attend the ceremonies upon the burial of the unknown soldier at Arlington cemetery on Nov. 11."

After naming the members of the various delegations and their technical staffs and quoting President Harding's opening address the report continues:

"Following the address of the president the conference, on motion of Mr. Balfour, elected the secretary of state of the United States as chairman of the conference and of each committee of which he should be a member. The Hon. John W. Garrett of Baltimore, Md., was elected secretary-general. A committee on program and procedure was appointed, consisting of the heads of the delegations or such representatives as each power might select for the purpose.

"As the conference was to concern itself with two groups of questions which, though related, required separate investigation and discussion—that is, (1) the question of limitation of armament and (2) Pacific and far eastern questions—it became necessary to provide a course of procedure which would facilitate the work of the conference in both fields. In the public discussions which preceded the conference there were apparently two competing views: That the consideration of armament should await the result of the discussion of the far eastern questions and another that the latter discussion should be postponed until an agreement for the limitation of armament had been reached. It was not thought necessary to adopt either of these extreme views. It was proposed that the conference should proceed at once to consider the question of the limitation of armament, but this was not deemed to require the postponement of the examination of far eastern questions. In order to serve both purposes two committees were set up, (1) consisting of the plenipotentiary delegates of the five powers—the United States of America, the British empire, France, Italy and Japan—to deal with questions of armament, and (2) consisting of the delegates of the nine powers—that is, the United States of America, Belgium, the British empire, China, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal—to deal with Pacific and far eastern questions.

"The work of the two committees proceeded along parallel lines without interference with each other and the conclusions reached in each were reported, from time to time, to the conference in plenary session for its adoption. Each committee provided itself with the necessary subcommittees dealing with technical questions and drafting, so that in the most expeditious manner all questions before the conference were thoroughly considered.

"The conference held seven plenary or public sessions, at the last of which, on Feb. 6, 1922, the treaties approved by the conference were signed.

"While the sessions of the committees were not public, a complete record was kept of all their proceedings, and at the close of each session of the committees on armament and on Pacific and far eastern questions, respectively, a communique was made to the press, which, generally, stated all that had taken place in the committee and in all cases set forth whatever matters of importance had received attention. Thus full publicity was given to the proceedings of the conference."

The report gives a statement of the agenda submitted to the invited powers and adds that while this statement was not formally adopted by the conference the proceedings closely followed the lines thus indicated.

"The following treaties," continues the report, "were approved by the conference and signed at the closing session on Feb. 6, 1922:

"(1) A treaty between the United States of America, the British empire, France, Italy and Japan limiting naval armament.

"(2) A treaty between the same powers in relation to the use of submarines and noxious gases in warfare.

"(3) A treaty between all nine powers relating to principles and policies to be followed in matters concerning China.

"(4) A treaty between the nine powers relating to Chinese customs tariff.

"The following treaties were notified to the conference:

"(1) A treaty between the United States of America, the British empire, France and Japan, signed Dec. 13, 1921, relating to their insular possessions and insular dominions in the Pacific ocean.

"(2) A treaty between the same powers, supplementary to the above, signed Feb. 6, 1922.

"(3) A treaty between China and Japan, signed Feb. 4, 1922, providing for the restoration to China of rights and interests in the province of Shantung.

"In addition, while the conference was in session the government of the United States and the government of Japan reached an agreement in relation to the island of Yap and the mandated islands in the Pacific ocean north of the equator, which is to be embodied in a formal convention."

[The Yap treaty was signed Feb. 11 and ratified March 1, 1922, by the United States senate. It will be found in full in this volume.]

Limitation of Armament.

The report first takes up the limitation of armament negotiations. It says:

"It was recognized at the outset that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to provide at this conference for the limitation of land forces. So far as the army of the United States was concerned there was no question presented. It has always been the policy of the United States to have the regular military establishment upon the smallest possible basis. At the time of the armistice there were in the field and in training in the American army upward of 4,000,000 men. At once, upon the signing of the armistice, demobilization began and it was practically completed in the course of the following year, and to-day our regular establishment numbers less than 160,000 men. The British government has also reduced its army to a minimum."

The report quotes parts of the speeches made by M. Briand for France, Senator Schanzer for Italy and Baron Kato for Japan in opposition to any action being taken by the conference with respect to land armaments and adds:

"Further consideration made it quite clear that no agreement for the limitation of land forces could be had at this time.

"A different condition existed in relation to naval armament. It was believed by the government of the United States that an agreement providing for a sweeping reduction and for an effective limitation for the future was entirely feasible. It was pointed out, after considering the failure of earlier endeavors for limitation of armaments, that the powers could no longer content themselves with investigations, with reports, with the circumlocution of inquiry; that the time had come and the conference had been called, not for general resolutions or mutual advice, but for action. The following general considerations were deemed to be pertinent:

"'The first is that the core of the difficulty is to be found in the competition in naval programs and that in order appropriately to limit naval armament competition in its production must be abandoned. Competition will not be remedied by resolves with respect to the method of its continuance. One program inevitably leads to another, and if competition continues its regulation is impracticable. There is only one adequate way out, and that is to end it now.

"'It is apparent that this cannot be accomplished without serious sacrifices. Enormous sums have been expended upon ships under construction and building programs which are now under way cannot be given up without heavy loss. Yet if the present construction of capital ships goes forward other ships will inevitably be built to rival them, and this will lead to still others. Thus the race will continue so long as ability to continue lasts. The efforts to escape sacrifices are futile. We must face them or yield our purpose.

"'It is also clear that no one of the naval powers should be expected to make the sacrifice alone. The only hope of limitation of naval armament is by agreement among the nations concerned, and this agreement should be entirely fair and reasonable in the extent of the sacrifices required of each of the powers. In considering the basis of such agreement and the commensurate sacrifices to be required it is necessary to have regard to the existing naval strength of the great naval powers, including the extent of construction already effected in the case of ships in process. This follows from the fact that one nation is as free to compete as another and each may find grounds for its action. What one may do another may demand the opportunity to rival, and we remain in the thrall of competitive effort.'

"But it was necessary to go beyond general observations. It was apparent that, in this field of opportunity, it was essential that the American government, as the convener of the conference, should be prepared with a definite and practicable plan. After the most careful consideration and detailed examination of the problem, with the aid of the experts of the American navy, a plan was prepared and, under instructions of the president, was presented to the conference by the American delegation.

"It was clear at the outset, and the negotiations during the conference put it beyond doubt, that no agreement for the limitation of naval armament could be effected which did not embrace the navies of France and Italy. At the same time it was recognized that neither of these nations, in view of the extraordinary conditions due to the world war affecting their existing naval strength, could be expected to make the sacrifices which necessarily would lie at the basis of an agreement for limitation. These sacrifices could, however, be reasonably expected of the United States, the British empire and Japan, and these were the powers then actually engaged in the competitive building of warships. The American plan, therefore, temporarily postponed the consideration of the navies of France and Italy and definitely proposed a program of limitation for the United States, the British empire and Japan. The proposal was one of renunciation of building programs, of scrapping of existing ships and of establishing an agreed ratio of naval strength. It was a proposal of sacrifices, and the American government, in making the proposal, at once stated the sacrifices which it was ready to make and upon the basis of which alone it asked commensurate sacrifices from others.

The American Plan.

"The American plan rested upon the application of these four general principles:

"'(1) That all capital shipbuilding programs, either actual or projected, should be abandoned.

"'(2) That further reduction should be made through the scrapping of certain of the older ships.

"'(3) That in general regard should be had to the existing naval strength of the powers concerned.

"'(4) That the capital-ship tonnage should be used as the measurement of strength of navies and a proportionate allowance of auxiliary combatant craft prescribed.'

"More specifically, the plan in relation to capital ships was as follows:

"'The United States: The United States is now completing its program of 1916 calling for ten new battle ships and six battle cruisers. One battle ship has been completed. The others are in various stages of construction; in some cases from 60 to 80 per cent of the construction has been done. On these fifteen capital ships now being built over $330,000,000 have been spent. Still the United States is willing, in the interest of an immediate limitation of naval armaments, to scrap all these ships.

"'The United States proposes, if this plan is accepted:

"'(1) To scrap all capital ships now under construction. This includes six battle cruisers and seven battle ships on the ways and in the course of building and two battle ships launched.

"'(2) The total number of new capital ships thus to be scrapped is fifteen. The total tonnage of the new capital ships when completed would be 618,000 tons.

"'(3) To scrap all of the older battle ships up to, but not including, the Delaware and North Dakota. The number of these old battle ships to be scrapped is fifteen. Their total tonnage is 227,740.

"'Thus the number of capital ships to be scrapped by the United States if this plan is accepted is thirty, with an aggregate tonnage (including that of ships in construction, if completed) of 845,740.

"'Great Britain: The plan contemplates that Great Britain and Japan shall take action which is fairly commensurate with this action on the part of the United States.

"'It is proposed that Great Britain—

"'(1) Shall stop further construction of the four new Hoods, the new capital ships not laid down but upon which money has been spent. The four ships, if completed, would have a tonnage displacement of 172,000.

"'(2) Shall, in addition, scrap her dreadnoughts, second-line battle ships and first-line battle ships up to, but not including, the King George V. class.

"'These, with certain predreadnoughts which it is understood have already been scrapped, would amount to nineteen capital ships and a tonnage reduction of 411,375.

"'The total tonnage of ships thus to be scrapped by Great Britain (including the tonnage of the four Hoods, if completed) would be 583,375.

"'Japan: It is proposed that Japan—

"'(1) Shall abandon her program of ships not yet laid down—viz., the K-11, Owari No. 7 and No. 8 battle ships and Nos. 5, 6, 7 and 8 battle cruisers.

"'It should be observed that this does not involve the stopping of construction, as the construction of none of the ships has been begun.

"'(2) Shall scrap three capital ships (the Mutsu, launched; the Tosa, the Kogo, in course of building) and four battle cruisers (the Amagi and Akagi, in course of building, and the Atoga and Takao, not yet laid down, but for which certain material has been assembled).

"'The total number of new capital ships to be scrapped under this paragraph is seven. The total tonnage of these new capital ships when completed would be 289,100.

"'(3) Shall scrap all predreadnoughts and battle ships of the second line. This would include the scrapping of all ships up to, but not including, the Settsu; that is, the scrapping of ten old ships with a total tonnage of 159,823.

"'The total reduction of tonnage on vessels existing, laid down or for which material has been assembled (taking the tonnage of the ships when completed) would be 448,928 tons.

"'Thus, under this plan there would be immediately destroyed of the navies of the three powers sixty-six capital fighting ships built and building, with a total tonnage of 1,878,043.

"'It is proposed that it should be agreed by the United States, Great Britain and Japan that their navies, with respect to capital ships, within three months after the making of the agreement shall consist of certain ships designated in the proposal, and number for the United States, eighteen; for Great Britain, twenty-two; for Japan, ten.

"'The tonnage of these ships would be as follows: Of the United States, 500,650; of Great Britain, 604,450; of Japan, 299,700. In reaching this result, the age factor in the case of the respective navies has received appropriate consideration.

"'Replacement:

"'With respect to replacement, the United States proposes:

"'(1) That it be agreed that the first replacement tonnage shall not be laid down until ten years from the date of the agreement.

"'(2) That replacements be limited by an agreed maximum of capital-ship tonnage as follows:

"'For the United States, 500,000 tons.

"'For Great Britain, 500,000 tons.

"'For Japan, 300,000 tons.

"'(3) That, subject to the ten-year limitation above fixed, the maximum standard capital ships may be replaced when they are twenty years old by new capital ships' construction.

"'(4) That no capital ship shall be built in replacement with a tonnage displacement of more than 35,000 tons.'

"This proposal was presented on behalf of the American delegation at the first session of the conference, and at once evoked from the other delegates expressions of assent in principle. The question of a definite agreement, however, presented many difficulties requiring protracted negotiations, in which a conclusion was not finally reached until Jan. 31, 1922, when the draft of the proposed naval treaty was adopted in the committee on limitation of armament.

Capital-Ship Ratio.

"It was obvious that no agreement for limitation was possible if the three powers were not content to take as a basis their actual existing naval strength. General considerations of national need, aspirations and expectations, policy and program, could be brought forward by each power in justification of some hypothetical relation of naval strength, with no result but profitless and interminable discussion. The solution was to take what the powers actually had, as it was manifest that neither could better its relative position unless it won in the race which it was the object of the conference to end. It was impossible to terminate competition in naval armament if the powers were to condition their agreement upon the advantages they hoped to gain in the competition itself. Accordingly, when the argument was presented by Japan that a better ratio—that is, one more favorable to Japan than that assigned by the American plan—should be adopted and emphasis was laid upon the asserted needs of Japan, the answer was made that if Japan was entitled to a better ratio upon the basis of actual existing naval strength, it should be, but otherwise it could not be, accepted. The American plan fixed the ratio between the United States, the British empire and Japan as 5-5-3 or 10-10-6; Great Britain at once agreed, but the Japanese government desired a ratio of 10-10-7.

"There was a general agreement that the American rule for determining existing naval strength was correct—that is, that it should be determined according to capital-ship tonnage. There was, however, a further question and that was as to what should be embraced for that purpose within the capital-ship tonnage of each nation. It was the position of the American government that ships in course of construction should be counted to the extent to which construction had already progressed at the time of the convening of the conference. The latter position was strongly contested by Japan upon the ground that a ship was not a ship unless it was completed and ready to fight. It was pointed out, however, that in case of an emergency a warship which was 90 per cent completed was to that extent ready and that only the remaining 10 per cent of construction was necessary; and, similarly, in the case of a ship 70 per cent or 50 per cent or other per cent completed the work done was so much of naval strength in hand. It was also pointed out that it did not follow that because a ship had been completed it was ready for action; it might be out of repair; its engines, boilers, apparatus, armament, might need replacement. It was idle to attempt to determine naval strength on supposed readiness for action at a given day. Objections could be made to any standard of measurement, but the most practicable standard was to take the existing capital-ship tonnage, including the percentage of construction already effected in the case of ships which were being built. It was added that the American government, while ready to sacrifice, in accordance with the terms of its proposal, its battle ships and battle cruisers in course of construction, was not willing to ignore the percentage of naval strength represented by over $300,000,000 expended on the unfinished ships.

"The American government submitted to the British and Japanese naval experts its records with respect to the extent of the work which had been done on the ships under construction, and the negotiations resulted in an acceptance by both Great Britain and Japan of the ratio which the American government had proposed.

Fortifications in the Pacific.

"Before assenting to this ratio the Japanese government desired assurances with regard to the increase of fortifications and naval bases in the Pacific ocean. It was insisted that while the capital-ship ratio proposed by the American government might be acceptable under the existing conditions it could not be regarded as acceptable by the Japanese government if the government of the United States should fortify or establish additional naval bases in the Pacific ocean.

"The American government took the position that it could not entertain any question as to the fortifications of its own coasts or of the Hawaiian islands, with respect to which it must remain entirely unrestricted. Despite the fact that the American government did not entertain any aggressive purpose whatever it was recognized that the fortification of other insular possessions in the Pacific might be regarded from the Japanese standpoint as creating a new naval situation and as constituting a menace to Japan, and hence the American delegation expressed itself as willing to maintain the status quo as to fortifications and naval bases in its insular possessions in the Pacific, except as above stated, if Japan and the British empire would do the like. It was recognized that no limitation should be made with respect to the main islands of Japan or Australia and New Zealand, with their adjacent islands, any more than with respect to the insular possessions adjacent to the coast of the United States, including Alaska and the Panama Canal Zone or the Hawaiian islands. The case of the Aleutian islands, stretching out toward Japan, was a special one and had its counterpart in that of the Kurile islands belonging to Japan and reaching out to the northeast toward the Aleutians. It was finally agreed that the status quo should be maintained as to both of these groups.

"After prolonged negotiations the three powers—the United States, the British empire and Japan—made an agreement that the status quo at the signing of the naval treaty with regard to fortifications and naval bases should be maintained in their respective territories and possessions, which were specified as follows (naval treaty, article 19):

"'(1) The insular possessions which the United States now holds or may hereafter acquire in the Pacific ocean, except (a) those adjacent to the coast of the United States, Alaska and the Panama Canal Zone, not including the Aleutian islands and (b) the Hawaiian islands;

"'(2) Hongkong and the insular possessions which the British empire now holds or may hereafter acquire in the Pacific ocean east of the meridian of 110 degrees east longitude, except (a) those adjacent to the coast of Canada, (b) the commonwealth of Australia and its territories and (c) New Zealand;

"'(3) The following insular territories and possessions of Japan in the Pacific ocean, to wit: The Kurile islands, the Bonin islands, Amami-Oshima, the Loochoo islands, Formosa and the Pescadores, and any insular territories or possessions in the Pacific ocean which Japan may hereafter acquire.'

"The same article of the treaty also contains the following provision with respect to the meaning of the maintenance of the status quo:

"'The maintenance of the status quo under the foregoing provisions implies that no new fortifications or naval bases shall be established in the territories and possessions specified; that no measures shall be taken to increase the existing naval facilities for the repair and maintenance of naval forces, and that no increase shall be made in the coast defenses of the territories and possessions above specified. This restriction, however, does not preclude such repair and replacement of worn-out weapons and equipment as is customary in naval and military establishments in time of peace.'

The Case of the Mutsu.

"Among the ships which the American government proposed should be scrapped by Japan was the Mutsu. It was the understanding of the American government that this ship was still incomplete at the time of the meeting of the conference, although it was nearly completed—that is, to the extent of about 98 per cent. It was proposed to be scrapped as all other ships which were in course of construction; thus the government of the United States included among its own ships which were to be scrapped two ships which were about 90 per cent completed.

"The Japanese delegation, however, insisted that the Mustu had been actually finished, was commissioned and fully manned before the conference met. Apart from this point this latest accession to the Japanese navy was the especial pride of the Japanese people. It was their finest war vessel and, it is understood, had been built, in part at least, through popular subscriptions and in circumstances evoking patriotic pride in the highest degree.

"It was deemed by the Japanese delegation to be quite impossible to induce the consent of their government to any proposal of limitation which would involve the scrapping of the Mutsu. Its retention, however, created serious difficulties because of the disproportion of advantage that would accrue to Japan through the possession of such a ship. Japan offered to scrap the Settsu, one of the older ships that was to have been retained by Japan under the American plan, and also recognized that the gain to Japan through the Mutsu should be offset by the completion on the part of the United States of two of her battle ships under construction and by the construction on the part of Great Britain of two new ships.

"It was accordingly agreed that the government of the United States should finish two ships of the West Virginia class that were under construction and on their completion should scrap the North Dakota and the Delaware, which under the original plan were to have been retained. Great Britain, on her part, was to scrap four of the older ships which would otherwise have been retained. In this way the balance of the three navies was kept. Nor was there any serious change in the final agreement establishing the maximum limits of the replacement tonnage. The original American plan had called for the following:

"United States, 500,000 tons;
"British empire, 500,000 tons;
"Japan, 300,000 tons.
"The plan as modified became:
"United States, 525,000 tons;
"Great Britain, 525,000 tons;
"Japan, 315,000 tons.
"Thus maintaining the ratio of 5-5-3.

"An important concession was made by Great Britain with respect to the two new ships which she was permitted to build. Great Britain, as stated in the American proposal, had already planned four new Hoods. These ships had been designed and considerable time would have been saved in proceeding to build the two new ships according to the existing plans, but the new ships were designed greatly to exceed in tonnage any existing ship; their tonnage displacement, it is understood, was to be about 49,000 tons. Great Britain agreed not only to abandon her program for four new Hoods, but in building the two new ships that they should not exceed 35,000 tons standard displacement, respectively.

"Thus, with respect to capital ships, the United States, the British empire and Japan were able to reach an agreement, but this was tentative and depended upon a suitable agreement being reached with France and Italy.

France and Italy.

"The scheme of reduction accepted by the United States, Great Britain and Japan involved the scrapping of capital ships to the extent of approximately 40 per cent of the existing strength. It was recognized that no such reduction could be asked of either France or Italy and that the case of their navies required special consideration.

"France had seven dreadnoughts with a tonnage of 164,500 tons, and three predreadnoughts, making a total of about 221,000 tons. In the case of the United States, Great Britain and Japan it was provided that their predreadnoughts should be scrapped without any provision for replacement, and there was to be in addition a reduction of about 40 per cent of the naval strength represented by dreadnoughts and superdreadnoughts. Reducing in the same proportion as the United States has reduced, France's tonnage of capital ships would be fixed at 102,000 tons, or, if the predreadnoughts of France were taken into calculation on her side, although omitted on the side of the United States, the total tonnage of France's capital ships being taken at 221,000 tons, a reduction on the same basis would leave France with only 136,000 tons. This was deemed to be impracticable. It was thought entirely fair, however, that France, in the replacement schedule, should be allowed a maximum tonnage equivalent to the existing tonnage of her seven dreadnoughts with a slight increase—that is, that the maximum limit of capital ships, for the purpose of replacement, should be fixed at 175,000 tons.

"Italy sought parity with France, and this principle having been accepted in the course of the discussion, it was likewise proposed that Italy should be allowed 175,000 tons of capital ships in replacement. The present tonnage of Italy is about 182,000 tons. The proposed maximum limit of 175,000 tons was at once accepted by Italy.
